The man who hopes to achieve success in any calling needs to trim his sails to catch every favorable breeze. Failure to take advantage of a passing opportunity at a critical moment has been the cause of many failures in life. Many on the other hand have achieved success because they were equal to the task of coping with the emergency which arose at a critical period in their lives. An incident that came under our own observation illustrates this. A boy without either parents or education was employed by a physician as stable-boy. With the surplus coppers that fell in his way he bought candles, and by the light of these he would at night, while either unemployed or waiting for the return of his master, pour over the medical works in the library. This was unknown to anyone. One day a man was brought to the surgery with a broken leg. The doctor was absent and would be for some time, and as there were no other physicians in the neighborhood the outlook for the injured man was not bright. In this emergency the stable-boy stepped forward. He had read a good deal on fractures, and, while he had had no practical experience, he undertook to set the limb. This he did, and with success. So much so in fact that his master could scarcely credit it. Instead of stable boy he became a student with his master and ultimately a skilled and popular physician. He made use of his opportunities. And so must every clerk or merchant who hopes to achieve success. Every opportunity must be grasped of learning something that will make them better acquainted with the particular trades in which they may be engaged, of cultivating the acquaintance and good will of their customers and of husbanding their resources—the one for the favorable opportunity that may arise for him to start for himself and the other for the opportunity of extending his business or of reaping the advantages that sometimes fall in the way of the man who has a few surplus dollars at hand. This is one of the prices that has to be paid for success, and it is not such an arbitrary price after all.

During the course of an address delivered sometime ago before the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association, Mr. R. A. Donald ventured the opinion that the driver of the delivery waggon might be utilized with advantage as a solicitor of orders. The venture was well made, and it is worthy of consideration by the trade. A good, bright driver can do much in the way of increasing business. He is brought into contact with the housekeepers, and by keeping himself well-informed as to the goods in stock can secure a good many orders that probably his firm would not otherwise get. For instance, his employer may have a new line of this or a new line of that article, a fresh supply of eggs or a choice lot of butter that can be recommended, or a hundred and one things that only need to be mentioned to be sold. The pursuance of this course would also tend to the cultivation of family trade, something every grocer desires more or less to possess. Customers like attention, and one of the ways to cater to this peculiarity is by the means suggested. All drivers may not be qualified to act also as salesmen, but each could be induced to do his best, and where there is one that could not there is another that could. Let merchants pay adequate salaries and they will soon get drivers of the desired stamp. The man who gives labor its just recompense usually has good drivers as well as good clerks, for when he does get a good man he is likely to keep him. The fewer the changes the better. That is conceded by probably everyone. The driver-salesman needs to be clean, tidy and respectably dressed, but, while uncleanliness is excusable under no condition, a driver or anyone else cannot be expected to dress well when the renumeration is inadequate.

The great National Starch Co. of the United States is losing much of its glutinous properties. At one time it was in the starch world what the Standard Oil Co. is in the oil, the National Lead Co. is in the lead and the Whiskey Trust in the "spiritual" world—the great and mighty potentate. Its loss of power is due to the increasing strength of independent factories, the advent of each one being as it were like so much more dilutent to the agreement that held together its component parts. The common stock of the trust comprises about 4½ millions of the 12 millions of the capitalization, and has never paid but one per cent. dividend. Then there is a second preferred stock of $2,000,000 which is supposed to bear 12 per cent., and a like amount of first preferred stock bearing 8 per cent. interest. In addition the company has issued bonds bearing interest at the rate of 6 per cent. Recently it passed dividends on the preferred stock, giving as an explanation that the money had not been earned to pay it. Under such conditions it is not surprising that its stock should evince so much weakness on the exchange market.

President Cleveland has after all decided to call Congress together earlier than he had at first intended. It will now meet Aug. 7. After the collapse of the free silver policy of India the newspapers that are classed as his organs stated that the President had decided to remain by his original purpose. Even the day before the proclamation some of them made an announcement to that effect. But the excitement in the financial centres and the public clamor for a still earlier session evidently induced him to change his mind and call Congress together a month earlier than he originally decreed. Speculation is now rife as to results; and while there is a well-settled conviction that the Sherman law will be repealed there is some doubt whether it can be accomplished unconditionally. There is little doubt about the House. The anxiety is in regard to the Senate. Radical silver men proclaim that while the Sherman act has proved ruinous in its effects it cannot be repealed without a compromise which will give silver a better recognition. The repeal of the Sherman act they say will totally demonetize silver, and they declare it their policy to prevent repeal unless a substitute is offered.

WHAT MAKES A GOOD CLERK.

Clerks need to be live, energetic, obliging and original. At no time in the history of business was this more imperative than to-day. And no matter how well qualified a merchant himself may be he has little chance of success if his staff of clerks are not of the desired stamp. Here one meets a clerk who is little better than a machine. He shows the customer just what he wants to see and just what he asks for, nothing more and nothing less. New goods his employer may have in stock, but he apparently knows nothing about them, no matter how desirous it may be that they should be introduced. The only difference between the mechanical clerk and the nickel-in-the-slot machine is this: you drop a word in the ear of the one and a nickel in the slot of the other. The advantage, however, is rather with the latter, because it is cheaper. And if the principle of the nickel-in-the-slot machine goes on extending in the future as it has in the past it is probably but a matter of time before the metal machine will supplant the automatic clerk. You can already get a cup of coffee, a cigarette, and in fact numerous other things by dropping a nickel in the slot, and why not a pound of tea or sugar, or a can of fish meat or vegetables?

A clerk to be of any value must be live and energetic, a man prolific in ideas and that has judgment to turn these ideas to account whenever a favorable opportunity offers. It is the only road to success. If one employer does not recognise your services it is only a matter of time before another will. Merit will meet with its reward in the long run. Push goods at every opportunity, and if you have a new or desirable line in stock be sure and acquaint each customer of the fact. But tact is as essential as any any other qualification. It would be infinitely better for some clerks, and merchants too for that matter, if they never undertook to induce a customer to purchase something in addition to what he or she may have entered the store for. In their anxiety to sell they overdo themselves. It is uot advisable to be too pressing; and here is where a good many make a mistake. Never force goods. To state that you have a nice line of such and such an article in stock, to point out its peculiarities as to quality or cheapness, and to politely ask if the customer would like to try it is practically all that is necessary. When they give a negative answer do not persist. People do not like to be bored. Some people are particularly difficult to approach; and this suggests the idea of the advisability of all clerks making a study of human nature in general and of the peculiarities of their customers in particular. No two are constituted alike, and the man who fails to realize this will neither make a successful merchant nor a successful clerk. Learn the likes and dislikes of your customers and how you can best handle them. That is the foundation of success; and there is no other.

ABOUT DRIED CURRANTS.

The question of the fall supply of dried currants this year is attracting some attention from wholesale grocers and fruit importers generally in Montreal owing to advices which have been received from time to time during the spring and summer from Patras. These advices stated that a serious disease, "Peronosperos," which proved so disastrous to last year's currant crop, reducing the total yield fully one-third, had re-appeared again. English commercial papers consider the recurrecne this year of an enemy so destructive in its attack as an event of the most serious character, not only to the grower, but in a lesser degree to all who are interested in the article as distributers, etc. Of course, it is impossible just yet to estimate with any accuracy the probable extent of the damage, but it is claimed by experts that after last year's attack the vines are likely to be weakened, and so less fitted to resist a relapse. Besides the advices seem to indicate that a very much larger area is threatened this year than before, especially the districts which produce the higher grades of quality. All this is having due effect with importers, some of whom think the influence will be felt seriously even on this side of the water. It has to be noted, however, that others scout the idea, holding that the influence on the range of prices will be so slight as to be practically inappreciable. Their reason for adopting this view of the situation is the fact that it is well known that there are considerable stocks of old currants held both in London and New York which will, in their opinion, go a long way to off-setting any shortage in this year's crop. In Montreal the stock of old currants is all concentrated in the hands of one firm, and has been so since last fall as THE GROCER pointed out at the time. This firm has been doing all the currant business that has been transacted in a wholesale way in the Province of Quebec and a good percentage of that in Ontario. Since the month of March, however, business has at no time been brisk, and prices have generally ruled about steady. At present the ruling quotation is 5 to 5 3-4c., or about 1c. higher than at the corresponding period last year, owing, no doubt, to the fact of this concentration, and on this account also some argue that they should not go higher.

With reference to the growing crop, we reproduce the following from Patras and Zante:

"In spite of all the precautions and protective measures taken against this destructive disease, Peronosperos is spreading almost in every direction direction where currants are grown. Besides its attacks on the country surrounding Patras, it has now appeared, according to yesterday's telegram of the Mayor to the Nomarche of Patras, all over the Pyrgos district, where last year it made tremendous ravages. What is much more serious is that even the vines which have been sprinkled over with the solution of sulphate of copper have been equally attacked by the disease. This incident keeps in perfect panic all the farmers, who dread that the disease may spread extensively, as was the case last year in Pyrgos and elsewhere. People in Pyrgos, having despaired of the scientific applications, are fasting, and carrying in procession holy images through their estates, imploring the assistance of God."

"By to-day's mail we are forwarding to you several leaves of vines attacked by the Peronosperos, so that you may have before you an evident and real proof of the very much dreaded disease, of which we were in hopes we might have been spared this year. Of course it is unnecessary for us to say that the disease has only just appeared, as was the case exactly at the same time last year, and that it will naturally take its course before we are either freed or ruined by it. But, judging from what we can see to-day we can say in the most positive manner that although the winter was not very severe with us, and although every precautionary measure has been taken against the disease when the vines commenced budding, Peronosperos appeared suddenly all over in a virulent form. It is now spreading vastly, and it seems to us much more destructive than it was last year."

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

"I was in Hamilton Saturday," said W. H. Seyler of Eby, Blain & Co's, to me Monday. "And I dropped into W. J. Ballentine's. Say, but he's just got the Jim Dandy store. It's elegant. And deserves all THE GROCER said about it the other day."

"Yes, that's what I'm at—candling eggs," said a commission man as he deftly gathered up half a dozen eggs and held them up for inspection before the glare of the candle. "You know as the weather gets warmer the quality of the egg deteriorates and of course all the closer inspection is necessary, and as we cannot guarantee with the same degree of certainly the consumption necessarily falls off. Are we finding many questionable eggs? O, about the usual quantity—probably a dozen or more in a case. And that by-the-bye puts me in mind of the fact that as we cannot always, for this reason, credit the country dealer with the exact number of dozen that he consigns us, some of them seem to think that we are robbing them. Why it stands to reason that there must be some loss this hot weather, but some of these fellows don't seem to take that into consideration at all," he concluded as he re-adjusted his "specs" and resumed his inspection.

"Our fishermen are having an unusually good catch of Lake Ontario white fish this season," remarked a dealer to me as with the perspiration streaming down his forehead, he busied himself waiting upon his customers. "For some five or six years the fishermen around Toronto have had a rough time of it. Some days they would catch more than they could find a market for, while other days they would get little or nothing. This season, however, they are each catching on an average three or four hundred weight a day."

"Yes, it is about time Valencia raisins were beginning to move well now," said a wholesale the other day. "Do you know that we sell almost as many Valencias during harvest as for the Christmas trade. You may not think it so, but it's a fact—at least so far as we're concerned. The farmers, you know, use a good many raisins during harvest."

"From what I can learn," said a Front street man the other day, "contracts for new pack salmon are being made at higher prices for special brands and at lower prices for seconds. Then the freights are going to be lower; but I don't suppose I should hardly have told you that."

"I don't know what has got into the people these days," said a broker to me a few days ago, as he impatiently sat down, took off his hat and vigorously mopped his brow.

"About what?" I queried.

"O, they don't drink champagne like they used to, and consequently blessed little of it can I sell. I don't know the reason, but it's true. Maybe scarcity of money has got something to do with it. Why, to give you an idea: At the Jockey Club races last year 43 cases of champagne were consumed, while this year there were only 19. Why, it's terrible. And the worst of it is that there is not the demand for wines generally that there used to be. O, well, I suppose it will be all right again by-and-bye."

HAMILTON BOARD OF TRADE.

The annual meeting of the Hamilton Board of Trade was held Monday afternoon. The report of the council of the board was presented congratulating the board on the prosperity of the country and reviewing the action of the board on various matters during the year. A hope was expressed that the smelting works by-law would be passed by the people on Thursday, as well as the bonus by-law for the H., G. and B. railway, and also that the T., H. and B., C.P.R. and other projected roads would be built into the city at an early date.

The report of Senator Sanford on his visit to the commercial congress to the World's Fair was read, and on the motion of Mr. Wood, seconded by Mr. Knox, a warm vote of thanks was passed and tendered to the senator.

The following officers were elected: H. N. Kittson, president; Archdale Wilson, vice-president; C. R. Smith, secretary-treasurer. Council—St. C. Balfour, W. H. Glassco, M. Leggat, A. Gartshore, J. A. Bruce, John Hoodless, W. A. Robinson. Board of Arbitration—J. Turnbull, Robert Thomson, John Calder, F. H. Lamb.

MEETING OF CATTLE SHIPPERS.

There was quite a gathering of cattle shippers, both from Ontario and Quebec, in Montreal on Thursday for the purpose of interviewing the several steamship companies there about certain questions which have been discussed in the press of late, and concerning the trade in general. The steamship men invited the several gentlemen in question to meet them in the new Board of Trade building, and amongst those present in behalf of the shippers were Messrs. Dunn, Aikens and Thompson, of Toronto, and Robert Bickerdike, W. Cunningham, Craig, Green and other well-known cattle men of the country. The meeting was an informal one, yet opinions were freely expressed on both sides. After a good deal of conservation the cattle shippers made a formal request of the steamship owners. It is generally well known that the different shipping companies have a conference each week in order to talk over rates and other matters affecting their own interests as well as those of the cattle exporters. Now the latter gentlemen have requested that they be allowed to send two representatives to participate in this weekly conference. An answer is to be given in a few days.

PLUCK.

A tall bony youth of evanescent look applied to a prominent retail grocer for a position as window dresser and was accepted. He had never dressed a window in his life. After the store closed he visited prominent stores, studied their displays, and with the hints thus gained managed to perform his work to the satisfaction of his employer. He was an orphan and poor, but he was in love with a girl. So with a salary of $8 per week he married, rented rooms at $8 per month, bought the necessary furniture on the instalment plan and commenced housekeeping. Now he is in business for himself and making and saving money. Recently his old employer gave him a dinner in recognition of his faithful services and business standing.

This young chap has pluck, is industrious, economical and persevering. He is neat, bright, inventive, orderly, and gives close attention to details. These magnify success. These are qualities essential to success and costing nothing but self-denial. Besides, our friend believes in early marriages, regardless of income.—American Grocer.

LIMBURGER'S RIVAL.

Sauerkraut has hitherto been considered the most odoriferous compound imported from Germany, because, as an old song says, it is

> Cabbage which has lain in a wery damp cellar,
> Till it smells so high it can smell no smeller.

But a very formidable rival has now been found to the national dish in a peculiar kind of herrings, duly labeled, in accordance with the Act, "Made in Germany," which formed the subject of a law case before the Assistant Judge of the Westminster County Court, England. The mysterious herrings are sold in tins, their technical name being "Deutsche Delicatessen," in other words "German tasty bits." A firm in the Fatherland sent over some of these delicacies to Mr. Lingen, a restaurant keeper in London, and when that gentleman failed to sell them, owing to their twenty horse-power odor, it sued him for the price, £5 11s. 6d. The restaurant keeper's defense was simple, "Dey smell de schoppe out, and I would get dree months if I sell them. I never smell anything dat was so high." His shopman's opinion was: "Mein Herr, if you no get rid of dem smellerenst fish as ever I smelled ve will all die of the cholera." Stronger testimony still was produced in the shape of a tin of the "Delicatessen," which was opened for the judge's edification. The court held its nose until the box was carried out of the building, and then gave a verdict for the defendant. Mr. Lingen said he only sold one tin, and the customer who purchased it brought it back and declared that it was more powerful than all the thirty-four odors of Cologne combined.—Manchester Grocers' Review.

SPECIAL DAYS FOR BUYING TEAS.

DEAR GROCER,—You gave in your issue of June 16th an interesting account of the city retail grocers' reunion, it was, as you describe, a very enjoyable evening, and it seemed to be particularly so to those who indulged in smoking the weed and in handling the cards.

There is just one remark in reference to the speeches which perhaps I ought to explain more fully as I have been somewhat misunderstood. In speaking of the custom of the retail grocers in some cities in England setting apart special days for travelers calling upon them, I spoke more particularly regarding teas, which was one of the most particular points in the debate. Mr. Mills claimed that in selecting and testing of teas travelers were not wanted, and that by their continual calling and hanging around the store they became a nuisance, meaning, as I supposed, that after leaving their samples of teas the travelers are continually calling to know of the results, and that sometimes there is a large number who get congregated together at one time and at one place, almost filling a man's store and leaving but little room for his customers to come and go. It was on this point I particularly spoke advising those buyers who find themselves so much sought after and bored to death by travelers for their much esteemed orders to rectify these things themselves, as the remedy lies entirely in their own hands and not in the hands of the travelers. It is as much a bore to the travelers as it is to the retailers, and perhaps in many instances it is more so. I believe I voice the sentiments of most of my fellow travelers when I say that we would rather be about our other duties than hanging around a man's store like mummies or bags of wind, as Mr. Mills indicated. If the grocers would set apart certain days for examining samples of teas, sugars, fruits, etc., they could have the whole range of samples from different wholesale houses left for them on a certain day, and they would have all the advantage on their side. Samples brought to their own place of business, without having to leave their business for one moment, they could see at a glance, or in a very short time in their own private office or sample rooms, the whole of the stocks in hand, and could make their selections without prejudice or favor. If it came to a close contest between two or more travelers' samples, they could dismiss all others promptly but those whose samples were preferred or in which they were mostly interested. By this means the travelers would be better satisfied with the results and the purchasers would have gained every advantage there was to be offered to them without having the annoyances so much complained of by Mr. Mills, who seemed to voice the sentiments of many grocers present.

If it was known to the trade that Blank & Co. selected and bought teas or sugars on Tuesdays, the travelers would not fail to call on Monday to know what grade of samples men wanted and they would be sure to have them there on time with any other special samples which they might be offering. They then could go on their way attending to other business, feeling satisfied that their samples were getting the same attention as others. This would be strictly business and equally fair to all parties concerned, and then we travelers would not have so much need of filling our bags with wind and then blowing it off on the buyers. We could reserve most of it, and bottle it, and use it for our wives and families, or for our best girls (that means of course for the younger portion of our fraternity). This would be the means of creating a reform in the home and in our social circles by us travelers having something pleasant to say in our homes and to those with whom we came in contact after business hours (of course this applies only to those of us who keep business hours) instead of being run down and exhausted and feeling annoyed because we had lavished too much of our "eloquence" upon some customers who did not seem to appreciate it and so declined to give us an order.

Permit me also to suggest that every grocer who may be doing, or wants to do, a good business in teas, that they cultivate more and more the trade for tea, by giving it a more personal and practical attention, applying themselves in understanding the different characters of tea and in understanding how to blend them so as to get more favorable and better results both as regards flavor, strength, and better profits. Every store of any pretentions at all should have its tea room, tea book, tea mill or sieve (both are necessary), tea mixer, or a tea board for mixing the tea on; after mixing the different kinds together they should be put back into the chests or half-chests as the case may be, or into the tea-bins made for the purpose, always using care in covering the tea closely to avoid the air or any deleterious odors from getting to it. The tea should be allowed to remain for at least two weeks before using, so that the different flavors may become assimulated, or what is commonly called being blended. In other words, the teas require to remain so long together so as to ripen into a particular flavor required to suit the taste of the blender and his trade. Now I don't think I am divulging any secrets of the trade in stating this, although it may be news for some of your readers. I do this more particularly to show some mixers that just mixing the different teas on the spur of the moment or just at the time of a sale being made, is not blending teas, but merely throwing them together, and you cannot possibly tell what the result will be, or whether your customers will complain or no, and if they do you will be at a loss perhaps how to answer them (except you happen to be an Irishman), and then, no doubt, your native wit will help you out of the difficulty only to get you into another perhaps more difficult still. It is safer to blend your teas on a principle rather than trust to what is commonly called "luck." In my opinion, there is no such thing as "luck," good, bad, or otherwise. Bad luck means bad judgment, carelessness, or accident; good luck means good judgment, carefulness, or accident. For instance, it is commonly said that if a man dies having no wealth to leave for his family or relatives, they say "Oh, we are not in luck!"; but if a man dies leaving much wealth to his family and friends, they say, "What good luck!" or "Oh, how lucky So-and-so was in having so much money or property left him!" When, in fact, neither the man that left the wealth nor those who received it were lucky. It came from natural causes, results and consequences. So with blended tea, if you blend your teas on a principle you will get the required results and they will be uniform and regular, and no mistakes can happen only through carelessness on your part. And if you should have complaints about your teas, then you are better able to get at the trouble or difficulty, much easier and better, by examining and questioning your customers for the reason, rather than supposing it is the tea or yourself that is to be blamed.

Yours, etc.,

STEPHEN HUSTWITT.

CEYLON AND ITS TEAS.

The island of Ceylon lies in the Indian ocean between latitudes 6 and 10 north, and between longitude 80 and 82 east from Greenwich, and marks the western boundary of the bay of Bengal. Colombo, the capital, is distant 2,100 miles from Aden, the British port at the southern outlet of the Red Sea, 589 miles from Madras, and about 1,300 miles direct sail from Calcutta on the Hoogli river, one of the outlets of the Ganges. It is therefore not correct as some suppose, that Indian and Ceylon teas are practically one and the same thing, as, excepting the small quantity of tea grown in Madras the principal tea fields of India are from 1,500 to 1,800 miles from Ceylon as the crow flies. Rainfall, exposure to ocean breezes, and the difference of latitude, render the teas from the island very different in all but appearance.

Ceylon is, from point Pedro in the north to Dandra Head in the extreme south 280 miles long, and from Batticaloa to Colombo the capital, about 100 miles in breadth. It is therefore somewhat smaller than Ireland. It is divided into eight provinces, Northern, North Central, North-western, Western, Southern, Central, Eastern and Uva province. Kaidy, the principal town in the interior, is connected by rail with Dimbula

Kurunegalla and Colombo on the west coast. The provinces are divided into a number of districts with names characteristic of the island alone and very different from district names in India. I will not attempt more than too as samples, Vavoniyavilan and Kanakarayanculaur. There are a mass of mountains of great height in the centre of the island Pedrotalagalla, a mountain south of Kandy, being over 8,000 feet high. Although tea was grown in small quantity before 1884, the product for export had only reached such a proportion of the world's crop in that year as to be worth mention. From less than half a million pounds in 1884 it now may be put at about 70 million pounds. The acreage is not so easy to compile as in India, as many of the estates produce, chinchona, cardamoms, lac, and coffee, in addition to their tea business. There are about 1000 tea estates averaging about 200 acres each, or about 200,000 acres in, all showing a little higher yield per acre than in India, being a little over a ton for six acres.

While many estates bear such names as Veilladiya, Gallebodde, Wallagalla, Digalla, etc., yet the influence of the Western invader who, foremost in the fight the world over, would teach the native the use of both Bible and bayonet, is seen in such estate names as Blair Athol, Dumfries, Paisley, Dunvegan, Ben Lomond, Abbotsford, Drayton, Glencoe, Balmoral, etc.

After the custom of Indian tea planters, the Ceylonese planters mark their packages with the name of the estate, or the name or initials of the firm, or both. This is, in most cases, their registered trade mark, and it is of as much importance to have the proper tea in the packages bearing these marks, as that a flour barrel should contain the quality of flour indicated by the brand on the ends.

Ceylon teas are, on account of the very similar climatic and other conditions under which they are cultivated, very like in taste; that is, while as compared with one another there are great differences of taste in liquor, no samples of Ceylon tea could differ as widely as some Indian teas, say a Kangra and an Assam. I make these remarks at the risk of repetition, because the victim (the retail dealer) in many cases gives to the victim (the consumer) some stuff containing perhaps some unsaleable Indian mixed with Ceylon tea and some cheap China tea or worse, a Ceylon dosed with a nice looking Java tea, and the whole thing is to the retail dealer pure Indian tea, because it is in a big rough wooden box without a Chinese label, and marked Pekoe, or Pekoe Souchong!

Trusting that the readers of THE GROCER are not wearied of the subject of tea, I will deal further with this last part of the question in connection with blending of teas.

For the information of enquiring friends, these few remarks about Ceylon and its teas are the result of some reading, and also some independent study, being partly indebted to the Survey Ordnance Map of India and Ceylon by J. G. Bartholomew, F.R.G S., for many details.

UNITED STATES FRUIT CROP.

On June 12th to 15th Daniel G. Trench & Co., of Chicago, sent out enquiries to a large number of canners of fruits and vegetables, making enquiry as to what articles they were going to pack, and what percentage of a stand they had of peas, corn tomatoes, and what the prospect was for a full crop. They received responses from nearly all of the leading States where fruits and vegetables are packed, and they run as follows:

New York—Peas, good; corn, full crop; tomatoes, 66 to 80 per cent.; peaches, 66 to 75 per cent.; apples, poor.

New Jersey—Peas, fair; corn, 75 to 80 per cent.; tomatoes, 80 to 90 per cent.; peaches, 50 per cent.

Maryland—Peas, fair; corn, 75 to 80 per cent.; tomatoes, 80 to 90 per cent.; peaches, 50 per cent.

Ohio—Corn, full crop; tomatoes, 66 to 75 per cent.

Indiana—Peas, fair; corn, full crop; tomatoes, 66 to 75 per cent.; peaches, part good.

Kentucky—Corn, 50 to 60 per cent.; tomatoes, good; peaches, fair.

Tennessee—Corn, 50 to 60 per cent.; tomatoes, good; peaches, fair; blackberries, good.

Illinois—Peas, good; corn, full crop; tomatoes, 66 to 75 per cent.; peaches, poor; blackberries, good.

Iowa—Peas, good; corn, full crop; tomatoes, 50 to 60 per cent.

Wisconsin—Peas, good; corn, 50 to 60 per cent.; tomatoes, 40 to 50 per cent.; blackberries, good.

Nebraska—Corn, good; tomatoes, poor.

Colorado—Peas, good; corn, none; tomatoes, full crop; peaches, fair.

Utah—Peas, none; corn, none; tomatoes, good; peaches, fair full.

Alabama—Tomatoes, good; peaches, fair.

Texas—Corn, none; tomatoes, full crop; peaches, good full; pears, good.

Michigan—Corn, 50 to 60 per cent.; tomatoes, fair; peaches, big crop; apples, good.

"Up to the present writing," say Trench & Co., "the stand of vegetables shows as quoted above, and fruits bid fair to make a crop as reported. The spring has been very favorable for peas but unfavorable for corn and tomatoes, as many of the tomato growers lost all of their first settings of plants and had to replant, making the planting very late, or carried by to about the middle of June. Same rule holds good on corn. Now with the good weather, frosts holding off till October, we could hope that the above estimate would be fulfilled as to the pack in the States reported above. Early frosts, of course, and unfavorable weather from now on, would reduce this pack so much the more. We see no reason to expect extremely high prices for canned goods, nor do we see any reason to expect very low prices; packers having no goods in stock, and their jobbers having none on hand, it leaves the market bare of all kinds of canned goods or such goods as reported above.

"The depression of the money market will have, or is having its effect; however, we would say to all canners, hold firm for your goods—that is, hold for a good living profit on all things packed. The majority of the large canners having sold their pack for 1893 at from 85 to 90 cents for corn delivered, with a 15 cent freight rate, makes it clear to us that those who have not sold can certainly get as much for their pack as those who have sold. This matter lies entirely with the canner himself; if he sticks firm to his prices the jobber and consumer must pay for the goods, and there is no reason why you should not have a good living profit on your pack.

"The pack of canned goods last year was at least two million cases short of what consumption demanded. Goods were brought in from Canada, both corn and tomatoes, and sold in the United States to supply the deficiency, when they had to pay 43 per cent. duty, and this left the Canadian packer a living margin of profit.

"If unfavorable weather should follow from now on, it may have a tendency to cut the crop much shorter than reported above. A very large number of the new canneries that had anticipated going into business, have abandoned it in consequence of the stringency of the money market. This leaves the field all the more clear for those engaged at the present time in the business. Don't attempt to pack too largely, but make such a pack as you can make without overloading yourself, and hold your goods, as we said before, for a good living profit, and we see no reason why you should not be able to get this."

BEETROOT CROPS IN EUROPE.

The beetroot sugar crops on the Continent do not improve. In France especially complaints continue general, rain being urgently needed. In Belgium and Holland also continued drought has been adverse to the sugar beet, and abundant rains are anxiously desired. The position appears to be relatively better in Austria and Russsia in consequence of alternations of rain and heat. Mr. Licht reports in his latest circular that rain is needed in Germany, but that the condition of the beet there is on the whole satisfactory. The general conclusion is that the European sugar crop cannot be expected to prove above an average yield; yet, it is added, a large yield will be required in order to put supplies on a level with demand. The statistical position is therefore likely to influence the market for a long time yet, and is a guarantee against a serious decline, or at least against a collapse of prices.—Manchester Guardian.

SUGAR IN THE PHILLIPINE ISLANDS.

The sugar crop of these islands form about 9 per cent of the total supply of cane sugar, and in quantity is only exceeded by Cuba, with some 900,000 tons, and Java, with about 430,000 tons.

The cultivation of sugar is practically confined to the following islands : Luzon, Panay, Negros and Cebu. Speaking in general terms, the first supplies what is known to commerce as Manilla sugar, the second and third Iloilo sugar, and the last Cebu sugar, according to the ports from which it is shipped.

None of the sugar is of very high grade, owing to the practical non-existence of modern high-class sugar machinery; but the canes are very rich, and, with better appliances, the product might be made equal to any in the world, especially in the Iloilo district.

Each district produces what is called dry and wet sugar, the former being subdivided into various grades. The process of manufacture of the wet sugars is practically the same all through the Archipelago, but that of dry sugar differs in Luzon from that adopted in the southern islands or Visayas.

Manila dry sugar is what is called clayed sugar, which means that after the juice is cooked in open pans, the mass is poured into earthenware receptacles, or "pilones," shaped like an inverted cone. A thinlayer of liquid mud is put on the top, the moisture from which gradually percolates through the mass, washing the molasses from the crystals, and carrying off the bulk of it through an aperture at the bottom into earthenware jars set underneath.

After standing for some weeks or months the sugar is ready for further manipulation the drying grounds, or "Farderias," which are entirely in the hands of the Chinese, who purchase the "pilones" from the planters. When they are opened, the sugar is almost white at the top, and gradually becomes darker towards the bottom. The white and dark sugar is mixed together in certain proportions, according to the grade which is to be produced. It is then spread out on mats to dry in the sun, for which one day is sufficient in dry, hot weather. When dry it is packed in mat bags, and is ready for shipment.

In the Visayas the juice is cooked to a very high point, almost all moisture being driven off. The mass is then poured on to large wooden trays, and stirred up to allow the escape of any moisture which may remain. It rapidly crystallizes, after which it is at once packed in the usual mat bags, and suffers no further manipulation before shipment. Why this system is not adopted in Luzon it would be hard to say. One theory is that, owing to the difference in the soil, the sugar which is produced there cannot be treated in the same way; but I should ascribe it to the inveterate conservatism of the natives, summed up in the expression, which covers such a multitude of anomalies in the Phillipines, "Costumbre del pais," the custom of the country.

Any of you who are acquainted with the modern improved forms of sugar manufacture which are employed in the West Indies and Java, will see how far we are behind in this respect, and will be able to judge what the Phillipines could do under better auspices if, even now, with the rude and inadequate means at their disposal, the planters are able to increase the cultivation, and make it pay, in competition with such formidable rivals.—Sugar Cane.

THE ACIDS OF FRUITS.

Mr. George W. Johnson in his Chemistry the World, says, in describing the "Vegetable Food of the World": "The grateful acid of the rhubarb leaf arises from the malic acid and binoxalate of potash which it contains; the acidity of the lemon, orange, and other species of the genus Citrus is caused by the abundance of citric acid which their juice contains; that of the cherry, plum, apple, and pear from the malic acid in their pulp; that of gooseberries and currants, black, red and white, from a mixture of malic and critic acids; that of the grape from a mixture of malic and tartaric acids; that of the mango from citric acid and a very fugitive essential oil; that of the tamarind from a mixture of citric, malic, and tartaric acids; the flavor of asparagus from aspartic acid, found also in the root of the marshmallow; and that of the cucumber from a peculiar poisonous ingredient called fungin, which is found in all fungi, and is the cause of the cucumber being offensive to some stomachs.

"It will be observed that rhubarb is the only fruit which contains binoxalate of potash in conjunction with an acid. It is this ingredient which renders this fruit so wholesome at the early commencement of the summer, and this is one of the wise provisions of nature for supplying a blood purifier at a time when it is likely to be most needed. Beetroot owes its nutritious quality to about 9 per cent of sugar which it contains, and its flavor is a peculiar substance containing nitrogen mixed with pectic acid. The carrot owes its fatening powers also to sugar, and its flavor to a peculiar fatty oil; the horse-radish derives its flavor and blistering power from a volatile acrid oil. The Jerusalem artichoke contains 14½ per cent. of sugar and 3 per cent. of inulin (a variety of starch), besides gum and a peculiar substance to which its flavor is owing; and, lastly, garlic and the rest of the onion family derive their peculiar odor from a yellowish, volatile acrid oil, but they are nutritious from containing nearly half their weight of gummy and glutinous substances not yet clearly defined."

ECONOMY THE IDEA.

In the Mediterranean countries, and in fact everywhere that the orange is grown, the utmost economy is exercised—nothing that will return a particle of fertility to the soil or a cent of revenue to the pocket of the grower is allowed to waste. Even the peel from the culls is saved and the petals as they fall from the orange blooms are religiously gathered up and sold to the perfumer. Perhaps our people would do well to take a few lessons in economy from their foreign friends.

There is, for instance, the matter of making orange wine, marmalade, etc., from the culls, and the business might and should be developed to great proportions during the shipping season.

Of course it would not be practical for each orange grower to manufacture the refuse fruit into these commodities himself, and the only way to utilize it in a profitable manner is by disposing of it to the factories that might be established in every orange-growing section. Each grower could then save his culls, and after a day's packing deliver them to the factories and secure so much per thousand for them. These factories could utilize every portion of the fruit, from the peel to the seed, and while the price paid would be small it would be just that much clear money to the producer.—Florida Agriculturist.

BAD STOCK KEEPING.

"Why do you suppose it is that you don't sell more goods?" was asked of a country merchant whose trade was not very prosperous. "I don't know. People tell me my prices are too high." "But why don't you put your prices down?" "Because I don't sell goods enough to make it pay."

The above reminds us of the methods of some of our local merchants who are such poor stock keepers that people when shopping seek in vain for certain articles required, that because they have not been of universal demand are not deemed necessary to be kept in stock. "Oh, we don't keep them; we have no demand for such goods," is the common reply to the shopper, who certainly did demand them then and there. "If no havee now can?" as a Chinaman once said. A good merchant will keep anything commonly sought for in his line, even though it be of slow sale. There is such a thing as pushing goods, and thus creating a demand; and while a merchant can not be supposed to keep everything, yet if in his line of trade, any article be called for should be supplied if possible to obtain, or at least a willingness to order on the part of the merchant should be expressed. "We don't keep it in stock" has been the death knell of many an otherwise thriving trade. "I can't bear to shelve goods that do not sell briskly," said a merchant. Well, all we have to say is what the doctor said to the old maid when she said, "Doctor, I can't bear children," to which the doctor replied, "Maybe if you could you'd like them better."—Herald of Commerce.

RELATIVE VALUE OF PORK AND WHEAT.

Pork double is its relative value to wheat. That is, $10 pork would not be as cheap as 65c. wheat in Chicago. Yet $10 a barrel loss on the stock of mess pork in that market would mean a loss of nearly $750,000 to the clique on their cash holdings, and probably more than $1,000,000 more on their long options if, as they claim, they have got the market short 25,000 barrels more than the contract stock. No wonder, therefore, there has not been enough trade in future pork this week to really establish the quotations from day to day. But what is worse for the clique, they are long of September pork, and they cannot force the shorts to cover before the last day of that month unless they outmargin them, as they did on wheat, and compel them to cover in default of margins. But the shorts are generally men as big as the clique, or bigger, and they could not drive most of them in if they called them up to $25 or $50 per barrel. Hence the clique have got to lug this stock for three and a half months to come, on a tight money market, with all the risks of a renewal of panic by failures or cholera, in the face of a probable steady accumulation of stocks of all kinds of hog products from now forward, except of the single article of contract, mess pork, which is likely to decrease very slightly, as packers will supply the consumptive demand with summer packed pork, so soon as old mess is gone, so long as pork is relatively higher than other products of the hog. While, therefore, it is possible for the clique to carry the deal out successfully in pork, it would be a bold underwriter who would take the risk off their hands, and an equally bold bank that will furnish the money to carry the deal unless they are margined down by the clique to near the above $10 basis of real values.

Upon the same relative basis of values with the chief food staple—wheat—other hog products are also too high by nearly, if not quite, 33 per cent., making lard about 6 3-4c. per lb. and bacon 6 1-2c. to 7c., according to cuts. While these figures all seem low, we have but to go back less than a year to find nearly the same level. With steadily improving quality of hogs, as shown by the increasing discount on heavy weights here and West, and probable increasing receipts, the packers will continue to sell their current production, if not their future output, of ribs and lard for future delivery in absence of anything like spot demand to take the supply, and the clique must stand in the gap and take the whole surplus of the speculative articles from now to September, as well as carry the increasing stocks, if they carry the deal in lard and ribs through. Either they must do this or pocket the difference between the present level of prices and that indicated above. They have shown a disposition this week to get out of lard and ribs whenever the shorts would buy, and in fact they made a combined movement along the line early in the week to force them in. But the packers are in the way, and sell now on every bulge, which makes it impossible to get rid of much long stuff.—National Provisioner.

MERITS OF AUSTRALIAN FRUIT.

At the Imperial Institute, London, according to an English contemporary, a number of fruit experts and others assembled recently, at the invitation of L. L. Smith, the representative there of the colony of Victoria, for the purpose of deciding on the respective merits of some cases of fruit sent over here on the steamship Orient, under the conditions of a prize offered by the International Wine, Fruit, and Grain Exhibition at Melbourne, for the best system of packing fruit for export, the test being the comparative excellence of condition on arrival. Two competitors had entered, and of these one sent four cases of apples and the other six cases of apples and one of pears, though as the pears had become rotten they were not brought into the competition at all. The apples comprised about six different qualities, but they had evidently been packed when too ripe, while the senders, not content with placing each apple in paper, had forced paper shavings into every possible nook and corner in the boxes, thus preventing any current of air from passing through, and causing over-heating. Some of the boxes, too, had not been properly constructed. The only case which arrived in thoroughly sound condition was one of Sturmer pippins, sent from the Tumuc Valley orchard, Pakenham, to which orchard the prize was awarded. The exhibits showed that the growers in Victoria have still a good deal to learn in the choice of varieties suitable for export, and in the matter of packing, but they may be expected to profit from the results of such experiments as that decided upon on Friday week. With regard to apples Victoria is at a disadvantage as compared with Tasmania, with whom, apparently, she wishes to compete in the English market. Victoria being much warmer than Tasmania, her apples are softer, and have not the keeping qualities of those grown in Tasmania; but some of the harder varieties, such as the Sturmers, should prove suitable for export, and to these the Victorians will probably find it better to devote their attention. On the other hand, Victoria has the advantage over Tasmania in respect to grapes, though here also growers and exporters are still in the experimental stage, with good prospects, however, of final success. It may be added that visitors to the Imperial Institute will find in the Victorian section a varied assortment of canned fruits, preserves, meat, etc., which afford still further evidence of Australia's capacities as a food producer.

A BETTER WAY THAN CUTTING.

The first expedient of the average merchant or manufacturer who is suffering from active competition of rival firms is to cut prices. It never seems to strike the average business man that there is any other course open to him that promises success in such cases, hence the frequency of price wars, most of which are entirely unnecessary and could easily be avoided if the victims would do a little hard thinking before acting. That other ways are open to a business man when competition threatens to seriously injure his trade is shown by an incident related by the American Miller, in which the hero was a miller, who supplied most of the flour sold by the leading dealer of a certain town, until a disagreement regarding long time on the flour bought was followed by the dealer introducing the flour of a mill at a distance at 25 cents less on the barrel, the sale of which he pushed with all his might.

The miller, however, was equal to the occasion, and he placed an order book in the jewelry store next door, and gave the jeweller a small percentage on every order taken. In front of the jewellery store was a large sign reading, "Orders for F——'s Famous Flour Taken here." This was followed by a price list just a trifle higher than the grocer's prices on the imported flour. He wished to give consumers to understand that his flour was the best, and wisely refrained from giving the grocer any occasion to make a further reduction in prices. But he did not stop at this; he sent a smooth talker from house to house to solicit trade from new as well as old consumers. Orders were delivered promptly, and good fresh yeast was supplied to every new user of the flour.

Before two months had passed the miller sold more flour at home than ever before, and at the end of six months the mill's entire product was sold at home, and brought greater returns to the miller than ever before. The usual practice of millers in such a case is to cut prices of other flours which is followed by cuts by dealers, a price-cutting war follows, much to the disgust and loss of the sellers, and the delight of the buyers.—Merchants' Review.

At a meeting of the council of the Board of Trade Monday N. H. Cowdry, grain merchant, of Lindsay, and Charles A. Hunter, broker, of Toronto, were elected to membership.

A circular issued by Farm and Home, of Wilmington, Del., says that from present appearances the peach crop of the Delaware and Chesapeake peninsula will be very large and the fruit fine.

Nelson's, South Kootenay, Board of Trade asks the Dominion Government to improve the mail facilities of the district, and calls upon the Provincial administration to make without delay a ten mile wagon road from Watson to New Denver.

As a result of the new railway rates the carriage for heavy groceries to Coventry from London shows an increase on the old rates of 2s. 6d. per ton, say an English exchange. For packages and mixed groceries the old rate was 32s. 6d., and the new charges amount to 30s. per ton.

A Torontonian who is engaged in the hay trade has received a cable from Rouen, France, stating that an unlimited quantity of hay can be sold at that port at 170fr. or $34 per ton. It is likewise said that two special steamers have been chartered to carry hay from the St. Lawrence to the French ports.

The shipments of Nova Scotian apples to Great Britain have steadily increased for some years past, but there is some danger of the business being seriously injured by the dishonest practices followed by some people in the trade. Reputable concerns are moving to have such practices stamped out. They have also been agitating for better transport facilities, and it is now stated that the Furness Steamship Company will soon have ready for the St. John, Halifax and London route two steamers specially equipped for the apple trade.

Combination in buying is to be tried by one of the grocers' associations in England, the system being confined at first to proprietary articles. The system has long been employed by the retail co-operative societies in England, and has met with some success in the grocery trade in the United States.—Merchants' Review.

According to reports received at the Fisheries Department, 9,207 barrels of fresh mackerel were landed by the American fleet at Boston during the week ending Saturday last. Reports from the vessels on the Grand Bank show that the highest catch to date was 150,000 lbs. of cod by one vessel. Another vessel has captured 140,000 lbs., and several are reported with 100,000 lbs. each.

According to a cable of Monday last, Herbert Gardner, President of the Board of Agriculture, states that a microscopic examination of the lungs of animals landed from the steamship Lake Winnipeg, from Montreal, has proved that the animals had been affected with contagious pleuro-pneumonia. The prohibition against the importation of Canadian cattle must therefore be maintained.

Kingston Despatch: The St. Regis Indians, who usually gather the strawberry crop in the Athens section, have formed a combine, and this season ask more for picking than the farmers, in many instances, feel inclined to pay. They want their fare paid one way, to be supplied with milk and potatoes, and 2 cents per basket for picking. To accede to the demands of poor Lo would unduly enhance the price of the fruit to the consumer, consequently the red men sit idle in their wigwams, while the pale face gathers his own berries.

The distillers who recently withdrew from the whiskey trust have decided to assist the Attorney-General of Illinois in every possible way in his efforts to destroy the combine. They have drawn up a statement giving a history of the trust from the date of organization in 1887, and have sent it to the attorney-general. Members of trusts are referred to as robbers; robbers are thieves, and this would lead to the old question, "Is there honor among thieves?"—Western Commercial.

At the suggestion of an English gentleman who has visited Australia and who knows the difficulties which exist in obtaining good fish at the antipodes, Mr. Parmalee, Deputy Minister of Trade and Commerce, has written Mr. Olds, the general freight agent of the C.P.R., for lowest through rates from Halifax and St. John to Sydney, New South Wales, on dried fish and canned lobsters. Mr. Olds replied, quoting a very low figure on experimental shipments in order to test the possibility of working up a trade. This should afford an opportunity to some enterprising dealers in the maritime provinces.

A late dairy invention of an American is calculated to stir the dead and gone grandmothers of the present generation into life again, that they may hold up their hands in disapproval of the methods of their time saving descendents. By means of the milk-separator two thousand pounds of warm milk may be separated into cream and milk in an hour's time, and by adding to this the attachment called the butter-maker, the shrewd dairymaid may milk her cow into the "feeder" of the separator and remove well-made and stamped pats of butter from the opening of the patent butter-maker. We have not yet heard that the cows have the least interest in or objection to the new process.—Critic, Halifax.

Wife—Well, dear, where's the coffee?

He—What coffee?

Why, that which I told you to bring home from the grocery.

He—Umph! I forgot all about the coffee.

Wife—Why, no, dear you didn't. I smell it on your breath. You surely must have been sampling it.

He—Well, yes; I did sample it some; but—but I wouldn't take it. There's nothing I so detest as mean coffee.

LEMON TREE CULTURE.

A lemon tree should bear as much in five years as an orange tree at seven years. If in a right locality there is no necessity for a failure in lemon culture; all it needs is intelligence and a strict attention to business. This is necessary in almost any kind of business, although in some kinds of farming moderate returns are had when there is lack of both elements. The time is coming when the orange market will be overdone, and the orchardist will be compelled to play second fiddle to the packer and middlemen. Such a state of affairs cannot obtain in the lemon business during the lifetime of anyone now ready to plant an orchard.—Ex.

COLLECTION OF DEBTS IN FRANCE.

Some information relating to the subject of the collection of debts in Great Britain has been given in recent issues of the Merchants' Review, and below we print an extract from the United States Consular Reports for June, showing the manner in which creditors in France obtain their just dues from slow-paying or dishonest debtors:

The first step which it is necessary for a creditor in France to take before he can use legal means to collect a debt due him is to obtain a judgment against the debtor. This judgment, provided the amount does not exceed $40, is rendered by the local justice of the peace, who, upon the payment of a small fee on the part of the creditor, despatches through the mail a printed notice addressed to the presumably embarrassed party. The notice directs the delinquent to appear upon a certain day and at a given hour before the magistrate in question, there either to arrange for a settlement of the account or to show cause why he should not pay the whole or part of it. If a compromise can be made, well and good; if not, the defendant is a second time summoned to appear. Should he then flatly refuse payment, or if he protests his inability to liquidate or fails to put in an appearance, judgment is rendered against him. The cost of the judgment, together with that of the summons, is defrayed by the plaintiff, and a copy of the former is sent to the debtor. He has then three months' grace, during which period he may appeal before a civil court the judgment already handed down. Failing to do this, or admitting, for argument's sake, that the case goes to trial and that the judgment of the lower tribunal is sustained, the plaintiff puts the entire matter in the hands of a huissier, or recognized debt-collector. This officer of justice, if he can be called such, is indirectly an appointee of the State, though he receives no compensation from its exchequer. Like notaries, advocates, and counselors, he is an independent individual, locating his office where he chooses, and depending for a livelihood upon his fees. His functions partake of those of both the bailiff and process-server; but his methods as well as his prerogatives, resemble neither the one nor the other.

The huissier, upon request of the creditor makes an abstract statement of the conditions of the debt. this resume, written on paper stamped and watermarked by the Government—as, in fact, are all legal acts passed in France—is known as a "signification," and is handed in person to the debtor. The fee for preparing and serving the same varies according to the length of the instrument, and not according to the importance of the debt. Its average cost may be placed at $2.50. The signification is nothing more or less than a full statement of the case and a request for immediate payment.

Should the debtor disregard or ignore this document an "assignation" is served upon him, which is, in turn, a mere repetition of the other. Again, if, after the receipt of this notice, the debtor fails within a period of eight days to settle the amount due, a third notice to the effect that his furniture and belongings will be seized is placed in his hands by the huissier.

The expense entailed in the preparation of these notices, their cost being from $2 to $3 each, is defrayed by the creditor. If, at any moment the debtor agrees to liquidate in full, he is not only required by law to discharge his original obligation, but to add to it the costs of the judgment and fees of the huissier. If his furniture is sold in order to satisfy the debt, enough must be placed at the disposal of the auctioneer to cover both the original debt and the costs of the abortive collection. In this way the creditor is practically insured against loss, while the debtor only augments by procrastination the amount of his indebtedness.

On the other hand, presuming the court to have decided the case against the creditor, the plaintiff and not the debtor is obliged to pay the costs. Not only that, but he must pay as well the legal fees of the opposing counsel, as his adversary would be forced to do should he lose the suit.

Not the least important of the huissier's functions in France is the collection of moneys due for unpaid rent. In this instance no judgment is required. The landlord has simply to ask for and receive the authorization of a referee or the president of the civil tribunal in order to employ legal means for the recovery of the arrears. If payment is not forthcoming within a certain specified time, a provisory seizure is made of the tenant's effects, and if at the end of the month, and after numerous threats, settlement is not made, judgment is given and furniture or other property is attached.

Whether or not this system of debt-collecting is a better or worse one than that which exists in the United States is a matter of opinion.

The huissier is in the Republic of France an individual to be feared by all whose finances are run on the same scale as were those of Mr. Wilkins Micawber. But his prerogatives, happily for the debtors, are in some degree limited. Unlike certain agents of the law, his work—his attachments, seizures, threats, evictions and process-serving—must be performed between the rising and the setting of the sun. This gives him about sixteen hours of activity in midsummer and eight at Christmastide.

It appears, therefore, that the contrast between the conditions of the American and the French retailers, as regards the assistance which the law renders them in the collection of debts, is quite as marked as in the case of British versus American retailers. The spirit of democracy seems opposed to the punishment of debtors, whether they are able to pay their debts or not, hence it is not surprising that this country should have gone to greater lengths than Great Britain in making smooth the path of the dead beat. But France has cast off monarchical government, yet provides ample safeguards for the retail creditor and no doubt reaps the fruits of her wise policy in a sounder condition of business than would otherwise be the case. When retail distributors are practically placeed at the mercy of unscrupulous consumers, as in this country today, the injury inflicted is not restrcited to the immediate sufferers, but eventually affects the entire business community. Consequently it is not in the interests of the retail class of traders alone that a change in the exemption laws of the various States is demanded, but of the country at large. The worst sufferer is, however, the retail merchant, and he should not rest until he is afforded requisite protection by the law.—Merchants' Review.

THE GROCER AND THE KITCHEN.

It not infrequently happens that the kitchen robs a grocer of his customer, injures his reputation, calls in question his accounts and stirs up no end of trouble. This is often the case where the route system is the custom of the place or neighborhood. Scores of customers are personally unknown to the grocer, who has never met, nor is likely to met them. Orders are sent via the kitchen or given direct by its autocrat—the cook.

This means that the patronage of many of the best customers is entirely dependent upon the relations established between the driver of the wagon and the cook. In cases where a steward manages the household commissary the case is little if any better. Bribes are demanded in the shape of a bottle of Old Rye, a dress, or some other article. In many cases a handsome fee is expected if harmony is to continue between the kitchen and the grocer. If the demands of the steward or cook are not granted complaints may be anticipated, that the butter sent was not fit for use except as wagon grease; that the coffee was horrible; the tea of wretched flavor; the flour no good; the ham stale and tough, if not tainted.

Sometimes the driver of a rival grocer will bribe the kitchen to spoil the goods of the competitor in order that that the cook may have a good excuse for transferring the account. There is no end to the devices of the kitchen to thwart the endeavors of the grocer to please some of his best customers. What is the remedy? The answer is not easy. Some grocers allow their salesman to bribe the kitchen, finding it more profitable to accede to its demands than to refuse. We believe the manly way is to resist every irregular demand, and wherever there is any disposition on the part of the kitchen to discredit the quality of goods, to promptly notify its master or mistress of the situation.

It is also common for route-drivers to volunteer gifts to the kitchen in order to secure heavy orders. They put a premium on theft and waste. Goods are delivered that go from the kitchen unopened to the friends of the cook. Only recently a housekeeper in looking over her storeroom found several unopened packages of coffee, oatmeal and other articles. The quantity of sugar and butter charged in her account was more than twice the consumptive capacity of the family. Is it any wonder that under such circumstances customers complain of the size of their accounts and charge the grocer with error, and intimate that there is fraud? Efforts should be made by grocers to make the acquaintance of customers; to have stores so inviting as to induce their making frequent visits. This is one reason why the fixtures and surroundings of a grocery should be in keeping with the taste and habits of those it serves. Evils will always be present so long as human nature is as it is. The quickest and best way to reach such an evil as that under consideration is to refuse to compromise with the kitchen; in short with any sort of questionable practice.

MEAT-EATING AND BAD TEMPER.

"In no country," declares Mr. Ernest Hart in London Hospital, "is home rendered so unhappy and life made so miserable by the ill-temper of those who are obliged to live together as in England. If we compare domestic life and manners in England with those of other countries where meat does not form such an integral article of of diet, a notable improvement will be remarked. In less meat-eating France urbanity is the rule of the home; in fish and rice eating Japan harsh words are unknown, and an exquisite politeness to one another prevails even among the children who play together in the streets. In Japan I never heard rude, angry words spoken by any but Englishmen. I am strongly of opinion that the ill-temper of the English is caused in a great measure by a too abundant meat dietary combined with a sedentary life. The half-oxidized products of albumen circulating in the blood produce both mental and moral disturbances. Brain-workers should live sparingly if they would work well and live long. Their force is required for mental exertion, and should not be expended on the task of digestion, for 'they should remember that the digestion of heavy meals involves a great expenditure of nerve force.' The healthful thing to do is to lead an active and unselfish life, on a moderate diet, sufficient to maintain strength and not increase weight."

BUSINESS SKIN FLINTS.

In a recent murder trial, where a druggist's clerk was shot and killed during night service, the shameful fact was disclosed on testimony that the faithful fellow, who was a qualified prescriptionist of admitted ability, not only was subject to the arduous and responsible duties of a competent prescription clerk, required to do night work, and whose blood was shed while at his post of duty, but that all this was undergone at the magnificent salary of $6 a week! Human life and human blood is cheap indeed, when so ruthlessly sacrificed for any penurious employer, so insignificantly small that his soul would crawl through a sixpence with a hole in it to save a dollar. That the employee is a party to the bargain with the employer is no excuse for niggardly wages by the latter when the wage-earner is worthy of his hire. There is something radically wrong between capital and labor that compels wage-earners in responsible positions to accept starvation wages or starve with no wages at all, because a standard has been fixed by those willing to work for nothing and board themselves. The old question of Cain, "Am I my brother's keeper?" must be answered at the final reckoning by many a business skinflint.—Herald of Commerce.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, July 6, 1893.

GROCERIES.

Nothing materially new has developed since our last review. The volume of business has been fairly satisfactory and if anything rather larger than a week ago, although still not so large as a fortnight ago. Travelers' orders denote some improvement in the country, but trade locally is quiet. Prospects are brightening. Reports regarding the cereal and fruit crops are even more assuring than some weeks ago. The only fruit that does not promise a good yield is the apple. The most unsatisfactory feature about the situation is in regard to payments, which merchants generally say are not up to the mark. Coffees seem a little better outside, but on the local market they still fail to attract attention. Sugar has ruled firm and unchanged, with demand fair. Dried fruit, particularly currants, is in better demand. The tea market is dull and disappointing. A good business is being done in canned goods and prices in this line rule steady.

COFFEE.

The local market continues quiet and featureless. The foreign markets are reported strong and Rios are a fractionally higher in New York for spot goods. We quote as before: Rio, 19½ to 21½c.; East Indian, 27 to 30c.; South American, 21 to 23c.; Santos, 21 to 22c.; Java, 30 to 32c.; Mocha, 26 to 27c.

NUTS.

The market remains much as before. We quote Brazil nuts 11 to 11½c. a pound; Sicily shelled almonds, 32 to 35c. a pound; unshelled, 16 to 17c.; peanuts, 13 to 14c. for roasted and 11 to 12½c. for green; cocoa nuts, $5 to $5.50 per sack; Marbot walnuts 11½ to 12c.; pecans 13½ to 16c.

DRIED FRUIT.

The market is fairly active. Demand for Valencia raisins shows some improvement and there is now a good trade doing in this line. The idea for off-stalk is 3¾ to 4½c. a pound for seconds, 5¼ to 6c. for fine layers, ordinary selects, 6¾c.; fancy selects, 7 to 7½c. according to quality. Sultana raisins are in fair demand at 5⅞ to 7c. Currants are strong and in brisk demand at 5½ to 6c. for ordinary fruit and 6 to 6¼c. for good. Filliatras currants, in barrels and half barrels, are in light supply both here and in New York. Practically the only currants offering in New York at the moment are a few provincials in barrels, and half barrels and cases. Demand for prunes has flattened out as is usual at this season; 7¼ to 8c. is still the idea in cases. Dates dull and unchanged at 5 to 5½c. There is a plentiful supply of cheap figs for cooking purposes at prices ranging from 4 to 6½c., but demand is only fair.

RICE AND SPICES.

Demand is fairly active for rice. Round lots of B have been selling at 3⅝c. Japan rice at from 5½ to 5¾c. has been moving freely.

Spices quiet and unchanged. Whole ginger is quoted at 20 to 25c.; pure white pepper at 20 to 28c., and pure black at 14 to 16c.

SUGAR.

The market remains in much about the same position as a week ago. The Canadian refiners continue to indulge in bullish talk, and will neither shade nor make contracts. The Woodside refinery on Tuesday advanced prices to 5¾c. for granulated. This is equal to the outside figure wholesalers are now getting, and this therefore practically means that this refinery is out of the market on granulated at present. The buying is still of a hand-to-mouth character, and at the moment it seems the safest course to pursue. The idea is still 5⅝ to 5¾c. for granulated and 4⅝ to 5¼c. for yellows.

Willett & Gray, New York, in their statistical for June 29, have the following to say on sugar:—The week—Raws declined ⅛c. Refined unchanged. Receipts, 32,785 tons. Meltings, 25,000 tons. Total stock in four ports, 88,812 tons, against 81,027 tons last week and 153,453 tons last year. By cable: Stock in Havana and Matanzas, 131,000 tons, against 135,000 tons last week and 185,734 tons last year. The six principal ports of Cuba give for the week: Receipts, 9,000 tons; exports, 12,000 tons; stock, 211,000 tons, against 214,000 tons last week, and 250,077 tons last year. Total stock in all the principal countries, 993,512 tons, against 1,311,690 tons at same date last year. Afloat to the United States from all countries estimated, 60,000 tons, against 75,000 tons last year.

Raws—The market has been very uninteresting at home, and without any undue excitement during the week, but the general tendency has been, and is at the close, of a weakening nature. Sales of centrifugals at ⅛c. decline followed the sale of molasses sugar noted last week at the same decline, and during the week a cargo or two of centrifugals have been constantly on the market, with only now and then a buyer, and at the close buyers appear to have withdrawn entirely. Increased offerings of a few more cargoes might lead to a further extension of the present reaction in prices, which is not desired by any interest at this time. European markets have gradually declined from 19s. for beets to 18s. 4½d., with a recovery to 18s. 6d. at the close. The new crop delivery followed the same course, declining from the highest point yet made, of 15s. 6d. to 14s. 10d., with a recovery to 15s. 1½d. All sugar markets are most sensitive now, as it is natural with the prices at the present level for deliveries before October, and at a much lower level for deliveries afterwards. The question uppermost in holders' minds is, through what process will these varying quotations become united, as they must eventually.

Refined—Monetary as well as prudential reasons continue to urge the country to a hand-to-mouth basis, and, until such basis is reached the demand for refiners' stock must remain small, even though the demand is increasing for the grocers' stock, as is now generally reported. A more active business may and should set in after the holidays, which will naturally tend to steady and support both the raw and refined markets. There has been no change in quotations of granulated, and there are no indications of any for the present.

Cuba—Receipts are larger this week than anticipated, and necessitate an increase in our crop estimates, which we now return to 800,000 tons. Regarding the next crop, the very best of information, at this early stage of the crop, is of a most brilliant prospect. The spring season, with abundant rains, set in earlier by a month and a half this year compared with last two years, and the general appearance of the cane fields is most promising. Increased planting of cane has taken place, and if the weather during July, August, September and October continues to be so favorable as heretofore, having also the good luck not to be visited this year by hurricanes, a crop around 950,000 tons may easily be reached.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The movement in syrups is largely confined to half-barrels As a rule 2¼c. is the lowest figure quoted, but there is a dark syrup on the market that can be obtained at 2c.

Molasses continues to rule dull and unchanged. The idea seems to be 28 to 35c. for Porto Rico and 30c. for New Orleans.

TEAS.

The market is dull and featureless, and the movement is confined to small parcels. New Japans do not seem to have met with as good a demand as anticipated. We quote: Japans (1892-3)—Low grade and common, 15 to 18c; medium, 18 to 20c.; fine, 20 to 25c.; new Japans, 30 to 32c. for medium and 32 to 35c. for fine. Blacks—Low grades congous, 14½ to 16½c.; medium, 18 to 23c.; fine, 30 to 45c.; fancy, 60 to 70c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The butter market does not seem to be as good as it was, particularly from an exporter's point of view. It does not follow, however, that butter can be bought any cheaper,

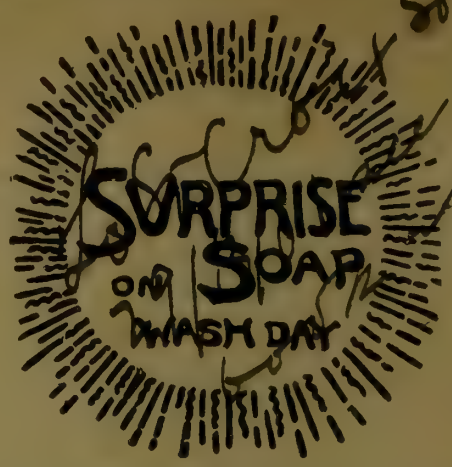
CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.



A good steady trade is being done and the market generally wears a sort of satisfied air. Demand has slackened off a little for tomatoes, but there is still a fair movement nevertheless; 85 to 90c. is the idea as to price, and where there is any cutting being done it is as a rule to meet competition at outside points. The demand for peas is exceptionally good taking into consideration the fact that the green article is on the market; 85 to 90c. are the ruling prices. There is not so much heard about the scarcity of corn as a few week ago. Stocks however, it is well known, are light and some of the factories are cleaned completely out. At the same time it now looks as if there will not be much of a shortage after all. This is probably in part due to the fact that the demand, while good, has not been as big as anticipated. Ordinary goods are quoted at 85 to 90c. and choice brands at $1 to $1.25. Stock of peaches is light, demand small and prices unchanged at $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's and $3 to $3.25 for 3's. Apples are meeting with a good demand and they are getting scarce; $2 to $2.25 is the idea for gallons and 85c. to $1 for 3's. Plums are also scarce and in fair demand at $1.45 to $1.55. Raspberries are in light demand at $1.75 to $2. Strawberries, the season is about over, and the idea as to price is $1.75. Demand for salmon is active and first-class brands are about cleaned out; good red fish is selling at $1,50 to $1.65 for talls and $1.70 to $1.80 for flats; fish of not so well known brands can be obtained at $1.30 to $1.40. Lobster is a little firmer, although no actual change has taken place in quotations; talls sell at $1.90 to $2.10 and flats at $2.50 to $2.70. A fairly good seasonable demand is reported for meats.

MONTREAL.

The canned goods market is steady, the feature being the scarcity of salmon, which is much sought after and $1.50 to $1.60 is freely bid on spot. Fruits are in fair demand, but tomatoes are a very slow sale.

but the market does not display the same life as a week or so ago. Dairy butter is in fair demand, at 14 to 16c. for good to choice tubs and pails and 16 to 17c. is quoted for fine crocks. Only a few large rolls are offering, and they sell at 15 to 16c. Pound dairy rolls are higher at 17 to 18c. and wanted.

You can't recommend SURPRISE SOAP too strongly for washing clothes. We will mail you a sample cake to test it yourself if you send us your address.

TORONTO: Wright & Copp, 40 Wellington St. East.
WINNIPEG: E. W. Ashley.

Demand for creamery butter is fair. Good to choice tubs sell at 20 to 22c., and there is a medium article that can be obtained at 18c. Pound prints are moving at 22 to 23c.

Cheese is in fair demand and the market easier, with buyers and sellers apart in their views; 9 to 9¼c. are the ruling prices at the factories, although there is some cheese of not well-known brands that can be obtained at less than 9c., the inside figure quoted; 9½ to 10c. are the prices jobbers are getting.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Scarcely anything doing. Jobbers are paying $1.30 to $1.40 for hand-picked beans and are selling at $1.40 to $1.50.

DRIED APPLES—Quiet with stocks nearly exhausted. Jobbers have been buying small lots at 3½ to 4c., and 4½c. seems to be the outside figure they are getting.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Stocks short, only a dealer here and there seeming to have any. The few that there are are being jobbed out at 8½ to 9c. There have been sales of evaporated quarters at 7¼ to 7½c.

EGGS—The supply is diminishing and the "loss off" is getting larger. Demand is fair and prices steady at 11½ to 12c.

HONEY—Dull and unchanged, extracted selling at 5c. for dark and 7 to 8c. for white.

POTATOES—Dull and weak. Old potatoes are quoted at 60c. on track, and all sorts of prices up to 75c. are asked for small lots. New American potatoes are selling at $3 per bbl. and demand is fair.

ONIONS—There is the usual demand at $2 to $2.25 per sack for Egyptian onions and at $2 25 to $2.50 per crate for Bermudas.

HOPS—There is not much doing. Small lots are selling at from 17 to 18c., and lots of five or more bales at 15 to 17c., according to quality. A New York report, under date July 3, says: "Several local dealers reported additional purchases in the interior New York markets at prices that were refused a week ago, and letters from some points indicated that not a few late strong holders are more inclined to sell, probably in view of favorable condition of the growing crop and falling off latterly in export buying. In the local market there was hardly any business outside of ordinary sales to home brewers, the most of which were extremely close to present cost in the interior. A cable report received Saturday stated that crop prospects in Germany are still poor, but more favorable in Austria, France and Belgium, and generally good in England. The European markets to all accounts remain quiet pending the development of the crops."

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

There are only a few dressed hogs offering, but there are quite enough for the demand. Prices are much as before at $7.50 to $8. Hog products continue firm and in good demand. A carload, consisting of green rolls, hams and long clear, was shipped the early part of the week. The prices obtained were 11¾c. for hams, 9½c. for the rolls and 10½c. for the long clear. Stocks are now pretty well rounded up.

BACON—Long clear, 10½ to 11c. Smoked backs 12½c., bellies, 13½ to 14c. rolls 10½ to 10¾c.

HAMS—In good demand and firm at 13 to 13½c. for smoked.

GREEN FRUIT.

Trade is brisk all round. Demand for oranges has fallen off, but prices are well maintained. Lemons are still selling freely and prices are firm and tending upwards. The market is well supplied with bananas and demand is absorbing them at steady prices. A demand is arising for watermelons but prices are 10 to 15c. lower than a week ago. The season for pineapples is almost over, receipts being confined to a few "sugar loaves," which sell at from 16 to 20c. We are now beginning to get our own fruit and vegetables and receipts of those of American growth are falling off. Cabbage is getting scarce, and the strawberry season is nearing its close. Raspberries, red currants and cherries of home growth are arriving. We quote: Oranges—Messinas, ½ boxes of 80's $2.50; ½ boxes of 100's, $2.50 to $2.75; lemons, $4.50 to $5.25; bananas, $1.50 to $2; strawberries, 4 to 7c.; raspberries, 50 to 85c.; cherries 90 to $1.25 per basket; red currants $1 to $1.25 per basket; tomatoes $1.65 to $1.75 per crate; cucumbers, $2.50 per crate for American and 75c. per dozen for Canadian; beans, $2.25 to $2.50 per crate; cabbage, $2.50 per bbl. for Canadian. California fruit—Apricots $2.25 peaches $2.to $2.25, cherries $1.75 to $2. Watermelons, 30 to 35c. each

FISH.

Supply and demand good. About the only change is a decrease in the price of blue back herring, which is now quoted at $2 to $2.50. We quote: Fresh sea salmon, 15c.; skinned and boned codfish, 6½c.; Labrador herring, $3 per half bbl.; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 11 to 12½c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; pike, 5 to 6c.; perch, $2 to $3 per 100 as to size; blue back herring, $2 to $2.50 per hundred; blue pickerel, 4 to 5c. a lb.; yellow ditto, 7 to 8c. a lb.; shad, $3 a dozen; salmon trout and white fish, 7c.; eels, 6 to 8c. a lb.

HIDES, SKINS, TALLOW, WOOL.

HIDES—The market is still in a demoralized condition and prices are lower, the wholesale quotations for buffs being 4¾c.

SKINS—Calfskins are easier, though select skins are still selling at 7c. Lambskins are higher at 40c. and pelts at 25c.

TALLOW—Is weaker, jobbers paying 5c. and selling at 5½ to 5¾c. according to quality. Rough is unchanged at 2c.

WOOL—Is coming in freely, people in the country being anxious to sell, and the price for straight lots is 17c. Some of the mills are beginning to buy.

PETROLEUM.

No change have yet been made in prices, consequent upon the new tariff which went into force Saturday last, but it is expected that there will be in a few days. We quote in bbl. lots, Toronto: Canada, 13 to 13½c.; carbon safety, 17½ to 18c.; Canada water white, 19c.; American water white, 21 to 22c.; photogene, 25c.

The Counter Tea Mixer is becoming more popular, retailers beginning to realize its many advantages. W. H. Gillard & Co., of Hamilton, who are sole agents for Western Ontario, report very large sales of this unique little machine. Grocers making a specialty of teas should be provided with one.

The Winnipeg Produce and Commission Co. (Ltd.) has been incorporated. Joseph Carman is manager, and the firm announces that it is prepared to receive consignments of green, dried and evaporated fruits, produce of all kinds, canned goods, maple products, job lots of groceries, etc. Correspondence will receive the firm's prompt attention.

In jobbing quarters there is little confidence in the immediate future of the tea market. It is admitted that prices are low and the consumption is well up to the average for the season; but prospective heavy offerings through the auction room lead to the belief that importers are not enjoying a very enviable experience.—New York Journal of Commerce.

The St. Croix Soap Mfg. Co. have secured the services of J. F. Wallace to represent them in Ontario for the sale of Surprise soap. Mr. Wallace is well known in the Northwest, which territory he has been covering for several years for Taylor, Scott & Co., and his genial manner and business methods will soon win for him a warm spot in the hearts of patrons nearer at home. H. M. Hirschburg, who has been representing the company for the past few months, is no longer with them.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, July 6, 1893.

GROCERIES.

The week has not shown any unusual development in the grocery market, business ruling on the quiet side. It is worthy of remark however that advices from the country show a better line, and on this account many of the houses anticipate improvement in the volume of trade shortly. There are no striking changes in any of the leading staples. Advices on raw sugar indicated easiness at one time, but the fact had no effect on values here at all. Syrups and molasses rule much the same. Tea is rather easy in tone, with sellers anxious to clean up before the new crop is on the market in earnest. Coffees and spices are about the same, while dried fruit and rice are essentially steady in tone. Canned goods furnish no feature except that there is a scarcity of salmon on spot and a good demand for the article.

SUGAR.

The sugar market does not show much change, the tone on spot ruling as steady as ever. A little easier feeling was noticed in raws at one time toward the middle of last week, but latterly the market has firmed up again. On spot refined is firm with the demand more active, but refiners accepting orders only for prompt delivery, and there does not seem to be any prospect of decline in the near future. The stocks in the country are low. We quote granulated 5½c. and the lowest yellows 4½c. with prices running up to 5¼c. according to grade.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.

There is no change in the position of the molasses market. The combine still keeps the price at 30 to 34c. and outsiders continue to sell at 30 to 31c., a fairly good business being reported at this basis. According to advices from Barbadoes exports from there show a decrease to Canada and an increase to the United States.

In syrups, sales of several large lots of American stock have been made on Western account at 18¾c. per gallon. Canadian syrups have been enquired for, and sales are noted at 2½c. per lb. in the wood.

TEA.

The tea market rules on the easy side, with rather more buyers than sellers, but a fairly good movement is reported, Japans changing hands at 20 to 25c. We quote:—Japan, common, 11 to 13c., medium 15 to 17c., fine 18 to 21c, and finest 24 to 30c.; black and green are quiet and do not furnish any change.

COFFEES AND SPICES.

The coffee market has shown a downward tone in New York, but there is a fairly steady tone here. We quote: Jamaica, 19 to 20c.; Maracaibo, 20½ to 22c.; Rio, 19 to 21c.; Java, 24 to 28c.; and Mocha, 25 to 28c.

In spices there is no particular change, and we quote: Jamaica ginger, 16 to 18c. for common and 20 to 24c. for finer qualities. Black pepper, 8 to 9c.; pimento, 6½c.; nutmegs, 50 to 52½c. and $1.

RICE.

There has been a good movement in rice in a jobbing way and the tone is firm. Advices from Burmah speak of an excited feeling. We quote ordinary $3.85 to $4; Japans, $4 to $4.50; Patnas and Carolinas, $4.50 to $6.50.

DRIED FRUIT.

The dried fruit market is essentially quiet and steady. Old stocks of off-stalk Valencia raisins are steadily diminishing, and it looks as though they would be well cleared up before any new goods arrive. There is no layers here in first hands. We quote off-stalk 3 1-4c. Currants are about the same, with little doing. Continued reports of damage to the growing crops in Greece is attracting some attention, but has had no effect on values here. We quote 5 to 5 3-4c. according to quality for good sized lots.

GREEN FRUIT.

There is a brisk demand for lemons, further large export orders having been filled on United States account, and prices are firm at $2.75 to $4, according to quality and size of package. Oranges also have been in fair demand, and we quote $1.50 to $5, according to brand and size of package.

Pineapples have ruled irregular in price at 14 to 16c.

Bananas are steady. The steamer City of Kingston arrived on Monday from Jamaica with 12,500 bunches of bananas, 600 bags of cocoanuts, and a quantity of sugar, rum, ginger, etc. The bananas were in excellent condition, and found a very ready sale. There was a good demand from the West and Buffalo, but the greater portion of the cargo was disposed of here, the prices realized being as follows: No. 1's, $1.50; No. 2's, $1.10; No. 3's, 70c.; No. 4's, 60c. Cocoanuts sold at $4 per 100.

BEANS.

Beans are in liberal supply and prices are softer, although there is no actual change. Hand-picked are quoted at $1.60 to $1.65, and ordinary $1.25 to $1.30.

HONEY.

There is no change in the market, which rules at 6 to 8 1-2c., according to quality.

HOPS.

Brewers still keep out of the market and business is quiet in consequence. We quote 6 to 8 1-2c., as to quality.

POTATOES.

The market is easier, and prices are much lower than last week in consequence of increased receipts. We quote 50 to 60c. per bag of 90 lbs.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market continues dull and neglected. Smoked meats alone show any life, and attention is solely confined to them. Canadian short cut, per brl., $21 to $22; mess pork, Western, new, per brl., $22.50 to $23; hams, city cured, per lb., 12 1-2 to 13 1-4c.; lard, Canadian, in pails, 12 to 12 1-2c.; bacon, per lb., 11 1-2 to 12 1-4c.; lard, common refined, per lb., 10 to 10 1 2c.

EGGS.

The egg market rules easy. Receipts in the west are lighter, but arrivals here are still too heavy for the demand, which continues slow at 11 to 11 1-2c.

BUTTER.

The butter market is about the same. Salesmen in the country, although they still ask rather full figures, in some cases show a most accommodating disposition, as some of them were offering creamery to-day at 20 1-4c., which is a shading on their ideas of last week. But even at this concession exporters claim that they cannot afford to pay any such price in the country. We repeat our previous quotations and remark that very little business is passing. Creamery, 19 1-2 to 20c.; Townships, 17 to 17 1-2c.; Western dairy, 14 1-2 to 15 1-2c.

CHEESE.

As many anticipated, prices paid at the Ogdensburg board on Saturday were an advance on the ones ruling the week before. This makes it evident that buyers had to have the cheese and paid full figures for them. All in all, from various reports to hand the inference is that the June make of cheese is pretty closely sold up, and the fact will, no doubt, have due effect on the views of factorymen, as with cheese as well sold up as it is they are not likely to be very urgent sellers. On the whole, therefore, the season so far must have been decidedly profitable to them, except in the case of those who were so unfortunate as to be caught in the Thompson difficulty which from present appearances looks as though a good many factorymen would lose such a lot of money. The tone on spot, in view of the country purchase, is steady, although there was not much business doing. Sellers asked our quotations as below, and business was done on the street within our figures. At the wharf this morning 2,500 cheese by boat and 1,000 by rail were offered. The quality was about the same as last week, and all of it was sold at 8 3-4 to 8 7-8c. Finest Ontario colored, 9 1-4 to 9 3-8c.; fin-

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

Advices on sugar were somewhat easier at one time toward the close of last week, but the fact had no effect on the firm local position.

Advices state that the Empress of India, sailing from Yokohama on the 23rd, carried 4,000 packages of Japan teas for New York, 4,000 for Chicago, and 4,000 for Canada.

Burman advices to rice brokers here state that if war breaks out between France and Siam prices are sure to go up, as a blockade of Siam, one of the largest rice exporting countries in the world, will be a serious thing.

Latest advices continue to note heavy damages to the growing currant crop in Greece, and the fact is occasioning more interest here, as it now looks as though the damage would be unprecedented.

The shipments of Barbadoes molasses to Canada this season are placed at 18,406 puncheons, against 23,489 for the same time last year, a decrease of 5,083 puncheons. On the other hand those to the United States have increased 7,209 puncheons, being 13,681 puncheons, against 6,472 puncheons for the same period last year.

Lightbound, Ralston & Co. practically control all the currants in first hands in Eastern Canada, and they have been doing all the wholesale business for this section in consequence.

The Tamilkande Tea Company state that their sales for the month of June just past were the largest they have had to report.

It is understood that Caverhill, Hughes & Co. have secured the agency for Lifton's well-known lines of teas.

FACTS ABOUT CINNAMON.

Cinnamon is an evergreen and a species of the laurel family. It is cultivated the nearest to perfection in the island of Ceylon, where it often attains a height of thirty-five or forty feet. The trunk is short and upright, with wide-spreading and heavy foliaged branches; the leaves are very similar in shape to those of the common laurel, standing in opposite pairs upon short foot stalks—dark, bright green above, and pale beneath, with whitish stripes. The fruit is about the size of an olive, soft, with a sickly taste, and a dark blue color; it encloses a nut with a kernel. The wood is very soft and white, and almost useless, except for firewood. The root is thick with numerous branches, and yields abundance of camphor. The outer bark is smooth and of a greyish color; the inner bark is the cinnamon of commerce, and possesses a rich, sweet, pungent flavor. What are called cassia buds are the hexangular fleshy receptacles of the seeds; they are nail-shaped and much resemble a clove. They are prepared or cured precisely the same as the bark. The finest selected are packed in cases of 112 lbs. each, but those of an inferior quality in bags.

The Cinnamon tree is a native of Ceylon, but is now grown in Malabar, Java, Sumatra and Cochin China. There are several varieties, probably modified by soil and climate. Pure quartz sand is the soil in which it thrives best; that of the large cinnamon garden near Colombo in Ceylon, is of a hard, rocky and sandy nature, nearly on a level with Lake Colombo. Its situation is sheltered; the climate is very damp, showers are frequent, and the temperature is high and uncommonly equable. Trees which grow on rocky situations yield the best and most pungent aromatic bark, taken from the young shoots when the leaves are of a slightly reddish color. The tree ought not to be peeled before about the ninth year, and the proper time is from May to October. After the bark is taken off it is bound tightly up for two or three days, which causes it to undergo fermentation that facilitates the separation of the outer from the inner bark, the latter of which is known in commerce as the "First Sort Long." The substance then soon dries, curls up, and forms a quilled or pipe appearance. These quills or pipes, averaging about ten inches in length, are inserted into each other. The cinnamon is then carefully examined, sorted and put up in bales weighing 92 1-2 lbs., wrapped in double hampen cloths, the tare allowance for which should be two lbs., with an additional one lb. per bale for draft. The length of each bale is 40 inches, and when completed it resembles a roll of oil cloth. There is a standard classification for Ceylon cinnamon termed "piles." Each pile is subdivided into three numbers. Thus, number one, pile one, would be the finest and highest distinction; number two, pile one, the second; number three, pile one, the third; and number one, pile two, the fourth grade, and so on. This spice is thus sold by auction entirely from its classification in the London cinnamon sales, which are held every quarter of a year in Mincing lane.

The best Ceylon cinnamon is of a light yellow color, with an ivory-like grain, nearly as thin as paper, smooth, shining, admits of a considerable degree of bending before it breaks, fracture splintery; has a pleasant, warm, aromatic flavor, slightly astringent, with a mild degree of sweetness. When chewed the pieces become soft and seem to melt in the mouth. Other varieties of cinnamon found in trade are coarser and thicker, and are not so pungent and sweet. The ordinary uses of cinnamon as a spice for seasoning are well known; it is, besides, an article of the materia medica, but is chiefly employed as an accompaniment to other medicines. Cinnamon and cassia in their use differ from each other in little, excepting the degree in which the aromatic principle and flavor exist.—Merchants' Review.

BUSINESS AND RULES.

A good merchant, who lived in Florence in 1400, Agnolo Pandolfini by name, wrote out in his old age some of the rules and methods of business which had helped him to attain success in life, and this is what he says in regard to the management and advertising of his business: "I would have many workmen and boys, and would not put my own hand to anything, further than to command, provide and regulate, so that each one did his duty; and often I would say to them, 'Be honest and just, reasonable and friendly, not less with strangers than with friends; with everyone be truthful, and take good care that no one goes out of the shop deceived or discontented by your cunning or hard dealings, for this would be to lose liking and good will. A pleasing seller will always have plenty of customers, and among artizans good fame and competition do more than wealth.' I should command my workmen to sell nothing too dear, and with whatsoever debtor or creditor they made engagements, the contract should always be distinct and clearly expressed; that they should never be importunate, proud or evil-speaking, not quarrelsome, but agreeable, and, above all, anxious and diligent in writing, and in regard to what has been written."—Fame.

DRY GOODS.

MONTREAL MARKET.

The week just past has been of a dragging character in dry goods owing to the approach of the midsummer holidays. Buyers are mostly all home from England and the Continent, and the selections of fall goods which the houses are now commencing to receive are giving general satisfaction. With regard to fall purchases reports from travellers who are mostly all out indicate the same conservative spirit on the part of buyers that we have previously noted. A few orders, however, have been coming in, and it is satisfactory to note that sorting up business still continues good for light dress goods, seersuckers, cashmeres and colored cottons. Ginghams of all kinds have also met with a fair enquiry, as have also cottons. Remittances continue much the same as they were.

The most of the business houses closed from Friday evening until Tuesday morning on the occasion of Dominion Day.

Wm Agnew & Co. have received this week some fine lines of French goods. Notable in this connection has been some lines of Jacquardes in the fashionable colors, also some handsome lines of cashmeres.

Gault Bros. were busy during last week receiving fall supplies. Among them were several lines of foreign and domestic tweeds and worsteds. In this connection checks and plain patterns in moderate toned shades promise to be the go.

Caverhill, Kissock & Co., were busy stock-taking last week, and so were the other millinery houses.

Mr. Furner, the well-known dry goods merchant of Winnipeg, was in town during the week. He was on his way to the other side to make fall purchases. Mrs. Furner accompanies him.

Mr. J. H. Carnegie, one of Messrs. Jas. Johnston & Co.'s buyers, has not yet returned from the other side. The delay was occasioned by a severe attack of typhoid fever which laid Mr. Carnegie up for over a month. The trade will be glad to know that he has recovered, however, and is expected back sometime this week.

Mr. Andrew Gault, the senior partner of Gault Bros., and president of the Colored Cotton Company, is in Europe at present.

The dry goods trade have a conference with Mr. David Morrice this week in regard to the cutting on domestic cotton staples and what can be done about it.

Some nice lines of German velvets and silks have been received by Wm. Agnew & Co.; also some heavy German beaver cloth for ladies' mantles in shades of blue, slate color, and blue black.

TORONTO MARKETS.

A clearing line of this season's worsted trouserings in colored goods is being offered by W. R. Brock & Co. at about 40 to 70 per cent. below their value.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have opened a job line of ladies' Windsor ties, enabling them to offer $1.75 goods for $1.20 and $3.50 goods for $2.25.

Alexander & Anderson's travellers have started out this week on their respective routes with a full range of samples for the coming season.

John Macdonald & Co. have received some new shot bengalines in bright greens and Humboldts—the new shades. Black and colored velveteens are to hand, in a full range of qualities and colors. Some novelties in fancy silk lisse ruchings and frillings in bright and pretty colorings and in the newest designs. A shipment of 100 cases of French black and colored henriettas are to hand, with full ranges in blacks in all the latest colorings.

Alexander & Anderson have just received some scarce shades in colored velveteens. They were particularly fortunate in securing the scarce and seasonable goods. Scarce shades in cashmeres are also to hand.

W. R. Brock & Co. have received a further shipment of lace goods, comprising black and cream fancy laces, Irish trimmings, torchon laces, veilings and complexion nets, and low priced lace curtains.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have received another shipment of the famous ebony dye fast black bottom hose that they are running at $2.25 per dozen. This is their third repeat of these goods this season.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence are in receipt of a shipment of Japan silks in creams and light colors. They have now a full range of prices in stock. Summer costumes are being made, to a very large extent, from this class of goods. Velveteens are being received largely in anticipation of big fall requirements.

W. R. Brock & Co. are making a very complete exhibit of black and blue worsteds, black and blue serges, black and blue trouserings, in all popular makes and qualities. With these staples, which they consider all-the-year-round goods, they show a full range of flannels, etc., for summer suitings.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. are fortunate in having a full stock of Canadian mixed socks. These goods are scarce; their prices are 87 1-2 cents, 95 cents, $1.10 and $1.25 per dozen.

John Macdonald & Co. have a drive in silk-shot metal-fitted braces. They have also a drive in men's tweed rubber coats with officers' capes; the prices are said to be 25 per cent. less than previous prices on these goods. A case of very fine smoking and lounging coats in sizes 38 to 42 has been opened up. These are choice West End of London garments, and excellent in quality and finish. Tailoring braids and wide militarys are to hand. These are scarce goods, and since this order was placed the prices have risen. A full assortment of genuine celluloid waterproof collars are to hand; also harvest mitts and overalls in all materials.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. are clearing their stock of ladies' belts at a discount of 25 per cent. They also offer at the same discount the remainder of their stock of men's neckwear.

W. R. Brock & Co. have been receiving several cases of small wares to assort up their stock; many scarce lines will now be found in full range again, such as black and white hooks and eyes, elastics, garter webs, in whites, greys, etc., black and colored vel-vels in 18 yard end lengths, more economical on account of the varying lengths of skirts, livery buttons, H.B. marking cotton, mohair buttons, etc.

Parisian and Lyons veilings in new patterns and colorings are to hand with John Macdonald & Co. They have just passed into stock six cases of black and colored silk velvets. The colors are the latest, and very special values are shown in blacks; these goods are for the millinery trade.

Cream serges are in good exhibit with Alexander & Anderson. They also report a strong enquiry for navy and black Estimane serges. Creams and cardinals in Estimanes and fancies are having considerable demand for the moment. American and English challies in ranges of both light and dark grounds are selling well for the midsummer trade.

W. R. Brock & Co. have purchased a manufacturer's stock of heavy braces, consisting of over 6,000 pairs. These are put up in dozen bundles, and will be sold at a price which will allow them to be retailed at 12 1-2 to 15c. The regular retail price of these goods is 20 to 25 cents.

A shipment of wool boating shawls has been received by Caldecott, Burton & Spence. They are showing some great value at 37 1-2, 55, 75, 95 cents and $1.25. These numbers are especially good. They have also a splendid range of higher priced novelties in the way of silk mixtures. Another novelty in these goods is the range of shot effects, plaids and fancies, in which the colorings are very rich. They designate these the "Royal Wraps."

Wyld, Grasett & Darling have received a shipment of linens. Checked glass cloths are shown in large range and at extra values. Large lines of crashes, brown and white towellings, pure finished flax towellings, are all in full stock. Their well-known numbers of loom-dice and damask tablings are also restocked. Some nice things in delainettes and summer prints are being shown, as well as a large range of small neat patterns in colored indigos.

DANISH BUTTER INDUSTRY.

A large increase in the importation of butter into the United Kingdom from Northern Europe has taken place in recent years. Within the last ten years the receipts of Danish butter in the ports of this country have risen nearly three-fourths ,or from 304,722 cwt. to 876,211 cwt., and those from Sweden in a still 234,987 cwt. It has, therefore, been greater ratio, or from 67,821 cwt. to deemed desirable to collect the information at present available in the Intelligence Department of the Board of Agriculture on the condition of dairy farming and the development of the trade in dairy products in those countries. While the supplies furnished by Germany have not augmented in this interval, so much activity has been recently shown in developing dairy farming in Schelswig-Holstein and other northern provinces of the German Empire as to justify the including of that country in the present survey. From the reports which have been issued we give the following relating to Denmark and Sweden :

Almost all Danish agriculturists, whether the landed proprietor with his 300 cows, or the crofter with his one or two, with like zeal and with equal profit, comparatively speaking, take part in the manufacture of butter. This has been mainly brought about by the adaptation of centrifugal power for obtaining the cream from the milk, introduced into the Danish dairies about ten years ago. At the present time steam centrifugal separators are employed in all parts of the country by large proprietors and farmers. The dairies are either run by landowners who buy milk from small farmers and occupiers, or co-operative societies are formed by the farmers themselves for the purpose of establishing factories, to which the milk is consigned by the shareholders and made into butter. The trade in Danish butter is now arranged in such a manner that the English merchants and dealers telegraph their orders weekly on Thursday to the wholesale exporters in Denmark, and the butter is dispatches by steamship on the following day. The freight is paid by the purchasers, and the price is regulated by the Copenhagen quotation on the day of shipment. The market price of Danish butter is fixed by a committee at Copenhagen, consisting of a chairman elected by the Association of Wholesale Dealers ; four of the largest butter exporters in Copenhagen ; a local dealer ; a butter broker, and a dairy farmer representing the Zealand Co-operative Agricultural Society.

In Sweden great advantages result from the fact that young men who are going to farm their own land, or to make a livelihood by farming, learn their profession at one of the two State agricultural colleges, just as future soldiers and sailors learn their profession at the State naval and military colleges. One rather unfortunate consequence of the improved methods employed in Sweden has been that whereas the quantity of more expensive butter has vastly increased, the quantity of ordinary butter has greatly diminished, and this circumstance has placed butter beyond the reach of many of the poorer household in which it was formerly abundant.

In Southwest Sweden dairies have increased greatly during the last eight or ten years, and may be classed as follows: Estate dairies, which only use the milk produced on the estate ; estate dairies, which, besides the milk produced on the estate, receive milk from the producers ; dairies belonging to private persons or to companies, and co-operative dairies, in which the producers of the milk are interested as shareholders. The principle of the co-operative dairy is that the farmers in a district jointly build a dairy, where the milk produced by them is refined for their mutual benefit. By these means the farmers take the dairy industry into their own hands. The whole profit goes to the producers of the milk, and expensive intermediate parties are avoided. Practically all the butter exported goes to England. The export of butter in 1890 is given above as 294,479 cwt., and the import of butter into the United Kingdom from Sweden in that year was 224,235 cwt.—Grocers' Review.

Letter. Order Department

Have you anything in stock you want to clear out before the Fall campaign? Have you any lines you want to make a run on? The way to sell them is by telling the retailers you have them. The way to tell the retailers is by advertising in THE CANADIAN GROCER. Before the traveller has left your office the advertisement has had an interview with the probable buyer. The buyer may be out of town when the traveller calls, but he has THE GROCER in his pocket. The country dealer may be located "much out of the way," and may be busy when the traveller calls, but is always at home to THE GROCER.

Have you a "Letter Order Department" of your business? If you have not you are losing money every day. Have you ever figured out the net gain in favor of letter orders? Wholesale dry goods men pay great attention to letter orders on which they claim considerable extra profit. THE CANADIAN GROCER is the only medium that will call forth letter orders.

The trade outlook at the moment is of an assuring character. From far and near over the Dominion comes promises of a good harvest both in cereals and fruits, while the hay crop, good as it has been during the last year or so, is better this. The value of the hay crop is all the greater in view of the failure of the crop in Great Britain and on the Continent, and the subsequent demand which has arisen in those parts of the world for the Canadian product. In all branches of trade a fair and a healthy business is being done, and the prospects for fall trade are better than they have been for some years. Merchants everywhere are catching the inspiration and hopefully they all speak of the future. A rush, however, they do not, as a rule, anticipate. What they look for is a good steady trade. And wisely they continue to buy with much the same degree of caution that has characterized them for some time. This, of course, entails frequent purchases, and in this way the aggregate volume of trade is well maintained. In fact, it is larger so far this year if we can accept the testimony of the wholesale trade.

And why should it not be so? Speculative or indiscriminate buying frequently means the overstocking of the retailer's shelves with unsaleable goods which in turn means the tying up of so much capital that might be otherwise utilized in purchasing fresher or more modern goods. By purchasing in smaller parcels not only does the retailer decrease the chances of his shelves being overstocked, but increases the opportunities for saving his discounts, a by no means unimportant matter, seeing that from this source many manage to raise enough to pay their rent.

Some idea of the financial condition of the United States may be gleaned from a perusal of the reports issued by the mercantile agencies regarding business failures in that country since the beginning of the year. The total number, as shown by Bradstreet's, was 6,239, the largest ever reported, while the liabilities were nearly 171 millions, compared with a little over 56 1-2 millions in 1892. The percentage of assets to liabilities was 61, a gain of 10 per cent. over the previous year. Of the total liabilities, however, $121,582,539 were for the second quarter of this year, a decidedly alarming revelation. Something about equally as startling is the fact that during the six months no less than 175 banks failed, owing $43,200,000, compared with 32 banks with liabilities of $5,955,000 for the same time last year.

The great trouble with the United States banking system is its want of elasticity at times when expansion is urgently required. It was at first merely an expedient of war finance, but notwithstanding this it has obtained all these years, much to the detriment of the trade and commerce of the country. The disadvantages of the system has long been recognized, and many have been the signs that have gone up for such a system as that in vogue in Canada. Lately the agitation has become more pronounced, and an effort will probably be made to induce Congress to undertake the revision of the system at its forthcoming special session called to repeal the Sherman Silver Act. A radical change is what some are calling for, and so high an authority as the N. Y. Commercial Bulletin asserts that "the wants of the situation can be properly met only by a total abandonment of the principal of bond guarantee, and its substitution by constituting the entire assets of the banks and the duplicate liability of their stockholders subject to a first lien in behalf of the notes." This is practically what we have in Canada to-day. Here the amount of a bank's notes in circulation is governed by the amount of its paid-up capital, while in the United States the bank that finds it necessary to expand its circulation is compelled to go the round-about way of purchasing Government bonds to the value of something like ten per cent. in excess of the issue.

The importance of saving the discounts has long been recognized, and the live and energetic business man will strain every nerve to secure them; but it is only recently that we have heard of an organized effort being made for the attainment of the object. It was no less than the formation the other day of a company in New York to be known as The New York Merchants' Discount Company. The object is to advance money to retail merchants to enable them to pay their bills on time and secure the discounts. A charge of 2 per cent. is to be made for the accommodation. The wholesaler, in addition to the benefit of receiving prompter payments, will be released from the possibility of loss, the company assuming all responsibility for the payment of its clients' debts on orders issued by it. The company protects itself by requiring the retailer to turn to it his cash capital and his daily or weekly receipts, and in return supplies him on demand with orders upon his jobber for whatever goods he may require. Any movement that will tend to help the retailer in the saving of his discounts or assist him in any other way is worthy of support, but we have not much faith in the scheme as promulgated by the New York Discount Co. In the first place such discounts are usually not liberal enough to alow the retailer to pay 2 per cent.for his accommodation. In fact, in some instances, that percentage would eat up the discount and a fraction besides. Another objection, it seems to us, in the scheme is that it would place the retailer somewhat in the position of a child. Self reliance is a characteristic that every business man should possess. In what direction this would be cultivated by the Discount Company is obvious.

There are some things a knowledge of which a merchant desires, and rightly so, to keep from his customers. For instance he studiously tries to keep them in the dark regarding the cost of his goods; and for more reasons than one. The acquirement of light in this particular by the consumer would increase the difficulty of the retailer to make a living profit; and that is hard enough now, goodness knows. Then it would be safe to wager that the customer who acquired the ability to read the mystic signs would reveal it to his friend and the latter would whisper it in the ear of someone else. In this way on it would go, until the cost mark, particularly if it happened to be in a country town, would be known and read of all men. And of course the merchant's strongest competitor would also be let into the secret by some one. There are some people whose curiosity leads them to undertake the deciphering of cost marks, and the sharpest of them frequently succeed too. Only the other day an instance of this—and one which caused the firm a great deal of annoyance—was brought to our notice. The firm in question is now racking its brain to devise a mark which will defy the ingenuity of its prying customers. And this is what every business man should do who finds himself in a similar position.

KEEP OUT OF A RUT.

Keep out of a rut. Don't be erratic or unstable. Keep your eyes and ears ever open for new ideas. Set your own thinking faculties at work, and what good ideas you can get from others appropriate, couple them with your own, and put to practical use. The trouble with some business men is not that they lack ideas, or that they do not see in the methods of others something that would be helpful to them, but that they lack the purpose to practically experiment with them. "Yes, it's a good scheme and would prove helpful, and some of these days I'll give it a trial," is the sum and substance of what they say. And there the matter often ends. "Procrastination is the thief of time" in business life as well as in any other sphere of life. In order to keep out of a rut men must be watchful, thoughtful, and quick to act. Ruts lead directly to the door of dry rot, to enter which means eventual failure unless somebody comes along and leads you out. Many of the methods which brought success and perhaps fortunes to our forefathers are too antiquated for to-day, for evolution is ever at work in the commercial as well as in the natural world. Some of the methods and practices of the generations that have gone are still good. Their honesty, industry, and integrity particularly should be copied, for there are a good many to-day who hold that honesty is not compatible with success. "It's no use talking, if you want to succeed you have got to do a little sharp practice now and then," is the way some of them put it. Never was there a greater mistake made. "Sharp practices" may bring grist to the mill for perhaps years but eventually they will eat away the props of public confidence and then over will topple your business and out will leak all the "grist" that you may have gathered. There never was and there never will be a time in the history of the world when dishonesty was a premium on success.

In this day and generation there is more demand than ever before for the man of bright and original ideas, and who is fortified with the perseverance and patience necessary to carry them out to a successful issue in spite of opposition. Competition is so keen that success in any pursuit cannot be acquired without hard and persistent hammering. Success does not come to the genius who sleeps, no matter how great his ability. It has to be gone after like gold in the bowels of the earth, and it is oftenest, too, the hard worker that attains it.

Wrapping one's self up within one's self does not tend to help one out of a groove. On the contrary it tends to lead one deeper and deeper into it. By mingling with our fellows, not only do the views we hold become broader, but we acquire others, while petty jealousies and prejudices melt as acquaintanceships become extended. And this suggests the utility of business men's associations. They are undoubtedly, at present at any rate, the best existing mediums for propagating good fellowship and better business methods, and this can be best accomplished by the meetings partaking more of a social than of a cut and dried nature, as is too often the case.

PICKINGS AND GLEANINGS.

"I tell you what it is," said a grocer to me the other day, "if the druggists kick against the grocers selling patent medicines in country stores, the grocers and tobacco men ought to put a stop to them selling cigars and liquor. One man I heard made as much as $14 in a Sunday in those articles alone. What do you think of that, and he is only one of the many?"

It is hardly fair for one grocer to be allowed to sell liquor and another not, It gives one an advantage over the other which by right he should not have. It is an injustice. Groceries in connection with a liquor store act as a blind to secret drinking. Many a woman has a bottle of ale, rye, or brandy entered down in her book as tea. Their husbands are not surprised at the tea bill being larger one week than another because it is possible for them to have more friends call and stay for tea one week than another. One grocer had to charge eight pots of marmalade in the book in one month which in reality was liquor.

"So the Wednesday afternoon has been a success this year, Mr. Jones?"

"Yes, sir; it has. If they keep it up this year we will have it a general thing next year. There is, I think, no doubt of that. I hear that we are likely to have a driving party once a month as well, which will be a good thing. Each one will have his own rig and take out his wife and family or young lady. They will meet at a given point and drive to some pleasant place a little way out of the city, there have refreshments, and return home, all feeling the better for the outing. It is going to be held on a Wednesday afternoon.

"I hear that some of the customers are kicking about you having the afternoon, Mr. Jones."

"Very likely the people who kick against the half holiday are generally found on the dead beat list." C.T.

TEA WEIGHTS AND TARES.

DEAR GROCER,—In a former letter I gave you a few facts about purchasing teas, which you were pleased to call an "Interesting tea story." I have been questioned very much by some retailers to give them further particulars concerning this little storey, but I declined to do so on principle. I merely mentioned the facts as an example and warning to the retailer to pay more attention to teas, both in buying and selling, as there is no article which they keep for sale so lucrative and so binding to their trade as in giving good tea, which should be carefully selected and made to suit all tastes.

There are some other abuses prevalant among some wholesale dealers in tea which the retailers will do well to look into more closely. That is regarding the weights and tares of packages, which to my mind is far more important than the stencil mark or particular name of the tea estate, whether it is marked bulked on estate or in London, or whether it is marked "Pekoe" or "Pekoe Souchong." If a sample of tea is shown without distinctly stating what it is, or if it bears no marks to indicate what kind of tea it is, (which often occurs with the wholesale buyer) and it is liked, chosen, and purchased, and the bulk tea correspondends exactly with the sample, that is considered quite satisfactory to the wholesale trade, and why it should not be so to the retail trade I have yet to learn. It is not an unknown thing to have happened, for the wholesale buyer to be mistaken in supposing he had bought a Ceylon tea and it turned out to be an Indian when the invoice or tea arrived to hand and the marks were made known. Of course such cases are the exception and not the rule, and I do not wish it to be understood that I at all countenance the practices of some dealers, who, when asked particulary for a Ceylon tea, show samples of anything and everything and chance if it will suit or not. But in weights and tares of packages there should be no mistakes and if there should be mistakes occuring frequently by any one firm it can be put down for certain that fraud exists of the basest kind.

Let me here instance a few cases which have come under my notice in Toronto. Not a hundred years since, a retail tea firm on Yonge street failed. The proprietor, an old man, purchased from a person calling himself a tea expert or broker (who, by the way, does brokering only for one firm and himself), sold some half-chests of cheap Oolong tea. This particular kind of tea was scarce at the time, and it was hard to get samples to sell at the low price asked. This broker secured a tea and sold it with a Ceylon, giving the old man to understand that it was only by buying the Ceylon with the cheap Oolong that he could accomplish the sale. Not many months after this the old man had to go into bankruptcy, and the stock was sold en bloc, and then sold out in lots at auction. The old man, joining with another, started again in business, and he, knowing of this cheap Oolong being in the auction stock, purchased it from the auctioneer, and when looking up the invoice of the tea for the tare of the packages, to their surprise no tare had been allowed, but the full gross weight was charged. And to this day it stands the same, as a monument of dishonesty of the firm who sold the tea. This poor old man told me he "widna 'a tho't it o' the mon" and the wholesale firm. Yet he had some more transactions with the same broker and firm after this, only to get deceived again in being cheated in an Indian tea, and peace was only restored by the broker making an allowance of some eight dollars on one package of Indian tea. I have been told by the present proprietor—who was then only a partner—that it ought to have been twice that amount allowed, as there was a former package having been "dosed" in the same manner. It is perhaps needless to say that the old man is out of business now, and is working at day labor, having lost his all, and there is no wonder at it. If such treatment had been going on for long, how could a man stand it and live?

Not very long since I noticed some chests of Indian tea in a man's store marked with a brush, the gross weights and tare, 24 lbs. I sold to the proprietor of the store: "You have a light tare there for such heavy looking wood and packages. Have you tared any?" He replied, "No, but I have one nearly empty, I will empty it and weigh it now," which he did in my presence, and it weighed a little over 28 lbs. He told me afterwards that he had weighed them all and that not one weighed less than 28 lbs. This tea came from Montreal.

Another case. I was showing a Congou tea some little time ago, and I found that a wholesale grocery house had the same tea, having bought it from the same broker who held it for sale. A certain retail grocer who was asking for samples of Congou tea happened to notice among the samples left him two samples bearing the same marks and number. He selected these two samples as his choice, and perceiving they were both the same tea, he used this as a leaver to get the tea cheap, which he did, I lost the sale, and he told me why, it was because of price. I could scarcely believe that he had bought it at the price mentioned, and I told him I doubted his statement and I thought he was only joking. Whereupon he took down his invoice and showed me the price. I happened to notice the tare allowed, which was 14 lbs., and drew his attention to it, as the tare which we were allowing for the same tea was 16 lbs., according to invoice to us. This same tea was sold to a few others whom I do some business with, and in each case the tares allowed were only 14 lbs. instead of 16 lbs. The wholesale firm was spoken to about it, but they denied their responsibility. Two of the retailers to my knowledge tared the packages and found they weighed between 15 to 16 lbs. each package. There are some other instances of similar transactions which I could mention, but these will suffice I think to show how needful it is for every dealer to weigh and tare his packages containing tea. And I go further and say that the trade itself when cognizant that these practices and evils exist should demand an investigation, and then if continued make an exposure of those firms practicing such fraud.

If my statements are doubted I will give the names to THE GROCER privately, that they may investigate and be satisfied that such practices and evils do exist in the tea trade. If some young men in the employ of such firms were known to be constant visitors of the bucket shops which invest our city, they would perhaps engage a private detective to watch them for fear they were using money not their own, and that they were going to ruin. But if the young men in business houses were looked after by their employers more carefully and considerately with a desire to lead them aright in setting them good examples for truth and honesty, we would not have so many of our young men going astray and robbing their employers and breaking the hearts of their parents. It is needless for me to say that in all such cases as I have described, when found out and exposed, it undoubtedly promotes distrust and tends to demoralize the tea trade, and breeds want of confidence and integrity among buyers and sellers.

REGARDING WEIGHTS.

Sugar, butter, oleomargarine and tobacco all shrink in weight. It is said that the damp brown sugar will lose 25 pounds in a barrel through drying out, but the more expensive refined sugars do not lose much.

Butter shrinks about the weight of a large old-fashioned copper cent in every pound within a short time after it is churned. Some farmers, in order to be safe and prevent their butter being seized as light weight, still keep the big copper cents and put one on the scales with the regular pound weight when weighing out the pound cakes.

A certain well-known tobacco firm, in the keenness of competition, guaranteed full quarter-pound lots of the article, and to allow for the shrinkage added an extra fraction of an ounce to each quarter pound sent out. For this the Government called them to answer in court, as they only paid tax on the quarter pound. The Government won the case, and the firm had to pay for all the extra amount as it left the factory, and not as it weighed when dry.—Philadelphia Call.

TORONTO GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

The Retail Grocers' Association met Monday night in Oddfellows' Hall and advanced arrangements for the annual excursion to be held August 2 at Niagara Falls via Niagara River Navigation Co.'s steamers and the electric railway.

President Clarke presided, and the attendance was representative.

Treasurer McMillan, on behalf of the Excursion Committee, reported that arrangements had been made to visit points of interest at the Falls at these rates: Boiling Springs, 25c.; Table Rock, 25c.; dinner at Parkside Inn and Cliff House, 40c.; Inclined Railway, 20c.; to Chippawa and return, 15c.; Maid of Mist, 25c. He said that hot water would be furnished free. The excursion tickets will be $1.25 for adults and 65c. for children.

The following committees were appointed re excursion: Printing—R. Mills and R. M. Corrie. Band and talent—F. S. Roberts, R. M. Corrie. Arrangements along route—President Clark, W. H. McCulloch, F. S. Roberts, M. McMillan, A. White.

It was decided to procure the services of the 48th Bat. (the Highlanders), and Roberts, Gibson, M. McMillan, A. R. Williamson were appointed to make the desired arrangements.

M. McMillan thought it would be a good idea to try and get all the grocers in the city to close their stores on the day of the picnic. He made a motion to that effect.

A. G. Booth (jocularly)—Why not petition the mayor to proclaim Aug. 2, a public holiday?

A member—Let's get up a petition asking them to close.

A. R. Williamson—If they won't close without signing a petition you can bet they won't close at all.

M. McMillan—I am going to close that day and take my whole family.

A. White—So am I, and I'll close, no matter who else does or does not.

J. S. Bond—Hear, hear; that's the way to do it.

Mr. McMillan's motion was adopted, and it was decided to have large cards printed for displaying in the windows of those who would agree to close.

A letter was read from Smith & Burton, wholesale grocers, Brandon, Man., asking to be furnished with a copy of by-laws and constitution for the guidance of the grocers in Brandon who were starting an association.

W. H. Marmion, 1,156 Queen street west, was elected a member.

A SOLICITOR WANTED.

A. R. Williamson again broached the subject of the appointment of a solicitor to collect the accounts of the members of the Association, and he moved for a committee to consider the matter.

Vice-President Gibson seconded the motion.

Robert Mills told, amid much laughter, of the unsatisfactory experience he had had with ordinary collecting agencies, and the success that had resulted from placing his accounts in the hands of a solicitor for collection. An advantage, too, in placing accounts in the hands of a solicitor was that you always knew where to find him, which was not the case with the ordinary collecting firm.

The motion prevailed and Messrs. Gibson, McMillan, Roberts, Mills, and President Clark will report upon the matter.

COMPULSORY CLOSING.

A somewhat lengthy discussion on the question of early closing followed. It was started by Mr. Roberts. He wanted to know if it was possible to get a by-law passed compelling all storekeepers to close at 7 o'clock every evening except Fridays and Saturdays. He explained that he introduced the question at the request of Mr. Westren, who was unable to be present.

J. G. Gibson—Why Friday night?

F. S. Roberts—Because Friday nights are busy nights with a good many.

J. G. Gibson—I am against everything that is compulsory. We have enough of compulsory law now. We've got to pay our taxes. (Laughter). Besides, some of those who are loudest in urging compulsory closing are the very ones who now keep open till 9 o'clock at night. I have no reference to you, Mr. Roberts.

Robert Mills said he had had something to do with the short-lived early-closing by-law of five years ago and knew some of the difficulties in the way. "Really when you come to look at it it is a hardship to make some people on the back streets close who could hardly be expected to do so. People in this country hate to be compelled to do a thing, and unless you have the sympathy of the public it is of little use trying to enforce an early closing by-law. Anyhow I don't think it is feasible, and I for one would not like to engage in an agitation that would only result in failure.

President Clark—I think we made a mistake in trying to get too much. If we had worked for closing at 8 instead of 7 o'clock it would have been better.

A member—Might as well make it 10 o'clock as 8 o'clock.

The President, continuing, said that another difficulty experienced before was in telling grocers from fruiters. Some who before had styled themselves grocers suddenly became fruiters, while fruiters who had hitherto carried no groceries began to do so.

A. R. Williamson—I have been closing at 7 o'clock every evening except Saturday for the last two years and shall continue to do so in spite of what anybody else may do. I don't believe I have ever lost a cent by it. On the contrary I have made money. In the summer my gas bill doesn't amount to anything. I am satisfied and wouldn't go back to the tread mill work—(laughter)—for that is what it was before. You might as well go to jail. It is independence we want. I am in as bad a corner as regards competition as any of you but I close. Mr. Williamson explained that his customers had become so used to his closing at seven o'clock that should any of them find it necessary to get any small article like a loaf of bread they were profuse in their apologies for having forgotten to get it after the store was closed.

A. G Marmon—It is of no use of your talking about law. Get the members of this Association to close and you will soon make the other fellows ashamed of themselves. Anyhow, all the business they do at nights now is selling a few bananas at 15c. a dozen, for which they paid 16c. a dozen. (Laughter).

A. White said that the men who closed had not the sympathy of the public. "Suppose," said he, "Mr. Sykes there closes and I don't. His customers will pass his door and come to mine. Gradually I become acquainted with them, and the chances are that I shall eventually take some of his customers away from him.

F. S. Roberts also deprecated the want of public sympathy, and he gave an illustration of it. During July and August he closes at 7 o'clock. That night after he had closed and was standing outside his store a lady whom he knew came up and congratulated him on having the independence to close early, and said that she and a number of other ladies were considering the advisability of helping all such. "Yet, do you know?" said Mr. Roberts, "she went right up the street and went into a store that was keeping open."

J. S. Bond—I believe if we had more independence we would get along better. I think the Association should do something in the matter.

Robert Mills said that the fact that so many grocers carried fruit increased the difficulty of closing early. However, he was satisfied that the agitation was doing good. Since it was becoming more the custom to pay the workingmen their wages on Fridays business was becoming much lighter on Saturdays. In fact with some grocers Fridays was the busier day.

The matter was allowed to drop, and the Association adjourned about 10.30 p.m.

AUSTRALIAN PRODUCE.

Nearly all the fruit and other produce brought from Australia and Honolulu by the SS. Miowera has not been disposed of by the commission men, and from all appearances a large trade will be transacted between the Australasian colonies and Honolulu and Canada. The fruit arrived in very fair condition on the whole, a few oranges and bananas being, however, over-ripe. The wholesale prices at which the fruit and produce were sold were as follows:

Oranges.—From $1.40 to $2 per box. As the season for California oranges is now about over, they were in very fair demand, and most merchants considered them superior in quality. The mandarin oranges were pronounced far superior to those received from Japan.

Lemons.—From $1.60 to $2.50. The demand for lemons is never very great here, but the Austalian fruit is much larger than either the Californian or Sicilian.

Apples.—From $2.50 to $2.75 per box. Although the apples are not equal to either British Columbian or Ontario apples, they were in good demand at this season of the year, as the market is almost entirely bare of this fruit. All the apples were sold immediately.

Bananas.—From $2 to $2.50. The wholesale prices of bananas dropped as soon as the shipment by the Miowera arrived, and the market has been rather glutted. The quotations have been reduced from $1 to $1.50 per bunch, while the fruit is in better condition.

Pineapples.—From $3 to $5.25 per dozen. Pines were in very fair demand as heretofore they have been almost a luxury.

Melons.—From $4 to $5.50 per dozen. At this season of the year there will be a good market for melons here.

Butter.—Only two packages were received, and they brought 28 cents per lb. The butter is of splendid quality, quite equal, if not superior, to the best creamery made in Ontario. During winter months, when creamery is as high as 28 cents per lb., it would undoubtedly pay to ship Australian butter. Whether it would pay to ship during the summer is doubtful, as 25 and 26 cents are then the ruling quotations.

Mutton.—The few sample carcases of Australian mutton were soon disposed of, and the general opinion was that the meat was quite equal to Oregon or North-west mutton. The shipment was sold at the same price, viz., from 14 to 16 cents per pound. Local butchers are, however, doubtful as to whether it will pay to ship Australian mutton. In the first place, a cold storage warehouse would have to be built here and kept running, which would mean a considerable expense, and, as the wholesale price of mutton averages from 12 to 14 cents per lb. all the year round, it is doubtful whether it would pay to ship from Australia. Australian shippers have figured that it would cost them 4 cents per lb. laid down on the ship, 4 cents freight, and 3 cents duty, making 11 cents, to which insurance must be added.

Mr. F. W. Ward informed a representative of the News-Advertiser that a leading freezer of Queensland had told him he would lay down mutton on the ship at 5 farthings or 2 1-2 cents per lb. Four cents per lb., Mr. Ward said, would be the outside price, while he also thought the freight could be reduced when the vessels were fitted with proper accommodation, but that would be arranged when Mr. Hoddart came over.

The local butchers are, however, still considering the matter, and it would probably pay them to ship during the winter months.—News-Advertiser.

MEDICINAL USES OF CHEWING GUM

A few years ago the writer was consulted by two prominent members of the municipal police force of New York City. The object of the consultation was as follows: About a week previous both gentlemen had abjured the use of tobacco, to which they had been excessively addicted for many years. The craving for "the weed" was intense, and resulted in a general disturbance of the nervous system, and in a dyspepsia, probably of nervous origin. After a futile trial of several remedies it occurred to me to recommend the use of chewing gum. Man is a creature of habit, and impressions left on the mental functions by almost hourly doing a given thing are not less serious than the loss to the physical system of the narcotic effect of tobacco. I thus reasoned that one potent element in the cure of the tobacco habit might be got rid of by giving the patient something to do that would engross the attention of the organs used in the indulgence of the habit. I also reasoned that any agent that would promote the flow of saliva from the salivary glands, would also by sympathetic effect through the vaso-motor system of nerves excite the secretion of the gastric juice,and thus exert a tonic effect on the mucous membranes of the stomach.

The gentlemen in question secured a quantity of Adams' chicle gum, and after a few days their unpleasant symptoms completely disappeared, their dyspepsia was relieved, and the distressing craving left them. These two cases led me to prescribe gum-chewing in a number of cases of a tonic dyspepsia that came under my care. I have not kept notes of these cases, but in nearly all a cure was effected, and in the few that did not progress to a complete recovery the benefit from the procedure was marked.

An article appeared in one of the leading medical journals that recalled to my mind very forcibly the result of what I might call the chewing gum cure of the tobacco habit in the cases to which I have just referred. The article was entitled "Chewing Gum in Fevers," and it called attention to the important part played by the salivary glands in continued fevers. I cannot do better than give it verbatim:

"Chewing Gum in Fevers.—The salivary glands play quite an important part in continued fevers, yet they are not considered in the treatment of the case. One of the first and most important restrictions in the patient's dietary is to drop all solid food from the list at the physician's request, and just then the salivary glands begin to lapse into a torpid condition which very often results in an inflamation, and, finaly, suppuration, and that disagreeable dryness of the tongue and fauces so uncomfortable to the patient. For the relief of this trouble I have found nothing of so much importance as some nice form of aromatic chewing gum, which relieves the thirst and dry mouth, improves the appetite and digestion, and restrains nausea, if any. Hence, some of the most disagreeable accompaniments of the disease are mitigated. I believe also that it materially aids the absorption of the medicine when the alimentary tract is so impaired by the incessant fever.

"I do not claim originality in this treatment, although I have never found any reference to anything of the kind. However, it may have been regarded as too simple to need mention; still it is, in my estimation, quite important in any continued fever."—N. Y. Medical Record.

My own observations have almost paralleled those of the author of this article. I have tried the gum in this connection and found that it accomplished exactly what was claimed for it.

In prescribing the gum, I have always given preference to that made by Adams & Sons' Co., of Brooklyn. Some six or eight years ago I had occasion, as Chief Inspector of Food and Drink in the New York Health Department, to investigate the manufacture of confectionery and chewing gum. At that time, and I have frequently since verified my work done then, I found that this firm was producing an excellent article in a wholesome, cleanly manner from a unique raw material. This material is a rubber gum, the exudation of a Mexican tree belonging to the rubber or coucha family. It is known as chicle. The tree in question produces a delicious fruit called sapodilla, which is eaten by the natives. The tree, so far as I know, has no medicinal properties, and no part of its products is toxic.

Believing that chewing gum has anti-dyspeptic properties, the manufacturers have put upon the market a brand of gum medicated with pepsin in order to secure the synergestic action of the latter substance. Although from a strictly scientific standpoint this would not be expected to aid in the cure of the disease, since pepsin is only active in an acid medium, nevertheless the addition of pepsin to the gum seems to increase its efficacy. This is perhaps because the alkaline carrier of the pepsin, the saliva, is speedily neutralized by the excessive amount of gastric juice poured out by the stomach under the sympathetic stimulation by the vaso-motor nerves.—Cyrus Edson, M.D., in the Doctor of Hygiene.

TO BE ENTERPRISING.

Stop. First let us see what this much-used word really means. Webster defines it as, "Bold, or forward to undertake; resolute, active or prompt to attempt; as, enterprising men often succeed beyond all human probability."

Almost every man engaged in business is called enterprising by his admiring friends, whether he is really so or not. The word has been thus lowered and betrayed from its true meaning. If a business man spends one-half of one per cent. of his year's turnover in advertising, plenty of people will call him enterprising. In reality he is not at all so; at least, such a scanty outlay as that is no proof of it. A new sign or an enlargement of floor space imperatively needed, each and every such mark of improvement is hailed as a mark of enterprise.

A man demonstrates possession of the business quality when he undertakes some task, which the ordinary mind regards as utterly impracticable, and makes a success of it. It is foolish and misleading to prate about luck. There are plenty of what are, humanly speaking, happy accidents, as well as those of the other kind, but the true business man is not so much in the dark as some suppose. He may not include a statement of his mental possessions in his announcements through the press, but there has been a heap of calculating and foreseeing done before his building was erected or leased, or his goods purchased.

Still, man is a fallible being, and is destitute of all information on certain matters of great importance in business. He cannot foresee the weather or just what notions his competitors may entertain next season. He may not know just how many competitors he will have a few months ahead, or what reckless ideas may be projected into the arena of trade. His undertaking, therefore, is largely founded on faith, faith in the soundness of his apprehension of the present situation and in the accuracy of his forecast. The starting of a new business under such circumstances, or the considerable enlargement of even a well-established one, may require a great deal of courage. This is enterprise, a bold attempt.

Enterprise is not to be measured by the amount of money invested, or the breadth of the undertaking; these are relative. A man with a few hundreds of hard earned capital may be enterprising as truly as his mighty brother, the universal provider. He sees, or thinks he sees, a chance to serve the public acceptably with accruing profits. To other eyes the ground appears to be fully covered, and all wants supplied, perhaps over-supplied. He, however, has looked the field over and has formed a definite opinion. He may not be able to put his conviction, in its entirety, into grammatical speech, but it is clear to him. He is conscious of superiority in some way to those whose competitor he proposes to become. He will make more fascinating exhibits of goods, keep a cleaner store, be more attentive to customers, study their wants more keenly, buy cheaper and sell lower, or make his offerings better known. In some or all of these particulars he reposes confidence and risks his tiny capital on that wide and uncertain sea whose shores are littered with the wrecks of every size and fashion of mercantile craft, from the least to the greatest. That is enterprise, and its judicious execution brings, sometimes, a reward that proves to be out of all proportion to its modest beginning.

Enterprise is not the promoter of wild-cat schemes; it is a happy union of mathematics and courage, a good understanding and a steady nerve. It can cipher out victories where others prophecy only defeat. It is the quality of the great general who possesses himself of sound information, has definite aims, comprehends the danger, but knows also the weight of his own battalions and what he intends to do with them.—Commercial Enquirer.

SOUTHERN POTATOES.

Southern growers are having one of the most favorable potato seasons experienced for many years. The season last year was such that the bulk of the Southern crop came in at about the same time, and prices ruled so low that many growers realized nothing for their stock, particularly in North Carolina, and many of the smaller farmers did not plant any this year. The larger growers, however, took advantage of this and planted increased quantities, and the acreage has been fully equal, if not larger, than a year ago, and receipts to this market have been unusually large but there seems to be no end to buyers' wants, and the market has held up beyond all expectations notwithstanding the enormous receipts. Last Monday the arrivals were the heaviest of the season for one day, footing up to 30,000 barrels. Buyers took hold rather slowly at first, but after trade started the market cleaned up promptly, and thousands of barrels more could have been placed, as buyers were shopping around for stock even late in the afternoon. The receipts for the last week foot up to 110,123 bbls, and during the month of June the arrivals were 352,340 bbls., against 318,851 bbls. in June last year. This season the demand has been large enough to keep the market cleaned up almost daily on a basis of from $2 to $3.50, with the average about $2.75 per bbl. The market has continued in such a strong, healthy condition that dealers and speculators have all made money, and the season is so far advanced now that the trade believe prices will gradually work up to a higher basis as the Southern supply becomes exhausted and before Long Island and near-by potatoes are plenty enough to supply the demand. The North Carolina and more southerly potatoes are well cleaned up, and from the immense quantity received from Norfolk the crop there must be pretty well marketed. Eastern shore (Virginia and Maryland) and Maryland potatoes are now arriving freely, but the crops there are comparatively light, and Long Island will not commence to arrive much before the tenth, and probably will not be plentiful for some little time. It is expected the Southern receipts will decrease from now on. Reports from Long Island are not very favorable, the extreme dry weather which prevailed having retarded their growth and caused them to come up poorly. Present outlet for the crop in this State is also unfavorable, many rotting badly, and damage is reported all through the State by potato bugs, which are very numerous this year.—N. Y. Bulletin.

SCENE FROM LIFE.

(Contributed.)

Scene: Grocery store. Enter Jones, carrying a petition for Wednesday afternoon closing.

Jones—Good morning, Mr. ——. Would you mind signing this paper signifying your willingness to close your store on Wednesday afternoon?

J. W.—I won't sign. I am going to suit myself. I won't close unless I like.

Mr. Jones—Well, you are the only man who has not consented.

J. W.—I don't care.

Jones—Well, good-day, sir.

J. W.—Good-day. (Exit Jones.)

Grocer (to himself)—I'll fool them fellows. I'll not close the first Wednesday when they close, but the next Wednesday, when they keep open because I would not close I won't say anything to them, but close; and when they ask me if I am going to close the next Wednesday following after that I'll say: "No; I closed last Wednesday and none of you closed. I won't close any more." That will let me out. I'll tell my customers I was willing to close but the rest would not.

He did so, but the rest were onto him. This is a fact.

It is a strange thing, but nevertheless true, that the mean man always leads the grocer. If they all close up but one, small though he be, he will break the movement all up. They will never follow the upright manly man, but always the mean man. It is not surprising that a body of men like the grocers cannot resist this weakness. They are like a lot of school children. They all say, "I won't if he don't," not, "I'm going to; let him do as he likes." Not the man who keeps his word but the one who breaks it leads them.

THE PACK OF NEW SALMON.

Dealers in canned goods and wholesale grocers generally in Montreal have of late been awaiting with considerable interest the receipt of some definite news regarding the possibilities of the run and pack of salmon on the British Columbia rivers. It will be remembered that some weeks ago THE GROCER referred specially to the fact that inside offers were being made on the coast for canned salmon for forward shipment. These offers were tempting enough to induce the booking of orders involving quite a lot of stock, almost every wholesale house in Montreal being represented, but especially the French houses, and now they would like to know whether the price is likely to net them a big margin or no. Their anxiety in this respect has been caused by reports to the effect that the output is to be restricted by the canners this year, and of course if this is the case those who did secure stock at $1 per dozen on the coast made a good purchase. The figure means laid down in Montreal $1.18 net. Whether the reports above referred to are correct cannot be ascertained definitely, but we give in our trade notes from Montreal a telegram from Vancouver which would throw doubt upon them. This telegram states that it is true that the pack on the Columbia River and in Alaska is short, but that the prospects are encouraging for a good pack on the Fraser, and that there is no talk about restricting the output. It is worthy of note, however, that there are no more offers of $1 from the coast, the best figure first cost there being $1.05, which is equal to $1.25 net laid down in Montreal, and offers are being made to jobbers here at about 5 to 10c. on that, making the price here for future delivery on the regular market $1.30 to $1.35 on new pack. These figures in themselves make it look as though the $1 purchases were good ones, and that the sellers in the case had been a little out in their reckoning.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. C. McCoy, who has been "doing" the city for Lucas, Steele & Bristol, is now on the road for them "a full-fledged drummer."

Mr. Adams, of Smith & Keighley, has been through the Niagara district and says they will have a large crop of all kinds of small fruit, but apples will be pretty much of a failure.

J. A Milne of Eby, Blain & Co. and Dave Munro of the Pure Gold Mfg. Co., have just returned from a trip up the lakes. They report business good and that the prospects for the crops on Manitoulin Island are bright.

Mr. McBurnie, of the Dresden Canning Co., was on the street Tuesday, and said that there was every prospect for a large crop of small fruits and of corn, peas and tomatoes. The wholesale merchants were not placing orders for futures, which he considered a good thing, for it would make packers more conservative in the quantity of goods canned. Last year's pack was greater than the requirements of the country called for.

RETAILERS' RESPONSIBILITIES.

While the Merchants' Review has always believed that it it unfair to hold retail merchants responsible for pecuniary losses sustained by consumers through the chicanery and dishonesty of packers of goods that the retailers handle, and therefore has always opposed pure food legislation that would put the onus on the retailers, yet we would urge the latter not to shirk any responsibility, as some merchants practically do, by buying goods without careful examination, and palming them off upon the public on worthless guarantees furnished by the manufacturers. Few consumers look beyond the retail dealer, and therefore the blame for much of the adulteration of goods is placed upon the retailers' shoulders, witness the current wit in the humorous columns of the newspapers that is levelled at the grocers who are supposed to sand their sugar and sell bogus coffee beans as the genuine. It is commonly believed that the retailer possesses sufficient knowledge of his wares to detect gross frauds by manufacturers and jobbers, and he seldom gets credit for ignorance, although it must be evident to the meanest intelligence that much time and patience are required to enable the grocer to obtain an intimate knowledge of the different grades of his goods, not to mention their chemical composition. In the exceptional cases of deception in the shape of adulteration, short-weights, etc., where there can be no question as to the innocence of the retail distributer, the popular notion seems to be that the latter ought to stand between producers and consumers, as a shield to the public, and this notion, it must be admitted, is not unreasonable. It should at least be the aim of all honest dealers to protect their customers, and unless such protection is afforded them it is hopeless to expect to obtain their confidence. Unless the dealer is willing to accept responsibility in respect of the merits of his wares, there can be no basis for the confidence which all dealers of sagacity are eager to establish in the minds of their patrons. All successful grocers, and especially the best known dealers, possess that confidence, and it is upon that safe foundation that they have been able to build up their profitable businesses. It therefore behooves every ambitious merchant to lay aside the excuse of ignorance and assume the responsibilities of his position. He must acquire sufficient knowledge of his goods to be able to form an accurate judgment of their qualities, their merits and demerits. He must not be content to sell goods entirely upon the manufacturer's guarantee, which has its uses, perhaps, in protecting himself to some extent, but should be able to speak of his own knowledge.

How many merchants give every article purchased a thorough test in their own households? It is probable that, if the custom of carefully trying new goods in grocers' own families were always adhered to. the sales of a good many cheap brands of goods would quickly shrink. It is often good policy to stand between the public and its own notions of what it wants. It hardly seems reasonable that canned goods "seconds" would meet with a demand worth catering for, if consumers were carefully informed of the comparatively small difference in the cost of the inferior and greatly superior goods. It may not be necessary, however, for the average dealer to do missionary work in behalf of a higher standard of quality, when the task involves the education of consumers' tastes. It may be sufficient if he protects them from the consequences of the dishonest practices of packers and producers, but this he ought to do if he takes a proper pride in his business, and must do if he wishes to establish a prosperous trade.—Merchants' Review.

A CREDIT SOLILOQUY.

I was handed a little slip of paper by one of the leading stationers on which was printed "Credit Man's Soliloquy," which I thought was one of the best things in its way that I have seen. It read as follows:

CREDIT MAN'S SOLILOQUY.

"To sell or not to sell?" that is the question
Whether it is better to send the goods
And take the risk of doubtful payment,
Or to make sure of what is in possession
And, by declining, hold them.
To sell; to ship; perchance to lose—
Aye, there's the rub.
For when the goods are gone,
What charms can win them back
From slippery debtors?
Will the bills be paid when due?
Or will the time stretch out till the crack of doom?
What of assignment? What of relatives?
What of uncles, aunts and mother-in-law,
With claims for borrowed money?
What of exemptions, bills of sales and compromise,
That cooly offers a shilling a pound?
And of lawyer's fees
That even eat up this poor pittance.
"Yes, sell we must
And some we'll trust,
We seek the just,
For wealth we lust;
By some we're cussed;
And stocks will rust;
But we skin the wust,
Or we'd surely bust."

Two letters have been received at Ottawa by Prof. Saunders, director of the experimental farms, from large hay dealers in Europe asking to be put in communication with large shippers of hay in this country. One letter is from J. Reports coming in from most of the farm districts state that, consequent on the improved condition of the weather, the crops will be very much better than was until very recently anticipated. The tea used by the Queen costs about 5s. a pound—so, at least, The Princess says. Her Majesty is very fussy about "the cheering cup." She does not like the flavor of the ordinary—that is to say, the general—blends of tea. Orange pekoe, a slightly scented and delicately flavored tea, is always used by her, and in the afternoons, whenever it is possible, she prefers to brew it herself in the regular old-fashioned way. The Duchess of Edinburgh, on the other hand, always takes hers in true Russian fashion—that is, it is brewed in a samovar, and drunk with a lemon in place of either cream or sugar.

Wisconsin cheesemakers are determined to outdo their Canadian brethren in the manufacture of a monster cheese for the World's Fair, the Muscoda and Lone Rock dairy boards having arranged to produce a cheese weighing 25,000 lbs., which is 3,000 lbs. heavier than the Canadian cheese. It will be made at Richland City, and the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway is putting in a branch track at that place, and will furnish a car at the factory for the cheese to be built upon.—American Grocer. Yes, they may succeed in making a bigger cheese, but it will be only a copy at best, and as for quality! Well, that may be surmised from the result of the competition in Chicago a few weeks ago.

Many forms of illness can be directly traced to river ice in various parts of the country, and a justifiable revolution against this article, and in favor of that which is made by artificial means, is quietly working out its destiny and shaping public opinion entirely in its favor. While natural ice may in some cases be entirely pure, the odds of its being so are by no means in its favor, and we believe the day has gone by—or, at any rate, nearly so—when the public will permit any doubt to exist as to whether the ice they are using is contaminated or polluted with sewage or other impurities.—National Provisioner.

United States Consul McCrillis, of Denia, Spain, says: "At this time the vineyards are looking well, and there is a prospect of a heavy crop. On account of this fact, and in expectation of a lower duty on these goods, there will be a much larger trade with the United States than for some years past, and much better raising will be sent, as the best ones have hitherto gone to England, second best to America, and the third grade to the Baltic, comprising Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Russia. The poorer and cheaper raisins are sent to Barcelona and Malaga for distilling purposes. Most of the raisins from here are marked 'Valencia,' but not a raisin is produced or packed at Valencia."

In connection with the development of the export of butter from Australia, the best methods of transmission are just now a matter of considerable anxiety in those colonies. Conflicting opinions reach them from this side as to whether the product should be sent frozen or in cool chambers only. While merchants here complain that foreign butter soon becomes unsatisfactory after it is thawed, some experts have declared that as the result of severe tests they have found the frozen article to keep best. The controversy can probably only be satisfactorily settled after a wider experience than has been had at present. The importance of the Australian butter industry is shown by the fact that in New South Wales alone over 18,000,000 lbs. of butter were produced last year.

An article in the Pesther Lloyd contains some information on the sugar industry in Hungary, from which the following is compiled : The number of sugar manufactories in Hungary will soon be increased by four new establishments, so that in the next season there will be 20 completely fitted up sugar factories in that country. The existing establishments have this year consumed more sugar beet than was to have been expected, owing to the fact of last year's crop having produced an excessive yield and the quality having been especially good. The quantity hitherto consumed and still ready for manufacture during the current season is estimated at about 9,000,000 metric centners. The crop yielded some 13,000,000 metric centners beet, leaving a surplus of about 4,000,000 metric centners, part of which has been exported, while the remainder it has as yet not been found possible to prepare for manufacture.

A new invention is announced in "Genie Civil" for keeping butter "fresh forever" if necessary, though a much shorter period than "forever" would do. The thing is done by the application of carbonic acid. The use of this substance is being largely extended to the industries, since its preparation in the solid state has made it transportable and of easy manipulation. The method of preserving butter by the use of carbonic acid is as follows : The butter is placed in a can, to which is attached a tubulure or neck with stop-cock. Thereby carbonic acid is injected at a pressure of six atmospheres. The ordinary air is expelled ; and the butter will remain in this inert medium as fresh and sweet as when it was first drawn from the churn. "By this means," says an English paper, we may soon have our breakfast butter from Australia without a grain of superadded salt, and independent alike of freezing apparatus and refrigerating mechanism."

FACTS ABOUT COFFEE.

The coffee bean is the seed of the Coffea Arabica, a native of Abyssinia and Arabia, but now naturalized in many tropical countries. In cultivation the coffee tree attains a height of between six and ten feet. The leaves are evergreen, very shiny, oblong and leathery ; the flowers are small and clustered in the axils of the leaves ; they are snow-white and of a delicious fragrance. The fruit when ripe is a dark red, almost purple, color, and the seeds are semi-elliptic and of a horny hardness. They are commonly termed beans, but the name is not derived from any resemblance to the common bean, but from the Arabic word bunn.

Coffee requires a fertile soil. In Brazil, hillsides exposed to the sun are usually chosen as coffee fields. The coffee plant usually begins to bear when it is three years old. When six years old it produces a full crop, and generally continues to do so for ten years, and sometimes even longer. The flowering or blooming of the coffee tree varies according to the latitude in which it grows and also according to local and meteorological circumstances. Ordinarily in the province of Rio de Janeiro the first flowering takes place in the months of August and September, and the second in November and December. Sometimes there is a third flowering in January and February. Coffee begins to ripen in April, and the process of gathering a crop on a plantation usually embraces about four months. As the ripening period, however, varies in different localities, the gathering season of the whole crop is somewhat longer. The gathering and preparation of coffee is not heavy work ; but in order that the quality of the product may not be injured much care is necessary.

In harvesting, the berries are stripped by hand from the branches and dropped into baskets or on sheets. Various methods of cleaning the coffee are employed in Brazil. One of these processes is to wash the newly gathered berry in shallow cisterns filled with water. Thus washed, it is put to dry on selected ground, called the terreiro, which is completely open to the sun, and is floored with some hard material—clay, stone or cement. Here it remains on an average three weeks, pains being taken to protect it from the rain, for which purpose more or less frequent removals to shelter are necessary. In the process of drying, the skin of the berry turns black and forms a brittle hull, and the white sweet pulp disappears almost entirely, leaving on the kernel a very thin covering called the pellicula or, "silver skin." The generally accepted theory is that the pulp is absorbed into the bean, and that it is to this absorption that the best flavor of the coffee is due. From the terreiro, the berry is conveyed to bins or tulhas, where it remains until it is to be passed through the machines which prepare it for market.

The berry goes first to the ventilador, or windmill, where the dirt, stones and sticks are blown out as much as possible ; then to the descascador, where it is hulled. The bean thus liberated is passed to the brunidor, in which it is freed from the pellicula and polished (and sometimes colored also) ; thence to the separador, where it is separated more or less completely, according to size and according to grade. It is now ready for sacking.

Another process is employed for what is called "washed" coffee, but only a small percentage of the entire production consists of this grade.

While the different grades of coffee produced throughout the world show considerable variation in quality and appearance, all are the product of the same species of tree, the differences being due to the variations of climate and manner of cultivating and preparing for market. The flat bean and peaberry coffee of Brazil grow upon the same tree, the latter on the ends of the branches and the former nearer the trunk. Peaberries are much more numerous on old trees than on young ones. The flat bean is oval on one surface and flat on the other ; the berry contains two beans, which lie with the flat surfaces facing. In the other kind the bean is almost round, having a crease in place of the flat side, and there is only one bean to the berry. The flat beans of Brazil, which resemble the Java bean, are often sold as Java coffee ; similarly, the round bean, or peaberry of the same country, is commonly sold as Mocha coffee.

Rio coffee is grown in the territory of Brazil whose market is the city of Rio de Janeiro, one of the principal coffee-producing districts of the world. It varies considerable in size and color, is very strong in flavor, in fact, the strongest coffee grown. Most of the coffee received here is a small-sized bean, varying in color from a dark green to a golden yellow.

Santos coffee, which is grown in the province of San Paulo, and shipped from the port of Santos, is softer than Rio, and rather milder in flavor, also larger in size. The quantity actually produced in the district os about 3,000,000 bags, nearly equal to the Rio yield.

Java coffee varies considerable in quality. The bean is large and of a yellow or browning-yellow color the latter tint being peculiar to the Java product. The better qualities which include private plantation and fancy marks, make a rich, strong infusion, and are very highly esteemed by consumers.

Singapore coffee is inferior in quality and is mostly sold under other names.

Maracaibo is a general term which includes the coffee grown in different districts of Venezuela, which are exported from the city of Martacaibo. Cacuta, Merida, Tovar, Breona and Trujillo are among the terms employed to distinguish the different kinds of Maracaibo coffee, and they rank, as regards quality, about in the order named. Maracaibo coffee resembles Java coffee somewhat, and is often sold as Java or mixed with the latter.

Laguayra coffee is also grown in Venezuela. It is dark dreen in color, and small in size, resembling Rio coffee in appearance and to some extent in favor.

Savanilla coffee is produced in the United States of Colombia, is a large sized bean, light in color, and often sold as Padang Java. The imports of Colombian coffee, as well as Venezuelan and Haytian coffee, to this country, have fallen off considerably since the discriminative duty of three cents per pound was imposed under the provisions of the reciprocity clauses of the present tariff.

Mocha coffee is a variety of which much is heard, but which is very seldom seen. It is a very small bean, roundish and irregular in shape and grayish in color. The Mocha bean is a product of Arabia, but the imports of Arabian Mocha into this country are ridiculously small compared to the consumption of so-called Mocha. Small-beaned coffees of a high grade, and produced in different countries are indiscriminately sold as genuine Mocha in the United States.

Ceylon coffee is an extremely handsome bean, uniform in size and shape. Plantation Ceylon is solid and oily, with a transparent tint, and is highly esteemed by European consumers.

Jamaica coffee is considered superior to other West India kinds, the Blue Mountain, a solid, heavy, oily bean, almost transparent, being a great favorite in England.

Porto Rico coffee is green in color, semi-transparent, and rather large and flat.

Central American coffee includes the product of San Salvador, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Guatamala, etc., and varies considerable in quality. The better grades are well esteemed and fetch a good price.

Mexican coffee of the better grades drinks well. A large, light-colored bean is produced in the Cordova district; it resembles good Maracaibo in appearance. In Oaxaca a coffee is grown that drinks like Plantation Ceylon. The Mexican production promises to rapidly increase during the next few years.

Hayti coffee ranks high in point of quality, when proper care is taken in its preparation for market. France is the principal consumer.

Liberian coffee is large in size and irregular in shape. It is yellowish in color and drinks rather rank.

The average composition of unroasted coffee is as follows:

	Per cent.
Caffeine	0.8
Legumine (vegetable caseine)	13.0
Gum and sugar	15.5
Caffeo tannic and caffeic acids	5.0
Fat and volatile oil	13.0
Woody fiber	34.0
Ash	6.7

In roasting the coffee beans lose from 12 to 18 per cent. in weight, according to age, the older the coffee the less the loss, but the gain in bulk is considerable. "Quakers," namely sun-dried and lifeless berries, almost always make their appearance during the process of roasting. They turn white, and are odorless and tasteless. Genuine Mocha is always more or less quakery.

The per capita consumption of coffee in the United States is about nine pounds, and is exceeded by only two other nations, Holland and Belgium. Of the world's total production of about 11,500,000 bags this country consumes about 40 per cent., or about 4,600,000 bags. The principal source of the United States supply is Brazil, which country sends us about 75 per cent. of the total quantity consumed here. Before the discriminative duty went into effect the proportion of the United States supply furnished by each country was approximately as follows:

Brazil	73.0
Venezuela	10.0
Dutch East Indies	3.5
Central America	5.0
British West Indies	0.9
Hayti	1.0
Mexico	2.9
U. S. of Colombia	2.7
Europe, including African and Mocha	1.0

The proportion of the United States supply furnished by each exporting country varies from year to year, according to the variations in the yield in the different countries, but the above table furnishes a sufficiently correct idea of the directions from which we obtain our annual supply of coffee. It is clear from the above figures that much of the so-called Mocha and Java consumed by our citizens consists merely of selected Brazilian beans. It may, however, console consumers to know that the Brazilian coffee planters claim that the finer grades produced by them are equal to the best that are grown in any other country, and the claim seems to be substantiated by the fact that they are so frequently substituted for Mocha and Java coffees.

AN ABSENT-MINDED MAN.

Stranger (in train)—"A man in your business can't get home very often, I presume?"

Commercial—"Home? I should say not. Why, sir, I get home so seldom that I can't remember half the time where I live. Have to telegraph to the firm to send me my address."

Stranger—"You don't say so!"

Commercial—"That's straight. Why one time I was away so long that I forgot I'd ever been married, and I took such a fancy to a pretty woman I met in a strange town that I eloped with her."

Stranger—"My! My!"

Commercial—"Yes, it would have been a terrible thing, but when I called on the firm during my honeymoon and introduced her the old man told me she was my wife before!"

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, July 13, 1893.

GROCERIES.

Trade exhibits a little more activity than a week ago, although the movement is largely confined to small lots. Travelers report a better feeling in the country, and the city trade while still quiet shows some improvement. On the whole the outlook is healthy. The most unsatisfactory thing about the situation is the continued slowness of payments. Sugar is in fair demand and steady. A little more business seems to be doing in dried fruits, and canned goods are fairly active, with tomatoes and corn if anything a little stiffer. The foreign coffee markets are reported a little better, but here the position remains about as uninteresting as ever. Syrups are a little easier, but molasses remain as before. A little more interest is being taken in Japan teas, but otherwise the tea market is about as dull as ever.

COFFEE.

On this market there is nothing moving outside a few Rios, but of course it is now the dullest part of the year. The foreign markets show some improvement and higher prices are looked for with an improvement in the financial conditions, but the buying is still from a hand to mouth character. We quote as before: Rio, 19½ to 21½c.; East Indian, 27 to 30c.; South American, 21 to 23c.; Santos, 21 to 22c.; Java, 30 to 32c.; Mocha, 26 to 27c.; Maracaibo, 21 to 23c.

DRIED FRUIT.

Trade continues fairly active. Valencia raisins are selling well at 6 to 6½c. for selected, 6½ to 7½c. for layer selected, and 4 to 5½c. for off-stalk. The preference seems to be for the cheaper goods. Some of the houses picked up considerable quantities of low-priced Valencias in New York for which that market had no use. They show better value than is usual for this kind of fruit, and the demand for them has in consequence been active. There seems to be an increasing demand for selected fruit. A fairly good trade is being done in currants of the better grades at prices ranging from 5½ to 6c. for good provincials, 7½ to 8½c. for fine Patras, and 8 to 9c. for Vostizzas. To get good quality high prices must be paid, and the poor quality is below the usual run. There is scarcely anything doing in prunes, and stocks are not heavy; 7½c. is the ruling figure for "U's" and "A's," and 8½c. for "B's," all in cases. There is no demand for dates, and prices are unchanged at 5 to 5½c. Cooking figs are in some request, but other kinds are not wanted. Sultana raisins are in fair demand at 6 to 7½c. for fine quality.

NUTS.

There is nothing new to note. We quote Brazil nuts 11 to 11½c. a pound; Sicily shelled almonds, 32 to 35c. a pound; unshelled, 16 to 17c.; peanuts, 13 to 14c. for roasted and 11 to 12½c. for green; cocoa nuts, $5 to $5.50 per sack; Marbot walnuts 11½ to 12c.; pecans 13½ to 16c.

RICE AND SPICES.

Rice is in good demand, principally for choicest fancy Japan at 5½ to 6c., and "B" at 3⅝ to 5¾c. Spices are all quiet and unchanged. Whole ginger is quoted at 20 to 25c.; pure white pepper at 20 to 28c.; and pure back at 14 to 16c.

SUGAR.

Nothing materially new has developed during the week. A little more is doing in small lots, but in car lots the demand is seemingly not as good as it was. In volume, however, business is probably little if anything less than a week ago. Prices are steady at 5⅝ to 5¾c. for granulated and 4½ to 5¼c. for yellows. The ruling figure for granulated, however, seems to be 5¾c. Raws are selling slowly at 4⅛ to 4¼c.

Willett & Gray, New York, in their weekly Statistical, say: The Week—Raws and refined unchanged. Net cash quotations are: Muscovadoes, 3.75c.; centrifugals, 4.75c.; granulated, 5.27c. Receipts, 14,787 tons. Meltings, 18,000 tons. Total stock in all the principal countries, 987,989 tons, against 1,326,772 tons at same dates last year. Afloats to the United States from all countries estimated, 55,000 tons, against 70,000 tons last year.

Raws—The week opened with sellers at 4⅜c. for centrifugals, but with buyers holding off. The London market, however, took on increased strength and advanced to 15s. 6d. for October beet and 15s. 1½d. for November-December f.o.b. on reports of repurchases by Austrian factories and of the growing beet crops again suffering from the drought. This firmness was reflected here, and while buyers were willing to go on, sellers withdrew their supplies, but on the reaction in London to 15s. 1½d. for October beet, holders were induced to part with considerable quantities at last quotations. Stocks are firmly held, and, while further business will likely be done on present basis, the offerings are rather light, and some holders have faith in higher prices.

Refined—Grocers began to show increased interest, and orders came in more freely, although the production exceeded the demand somewhat. The stocks in second hands, however, are now reduced to a hand-to-mouth basis, and a good steady business should be done from this time. Some grades of soft sugars were advanced, but no change was made in price of granulated, and the indications are that it will remain the same for the immediate future.

Foreign granulated is quoted to-day, by cable, at the equivalent of 5 9 16c. net per lb. landed, duty paid, for prompt delivery, in small double bags, with light offerings.

Willett & Gray's estimate of the world's sugar crop gives the grand total of cane and beet sugar production at 6,343,600 tons, against 6,653,445 last year, leaving a deficiency of 309,845 tons. The total cane sugar production is placed at 2,941,600 tons, against 3,151,525 last season, and the total production of beet sugar at 3,402,000, against 3,501,920 tons.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.

The syrup market continues quiet. Prices are a little easier, and in consequence of this some buyers are entering the market for large quantities. Prices range from 2c. up.

Molasses is not meeting with much sale, and what is moving is at about 32c. for barrels and 34½c. for half barrels.

TEA.

Generally speaking demand for teas continues light although there is a little more interest being taken in Japans and Young Hysons, more particularly the former, at prices ranging from 19 to 22c. Some samples of new Monings have arrived on this market, and they are in the hands of several firms. They show excellent value and the quality is good. Medium Ceylons under 9d. are a shade lower in England.

Advices under date of July 1 state that in view of the near arrival of new teas in London the Congu market has been practically at a standstill. Indian teas firm with quality of new poor.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The market is fairly active for dairy butter at rather better prices. Receipts are moderate and demand is fair. For choice dairy in tubs and pails 16 to 17c. is the idea while store-packed sells at 14 to 15c. Farmers' pound rolls are quoted at 17 to 18c. There has been a little dairy butter picked up for export. Creamery butter is plentiful but not in much demand. Tubs sell all the way from 18 to 22c. according to quality. Pound prints are held at 22 to 23c.

Cheese remains much about the same. Jobbers as a rule are getting 10c. per pound for June make and 9 to 9¼c. is the idea at the factories.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Dull. Jobbers are paying $1.30 to $1.40 for hand-picked beans and selling at $1.40 to $1.50; for medium quality they are getting $1.25 to $1.35.

DRIED APPLES—A little more enquiry is heard in some quarters but it does not seem to be general. Jobbers are taking a few at 3½ to 4c., but most of them appear to be going into store; 4½ to 5c. is the jobbing idea, the outside figure being asked for single barrels.

EVAPORATED APPLES—The season is about over and outside a sale here and there of quarters at 7c. there is nothing doing.

EGGS—There is not much doing and the feeling is easier. Jobbers are paying 11c. and selling at 11½ to 12c.

HONEY—Much as before, extracted being sold at 5 to 8c. for dark and white respectively.

POTATOES—Old potatoes are scarce and worth 50 to 60c. on track, while for small lots out of the store 75c. is the idea. New potatoes are quoted at $3.25 per barrel.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

Generally speaking the demand for canned goods is lighter than it was, although in some lines certain houses have been experiencing some activity. In tomatoes there is if anything a slightly better feeling, consequent upon some enquiry from the States. There have been some lines selling at 80c., but there were not many at that figure. The idea is 85c., and as a rule when anything under that price is accepted, there is some object in view. Peas are not in much demand. There are some selling at 80c., but at that price they do not show any profit to the jobber; 85c. is the rulling figure. Corn continues scarce and firm at 85 to 90c. One house in the trade that had a good stock on hand was a free seller at 80c. a few days ago, but they were being taken so rapidly that the price was advanced. Peaches are light in both supply and demand with prices unchanged at $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's and $3 to $3.25 for 3's. Plums dull and unchanged at $1.45 to $1.55. In apples stocks are about exhausted, but demand is nearly over; prices are unchanged at $2 to $2.25 for gallons and 85c. to $1 for 3's. Raspberries are in light demand at $1.75 to $2. Strawberries unchanged at $1.75. There are practically no stocks of good salmon on the spot. A few lots are on the way but as to quantity they do not amount to much. Some people are selling to arrive but if there is any truth in the statistics the pack will be large and prices low. Spring catch white offered this week at $1.10 to $1.25 here. Pink does not seem to be obtainable under $1.30 to $1.60. As a rule there is a disposition to wait, although large orders would probably be placed if packers would accept jobbers' offers. Ordinarily the trade is getting $1.35 to $1.45 for choice red salmon in tall tins. Lobster continues in good demand as before for the better brands at $1.90 to $2.10 for talls and $2.50 to $2.70 for flats. Meats continue in good demand.

MONTREAL.

The local demand for canned goods is very slow. Salmon is offering at $1.35 for choice brands delivered here. Tomatoes are still a drug on the market and are selling at almost any price.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

A few dressed hogs are coming in, and from $7.50 to $7.75 are being paid for them. All offering are taken. Hog products are still in good demand and firm and unchanged in price.

BACON—Long clear, 10½ to 11c. Smoked backs 12½c., bellies, 13½ to 14c. rolls 10½ to 10¾c.

HAMS—In good demand and firm at 13 to 13½c. for smoked.

LARD—Pure Canadian is 13c. in tubs, 13¼c. in pails and 12¾c. in tierces. Compound 10 to 10½c.

BARREL PORK—Canadian heavy mess $21, Canadian short cut $22, shoulder mess $19.50.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef fores are 5 to 5½c., hindquarters 9½ to 10c., mutton 7 to 9c., lamb 15 to 17c.

GREEN FRUIT.

Trade continues brisk, particularly in small fruits. Bananas are not selling so freely as they were on account of the increasing supply of domestic fruits. The strawberry season is about over, and raspberries are getting plentiful. There have been a few apples on the market this week, and they were all cleaned out at $4 per bbl. They were brought here from Montreal. We quote : Oranges—Messinas, ½ boxes of 80's $2.50; ½ boxes of 100's, $2.50 to $2.75; lemons, $4.50 to $5.25; bananas, $1.50 to $2; strawberries, 4 to 7c.; raspberries, 50 to 85c.; cherries 90 to $1.25 per basket ; red currants 65 to 75c. per basket ; tomatoes $1.30 to $1.40 per crate; cucumbers, $2 to $2.50 per basket ; beans, $2.25 to $2.50 per crate ; cabbage, $2 to $2.50 per bbl. for Canadian; watermelons, 20 to 30c. ; California fruit—Apricots $2.25; peaches, $2 to $2.25.

FISH.

Trade continues good at unchanged prices. We quote : Fresh sea salmon, 15c.; skinned and boned codfish, 6½c.; Labrador herring, $3 per half bbl.; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 11 to 12½c.; boneless fish, 4c. ; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; blue back herring, $2 to $2.50 per hundred ; blue pickerel, 4 to 5c. a lb.; yellow ditto, 7 to 8c. a lb.; shad, $3 a dozen; salmon trout and white fish, 7c.; eels, 6 to 8c. a lb.

HIDES, SKINS, TALLOW, WOOL.

HIDES—Market is weak. Carlots of cured are being sold at 4¾c. Green have dropped ½c., dealers now paying butchers 4c. for No. 1 and 3c. for No. 2.

SKINS—Calfskins are lower in sympathy with the decline in the United States market. For selected No. 1 veals dealers are paying 7c.; cured are slow of sale. Lamb skins remain unchanged at the recent advance, 40c. and pelts are still quoted at 25c.

TALLOW—Weak. Quality offering is generally not good and sales are difficult to make. Dealers are paying 5c. for rendered and selling at 5¾c. Rough is unchanged at 2c.

MARKETS—Continued.

WOOL—A few round lots are changing hands at prices ranging from 17 to 18c. for selected combing. Generally however the views of buyers and sellers are apart. Recent advices from the States are not encouraging and dealers are disposed to wait advances. For pulled and foreign wools there is only a moderate demand from the factories.

PETROLEUM.

Trade is improving in both burning and lubricating oils. Of course for lubricating oils the season is just opening. Wholesalers are now importing oil in tanks, but they have as yet made no change in prices, the cost not having been actually determined. We quote in barrel lots, Toronto: Canada, 13 to 13½c.; carbon safety, 17½ to 18c.; Canada water white, 19c.; American water white, 21 to 22c.; photogene, 25c.

MARKET NOTES.

Albert sardines are reported ½c. higher.

Sterling soap is now kept in stock by Davidson & Hay.

T. W. Kinnear & Co. are offering prunes of good quality in cases at low prices.

Eby, Blain & Co. are in receipt of a shipment of new season's finest Moning Congous.

J. W. Lang & Co. are offering a nice Formosa Oolong tea at 40c, which they recommend for blending.

Davidson & Hay have in stock a consignment of Keiller's marmalade in one pound pots and seven pound tins.

A new line of medium Japan tea has arrived over the C. P. R. this week from Vancouver for Sloan & Crowther.

Warren Bros. & Boomer are offering new canned mackerel. This is the first received on the Toronto market this season.

The new crop of Smyrna figs this year will be about two weeks later than usual, due to cold and wet weather early in the season

French peas, according to advices received by J. L. Watt & Scott, will be too high throughout the entire season for importation to Canada.

Sloan & Crowther are in receipt of two lines of first Young Hyson tea, for which they report rapid sale. The value is said to be extra good.

A shipment of prime Valencia raisins is being received by Warren Bros. & Boomer, which will be offered to the trade at prices the lowest this season.

Samples of Hankow tea have been received by H. P. Eckard & Co., and the attention of the trade is drawn to the firm's advertisement for fuller information.

Lucas, Steele & Bristol's last week's figures for 2 lb. blue plums, 2 lb. raspberries, 3 lb. apples, 3 lb. "Boy" tomatoes, 2 lb. "Boy" corn still hold good.

W. H. Gillard & Co., Hamilton, are receiving a large consignment of Pettijohn California Breakfast Food this week. An important question during hot weather is what to have for breakfast. Pettijohn Food admirably supplies the demand, being nutritious, cooling, delightful, and even the most miserable dyspeptic can use it with comfort and benefit.

The "Instant Metal Shiner," for sale by Lucas, Steele & Bristol, will clean and brighten any metal. It is put up in one dozen boxes, and retails at 15c. packet.

Eddy's indurated fibre ware butter packages are for sale by Lucas, Steele & Bristol. They are clean, sweet, and impart no flavor to butter. Can be used repeatedly.

The demand for canned and potted meats, fruits, vegetables, fish and all summer fancy groceries is reported to be brisk by Lucas, Steele & Bristol. They will be pleased to quote on application.

Owing to better market in England some 1,500 boxes Sultana raisins have been sent thither from New York. We are also reported sales here of about 2,000 boxes for home consumption.

Further cables are here from Bordeaux offering new crop French prunes for first half September shipment at 29 f. c. and f., or say the equivalent of 7¼ to 7⅜c. for the four sizes laid down New York.

A new brand of pine apples on this market has been received by Davidson & Hay. It is known as the Singapore Regal Brand. The pine is packed whole and there is no core. It sells at $1.35 per dozen.

The first firm quotation on figs was received this week, and the prices are apparently lower than last year. Till now the advices have merely contained information regarding the crops and the prospects for prices.

Advices received by J. L. Watt & Scott from J. Ruegg of Smyrna, state that the crop of canary seed promises well, an abundant harvest being expected. At the beginning of the season however high prices will likely be asked, as in addition to the present abnomially large demand those who have been abstaining from buying will probably throw their orders on the market as soon as the new seed comes in.

Lucas, Steele & Bristol report an extra demand for Pettijohn California Breakfast

Food. They have received a large consignment of same, and will send samples on application. It is much superior to all other cereals on the approach of summer.

Jas. Turner & Co., Hamilton, have received a large consignment of Pettijohn California Breakfast Food, put up in cases containing 3 doz 2 lb. packages. This food is strongly recommended by physicians as being much healthier and more nutritious than oats, being made of select and pure Sonora white wheat freed from hulls, while the rolled flakes of the true grain are rich in phosphalic matter and nutriment, so valuable to the weak and nervous.

Emil Poliwka & Co. are selling agents for Enoch Morgan's Sons' Co., New York, who have now handled Sapolio for the last 10 years, and have introduced it all over Canada, when it was hardly known in this country, report an ever increasing sale for this article. There has been a reduction in price since the first of the month, for which we refer to our advertising columns. Emil Poliwka, who has recently visited New York and St. John, N.B., has established a depot at the latter city, so that the trade can now be supplied from the most convenient shipping points, either Toronto, Montreal or St. John, N.B.

The Pettijohn California Breakfast Food Co. are more than pleased with the rapidity with which their Food is gaining favor in this market. Not only are the wholesale trade taking hold of it enthusiastically, but a large number of the best retailers have given it the most prominent place in their store. Many of them also are using it to help in the decorations of their windows, the package being such an attractive one. The company show their enterprise by sending over Mr. Byron and Mr. Arthur Estabrooks to help the agents, Wright & Copp, in the introduction of its foods. They have all their advertising matter, cards, etc., printed in Toronto, showing that they spend their money where they hope to make it.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, July 13, 1893.

GROCERIES.

The grocery trade, speaking generally, is still one of the dull departments of business, and all the leading staples, with the exception of a little briskness in sugar, rule dull and uninteresting on the whole. Sugar has furnished a better local demand, but the aggregate movement is small. Syrups are quiet and there is only a jobbing demand to note for molasses. Tea rules dull, with practically no business doing, and rice and other lines are unchanged. Values generally exhibit steadiness except perhaps in tea, and it is worthy of remark that the low offers on canned salmon noted early in the spring are not being made now. Dried fruit is quiet. With regard to payments they are fair on the whole, and with fair crop prospects at present reported, and supplies in second hands throughout the country small, a good trade is looked for once the movement does commence.

SUGAR.

There was a better local demand for sugar, but the movement in the aggregate is still rather slow despite the fact that the preserving season has induced more enquiry. We quote granulated steady at 5 1-2c., and yellows 4 1-2 to 5 1-4c. as to grade. There is nothing specially new in regard to the market for raw sugars.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups are quiet and the demand is light. American is quoted at 18 to 20c. per gallon, and Canadian in the wood 2 to 2 1-8c. per lb.

There is only a fair jobbing demand for molasses. The combine price is unchanged at 33 to 34c., but outsiders are selling round lots below these figures, and anyone who cares to buy a large quantity and is able to handle it has no difficulty in filling his wants at a cut on the above quotation.

TEA.

The tea market is very dull, there being little or nothing doing either in Japans or blacks. With regard to offers on new crop of the former to arrive, we cannot quote a definite figure, but it is understood that the prices are very reasonable, and that the goods will find a ready market at the prices asked.

COFFEE AND SPICES.

The coffee market is quiet but firm. Maracaibo changed hands in round lots at 20 1-2 to 21c., but for jobbing sales prices still run up to 22c. We quote as follows: Jamaica, 19 to 20c.; Maracaibo, 20 1-2 to 22c.; Rio, 19 to 21c.; Java, 24 to 28c., and Mocha, 25 to 28c.

The spice market is steady, and we quote common Jamaica ginger, 16 to 18c.; fine, 20 to 23c.; black pepper, 8 to 9c.; pimento, 6 1-2c., and nutmegs, 50 to 52 1-2c. and $1.

RICE.

The rice market is unchanged so far as local business is concerned, there being a general distributive trade doing. Advices from primary points are very strong. Local quotations are unchanged as follows: Ordinary, $3.85 to $4; Japans, $4 to $4.50; Patnas and Carolinas, $4.50 to $6.50.

DRIED FRUIT.

There is only a quiet trade doing in dried fruit, and values are about the same. Valencia raisins off-stalk have sold at 3 to 3 1-2c. for fair to good sound fruit. Currants are unchanged at 5 to 6c., according to quantity.

GREEN FRUIT.

There has been a fair trade doing in green fruit during the week. Lemons have been in fair demand and prices steady at $2.75 to $4, according to package and quality. Oranges have met a fair enquiry, but supplies are liberal. We quote boxes, $2.75 to $4; half boxes, $1.50 to $1.85. Peaches rule at $2 per box, pears $5.50 to $6, and plums $3 to $3.50. Bananas are steady at 75c. to $1.75 per bunch, and pineapples 15 to 16c. each per barrel.

BEANS.

There is a moderate demand, and we quote hand-picked, $1.40 to $1.45; ordinary, $1.25 to $1.30, and inferior, 95c. to $1.10.

HONEY.

There are no receipts of new honey reported. Old stock moves quietly at 6 1-2c. for extracted in round lots, with prices running up to 8c. for smaller lots.

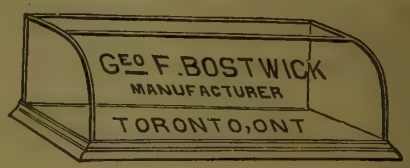
HOPS.

There is no change in the market except that the easy feeling still rules. Supplies are ample and demand slow. We quote good to choice, 17 to 18c.; yearlings, 14 to 15c.; and old, 6 to 10c.

POTATOES.

Potatoes have ruled rather firmer, recovering from the easiness noted in our last. We quote 90c. to $1.25 per bag for firsts, and 70 to 75c. for inferior. Some new stock has been arriving, but sales have been unimportant, $4.75 to $5 per barrel being spoken of.

PROVISIONS.



The provision market does not show any specially new feature. The movement is a jobbing one and prices are steady. Canadian short cut, per barrel, $21 to $22; mess pork, Western, now, per bbl., $22.50 to $23; hams, city cured, per lb., 12 to 13 1-4c.; lard, Canadian, in pails, 11 to 12c.; bacon, per lb., 11 1-2 to 12 1-4c.; lard, common refined, per lb., 9 1-2 to 10c.

EGGS.

Receipts of eggs have ruled moderate during the week, but the demand has been quiet. We quote 11 to 11 1-2c. as the range, which is unchanged from last week.

BUTTER.

Butter rules on the quiet side at present, but there is no appreciable change in the tone of the market, although Mantels, Grates and Tiles, Office and Store Fittings and Furnishings.

shippers protest that prices have been run up too high. The great bulk, in fact practically all the June creamery has left first hands, and it is as yet a little early for business in July makes. Business in this kind of stock rules quiet. We understand, however, that some buyers have already commenced the work of putting July stock at a premium, by bidding an extreme figure in some localities. The price, if English advices are not misleading, is hardly warranted, so that it must be attributed to the speculative element. The basis spoken of is 21c. in the country. There is little to note at present in connection with dairy goods. Creamery, 20 1-2 to 21c.; Townships, 18 to 18 1-2c.; Western dairy, 15 1-2 to 16c.

CHEESE.

The cheese market rules much the same, and although English advices, according to shippers, say that our prices are too high, no appreciable change in the market is to note, for if a buyer went into the market to buy he would undoubtedly have to pay our quotations if it was a question of either finest Ontario or Quebec. It is possible, however, that for new business for future shipment holders would have to accept lower prices, but the fact has to be established yet, and in the meantime our figures stand. Business on spot between dealers was not important for the reason that there was little stock to dicker. At the wharf on Monday a big jag of cheese offered from the French country, 6,000 by boat and 2,000 odd by rail, making 8,000 odd in all, from which large quantity it is inferred that stock in the section is closely sold up. It is, and the same case is to note elsewhere. All the cheese offered was sold to-day, 8 3-4c being the ruling, but some lots sold as low as 8 5-8c. Finest Ontario colored, 9 1-8 to 9 1-4c.; finest Ontario white, 9 to 9 1-8c.; finest Townships, 8 7-8 to 9c.; finest French colored, 8 7-8 to 9c.; finest French white, 8 3-4 to 8 7-8c.; under grades, 8 1-2 to 8 5-8c.; cable, white, 45s.; cable, colored, 46s. 6d.

Caverhill, Hughes & Co. are expecting some new crop Japans in the course of six days or so.

The world's visible supply of coffee is expected to show a decrease of 275,000 to 300,000 bags this month.

N. Quintal & Son have been placing quite a few lots of tomatoes during the week with several of their city customers.

Importers and brokers here report advices from Denia to the effect that chances are excellent for a good crop of Valencia raisins.

Some large receipts of new potatoes are expected before the close of the week. They are offering here to arrive at $4.75 per barrel.

A telegram from Vancouver states that salmon packing commences on the 15th instant and will close about the end of August. The same despatch states that there is no restriction in the pack this year on the Fraser river, and the prospects are thought to be good for a large output. It is understood in Vancouver, however, that the Columbia river pack is short this year, and Alaska canneries are also below the average.

L. Chaput, Sons & Co. have some good lines of Barbadoes molasses, and consider them first-class property, despite inside offers that are being made.

Some round lots of new crop Japans are expected to be offered on this market in the course of a week, and they are said to be offering at a very reasonable figure.

TOMATOES ARE VEGETABLES

Among the cases just decided by the supreme court of the United States is one in which the single question was as to whether tomatoes, considered as provisions are to be classed as "vegetables" or as "fruit" within the meaning of the tariff act of 1883, imposing a duty on "vegetables in their natural state or in salt or brine," not specifically enumerated or provided for therein, but making free "Fruits, green, ripe, or dried," not specially enumerated or provided for therein.

The only witnesses called at the trial testified that neither vegetables nor fruit had any special meaning in trade or commerce different from that given in the dictionaries, and that they had the same meaning in trade to-day that they had in March, 1883.

The passages cited from the dictionaries define the word fruit as the seed of plants, or that part of plants which contains the seed, and especially the juicy, pulpy products of certain plants, covering and containing the seed. These definitions have no tendency to show that tomatoes are fruit, as distinguished from vegetables, in common speech, or within the meaning of the tariff act, says the court.

There being no evidence that the words fruit and vegetables have acquired any special meaning in trade or commerce, they must receive their ordinary meaning. Of that meaning the court is bound to take judicial notice, as it does in regard to all words in our own tongue; and upon such a question dictionaries are admitted, not as evidence, but only as aids to the memory and understanding of the court.

Botanically speaking, tomatoes are the fruit of a vine, just as are cucumbers, squashes, beans and peas. But in the common language of the people, whether sellers or consumers of provisions, all these are vegetables which are grown in kitchen gardens, and which, whether eaten cooked or raw, are, like potatoes, carrots, parsnips, turnips, beets, cauliflower, cabbage, celery and lettuce, usually served at dinner in, with, or after the soup, fish, or meats which constitute the principal part of the repast, and not, like fruits generally, as dessert.

The attempt to class tomatoes as fruit is not unlike a recent attempt to class beans as seeds, of which Mr. Justice Bradley, speaking for this court, said: "We do not see why they should be classified as seeds any more than walnuts should be so classified. Both are seeds in the language of botany or natural history, but not in commerce or in common parlance. On the other hand, in speaking generally of provisions, beans may well be included under the term vegetables. As an article of food on our tables, whether baked or boiled, or forming the basis of soup, they are used as a vegetable, as well when ripe as when green. This is the principal use to which they are put. Beyond the common knowledge which we have on this subject, very little evidence is necessary, or can be produced."—Chicago Grocer.

STARCH TRADE IN THE STATES.

The fact that the National Starch Manufacturing Company has passed the dividend on its second preferred stock is perhaps the best proof that the starch business is not in an eminently flourishing condition. When the trust was formed, one of the alleged objects was to combine together and maintain prices upon a living basis, competition having then wrought such havoc in the profits that many factories had stopped work. That was, of course, a very estimable and proper object, but at that period there was an enormous craze to form combinations of all sorts, and water the capitalization to an excessive, and, as events have proven, to a dangerous extent. The Starch Trust was no exception. The Trust immediately advanced prices after it was formed, and events went along swimmingly for a while, but the good profits made by the Trust invited and stimulated competition, which has ever since been increasing, until corn starch is down to the lowest price ever known, 2 1-8c. This price has been reached not alone by competition, but by the unsatisfactory condition of the market, the starch business sympathizing with the general condition of trade all over the country, which has not been active for some time. Then the consumptive demand for all kinds of starch has not been what was expected. In part, the low price of corn starch is due more to the slow trade than to large supplies. The same may be said of potato starch, although the output of that variety was small owing to the light potato crop. So short, indeed, has the domestic supply been, that it has been found necessary to import some potato starch. Starch men say that the outlook for the future is not particularly hopeful. They consider that the Trust is more powerful than its competitors, and that many of the latter will close up their factories when they see that there is no profit in ruling prices. Whether the Trust will force this issue or not is unknown. Up to the present, competition has alone been responsible for the low prices, but if the Trust should reduce prices still further, such action would unquestionably result in closing up competitive plants in a short time.—Boston Commercial Bulletin.

DRY GOODS.

MONTREAL MARKET.

The week has been rather quiet and without special features. Indications for a good fall business are improving and orders are increasing.

Buyers are all home from England and the continent, and the selections of fall goods coming to hand so far are giving general satisfaction.

Linings of all description meet a good enquiry at steady prices. The demand runs especially to creams and light shades, which are very scarce, and the fact is compelling buyers in a great many cases to seek other markets for supplies.

Linen goods of every kind are firm owing to a decided scarcity of flax, and show in some cases advances of from 10 to 15 per cent. In consequence of this importers complain that deliveries are tardy.

Dress goods of all kinds have continued in good demand in a sorting up way, challies in light grounds fully holding their own.

J. G. Mackenzie & Co. say they have had a remarkably good season for all-wool challies and printed Batistes.

Gault Bros. report that there is a feeling that checks will be in favor this fall, also plain whipcords and plain and shot diagonals.

Mr. Thomas Brophy, of Brophy, Cains & Co., has returned from his English trip. The firm will have some taking lines of skirtings this fall to suit the new fashionable bell skirt.

Jas. Johnston & Co. have on view samples of some handsome lines of fall trimmings. Among the more sterling lines which will be fashionable were the long silky fleece of the Angola goat in the popular shades; also narrow strips of natural fur, mink, lynx, seal, etc.

J. G. Mackenzie & Co. were showing during the month some handsome lines of braid in military patterns which are expected to be in great favor for trimmings this fall.

Gault Bros. report indications of a satisfactory demand for cashmeres, both in colors and blacks. In fact they have been obliged to place several repeat orders for some round lines of this class of goods. The advancing tendency in the values of these goods is no doubt the incentive with buyers, prices being from 10 to 12½ per cent. higher in France.

The Standard Shirt and Collar Company are putting up an extensive factory on De Lorimer avenue, next door to Abbott & Co.'s rolling mill.

Mr. Mathews, of Mathews, Tower & Co., is now out west on his usual trip. He carries samples of the firm's fine lines of underwear, shirts, half hose, rubber coats, etc.

Jas. Johnston & Co. have been receiving some extensive lines of ribbons and trimmings; also box-cloths and meltons. The popular color in the latter for ladies' mantles will continue to be various shades of drab.

J. G. Mackenzie & Co. note a good demand for laces, owing to the prevailing fashion of trimming all-wool challies, etc. They have been doing quite a trade on this account.

Gault Bros. have been sending out quite a few fall orders for tweeds, dress goods, etc. They have also been handling some fair orders for Manchester flannelettes. The warehouse is at present piled up with pyramids of fall tweeds, suitings, box cloth and meltons. There is already a good demand for the latter, for ladies' mantles, cloaks, etc.

TORONTO MARKET.

The past week has seen a continued inquiry for many classes of summer wear. Japanese and shot silks blouse fabrics, boating flannels, cream ribbons, sailor hats, silk gloves, veilings, shirt waists, cashmere and drill vests, and light colored neckwear, have all received a great deal of attention in small quantities. The buying has been fairly brisk but conservative. Many clearances of various kinds have been offered and picked up by visiting and city buyers. The next two weeks will see a large number of bargains of all kinds offered, as wholesalers must clear out the remainders and broken lots of summer goods.

Orders on fall account are quite promising and although travellers are not all on the road, yet those who are out are securing very fair orders. In most cases the wholesale houses claim that their sales on fall delivery are much ahead of this time last year. One fur dealer claims that if they took no more orders until the end of the season they would have done a better business than last year.

W. R. Brock & Co. have two very cheap lines in cotton bags that are attracting the attention of the general trade.

In John Macdonald & Co's staple department are running off two lines of flannelettes and to increase the sales have made a clearance price of 8¾ cents.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. announce in their underwear department the largest and most complete stock of its kind in the trade, embracing all weights and the most complete ranges of sizes.

Mr. Burton left for European markets on Tuesday. Mr. Caldecott is in Montreal this week. Mr. Auld, woollen buyer for W. R. Brock & Co., has gone on his semi-aunual trip to the British markets.

Gordon, MacKay & Co. have now in stock boating shawls to suit every taste. Novelties that are certain to prove sellers and staple lines of better value than heretofore offered.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence have just received and opened up a shipment of shot silks in one quality. Those in immediate need of these goods can have prompt delivery. Odd lines of summer stuff can be picked up in this house at reduced prices.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. show Jap silk handkerchiefs, initial and fancy embroidered and plain hem stitched in unlimited variety, and having purchased at the lowest point the market touched, can name extremely low prices.

John Macdonald & Co. report shipments of neckwear, cardigan jackets, wool half-hose, top shirts, heavy underwear, knit gloves, kid lined gloves and mitts, umbrellas and rubber coats. These goods are for the fall and winter trade, and have opened up exceptionally well.

W. R. Brock & Co. will receive this week a further shipment of wool boating shawls and evening wraps. Their first shipment being almost exhausted by the strong enqutry for their leading lines. This shipment will make their stock again complete. The line called "Dollar," to retail at that price, is an excellent line for a live merchant to use as a leader.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. are well covered in linen tablings, and the advance in cost does not effect them. They carry a very large and well selected stock in this line, which they claim to sell on the same close margin as Canadian staples.

Many members of wholesale firms and many heads of departments are away on their holiday jaunts, and the junior clerk rejoices in the possession of more than ordinary power. No class of people need more fresh air than this, for of all the unventilated and foul-smelling establishments in Toronto few are worse than the wholesale dry goods warehouses except the tannaries, the woollen mills and Ashbridge's Bay.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. direct attention to their silk and cashmere mufflers, in which lines they have made liberal preparations for the coming season. The large orders already booked should establish the claims of this department to the attention of dealers.

John Macdonald & Co. are closing out many lines of summer goods at modified prices. They have full lines of cottonades, ducks, denims and printed moles in overalls and jumpers. Harvest mitts in four lengths are in full stock. Red and blue printed handkerchiefs, a special line of 400 dozen cushion back braces, 4 cases of men's cotton half-hose, and cotton underwear are among the specialties offered to the rural trade this week.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling passed into stock last week 40 cases of neckwear, which includes the bulk of their choicest patterns for summer and early fall trade. This is an exceptionally nobby lot and worthy of inspection. They have also received another shipment of English collars and cuffs, which makes their range again complete in all sizes

ORANGES IN LOUISIANA.

Louisiana this coming fall proposes to enter the field as a competitor for a portion of the orange trade, and the growers of that section promise to be heard from early in September with a class of fruit which they claim will take rank with as good as any produced on the Florida peninsula, says N. Y. Bulletin. The orange has always been a cultured fruit of Louisiana, but it is only during the past few years that the industry has been pushed with any vigor, the growers there having been satisfied to raise the fruit and get it to local markets without regard to appearance or condition. The success attending the efforts of the Florida growers has finally aroused the dormant energies of those interested in the fruit in Louisiana, and they propose coming out this year under their own banner for the purpose of establishing a name and reputation for the fruit raised in their favored State. In the past a large portion of the fruit harvested has been placed upon the market and sold as Florida, that name being used as a disguise, under the belief that a readier sale and more remunerative prices could be realized by sailing under false colors. State pride, however, is now coming to the fore, and from this season on it is expected that a steady increase in the acreage will be made, and the character of the crop gradually raised to a higher standard. The crop this year will probably prove a trifle smaller than first anticipations, cold storms late in the spring having damaged to some extent the early buds. Reliable authorities, however, count upon a yield of about 180,000 to 200,000 boxes, and expect to make their first showings upon the market about three weeks to a month in advance of the Florida product. The section devoted to orange culture in Louisiana begins about 40 miles below New Orleans and extends down to the jetties. In this territory only a small portion of the soil is under cultivation; but so sanguine are the people of that locality as to the future, that it will probably not be many years before the greater portion will be brought under control by the orange grower, and the name of Louisiana will become as common on the markets of the country as is Florida to-day. The primitive methods in vogue in the past are described by the New Orleans Times-Democrat as follows:

"The fruit was pulled from the trees, the men calling it 'breaking' fruit, but often, instead of breaking the stem, they pulled the stem out of the orange, injuring the keeping and caring quality of the fruit at the start. The oranges were then dumped on the ground out of bags or in baskets. A mule cart removed the oranges, which were thrown into the cart into bulk. The cart was then driven to the river bank, where the oranges were dumped like a load of coal on the bank, remaining there often five or six days exposed to all kinds of weather. They were then put into baskets again, carried on board the luggers and dumped from baskets into the hold of the luggers in bulk. The lugger brought the oranges to New Orleans, where they were sold to dealers or packers. The purchaser would send his wagon to the landing, the fruit was thrown into baskets, and from there dumped into the wagon. The wagons jolted the oranges over stone pavements to the store, where they were put into barrels and dumped on the store floor into piles. The wrappers then wrapped the fruit and threw it into baskets, which were carried to packers, who placed the oranges in boxes. Shipping the fruit necessitated another ride over rough pavements to the railroad cars."

THE LOBSTER FISHERY.

John McDougald, M.P. for Pictou, N.S., in conversation with a reporter the other day, said that up to the time he left home the lobster catch on the north shore of Nova Scotia had been the best known for years. The ice moved out of the bays early, and the season opened about the first of May under exceptionally favorable conditions. In size, quantity and quallity the lobsters were much better than they have been for years. The exceptionally large size of the crustaceans in the early part of the season somewhat destroys the theory that the factories had fished out all the old lobsters and only the young and small ones were left. There were plenty of large lobsters this season. Mr. McDougald also said that the work of the lobster hatchery at Pictou, under the management of Mr. A. Ogden, ex-M.P., and probably the best authority on lobsters in Canada, had been exceedingly good, the output of young lobsters being twice as large as last year at practically no increase of cost.

EAST INDIAN RICE.

The following is a summary of the latest advices regarding East India rice in Europe received by Richard Gough & Co.:—"The tendency of our market is a buoyant one, and the desire from all directions to buy is more prononunced, as the eyes of people interested in rice have been opened, in view of the better tone in the grain market, and also in consequence of the enormously low price of rice. The good opinion of the article is strengthened in the minds of millers and dealers by the statistics of Burmah rice. Saigon is out of question for Europe on account of the Chinese demand, and in Siam the entanglements with the French impede the rice business, which up to a short time ago was a very promising one for this season again. For these reasons Java, with its large demand for cleaned rice, had to go to Burmah, and over 15,000 tons cleaned have been already sold from Rangoon to go there, and other countries have had to do likewise. In England rice alone becomes scarce, and places which heretofore were supplied regularly by London and Liverpool, already go to Continental millers to fill their wants. In addition, it has to be mentioned that the exports from Burmah to other than European ports so far are larger by 93,000 tons than those of 1892, thus showing quite an important quantity which will be missing for Europe, but on which so far people have been counting. The better feeling in rice and the improvement of the market is rough-connected therewith, have their foundation therefore on a very healthy basis; to-day 6s. 6d. for sailing cargoes afloat, or July-August steamer shipment is asked, whereas a week ago they could be bought at 6s., and at present 6s. 3d. is bid without sellers thereat.

A means to increase his profits is something that practically every merchant seeks to obtain. Taking it all round, there is good reason for this desire. The proportion of dealers to consumers has become abnormally large, and as a result profits are not as good as they should be. In Great Britain the grocers derive a good revenue from the sale of patent medicines. And although some grocers and a good many general merchants in Canada pay some attention to this trade, it is evident that they do not reap all the benefits from it that they might. This applies particularly to general stores. A merchant should no more handle patent medicines that are of a doubtful character, or that cannot be recommended, than he should any ordinary article of merchandise, but in extending this department he will have little or no more difficulty than in any other department of his business. Deal with reputable firms and there will not be much danger in this respect. The profits that accrue from the sale of patent medicines are as a rule large, in some instances being as high as 50 per cent. Another advantage in handling patent medicines, aside from the question of profits, is that they do not as a rule deteriorate to any extent in value by being kept in stock. Our advice to every merchant is: Pay more attention to your patent medicine department.

Two Hamilton newspapers, the Times and the Herald, have been discussing the cash and credit question. The other day the latter in replying to the former said: "The thing is to do away with the law by which small debts can be collected, for the fact is notorious that dealers often grant credit when they should not and when they would not if the law did not stand behind them to enforce their claims. The debt-collecting laws are barbarous because they are unfair, not only to those who have contracted debts which they find they are unable to pay, but to those who pay their bills promptly. * * * Creditors act solely on their own judgment when they allow debts to be incurred, and it is manifestly an imposition for them to rely on the rest of us to see that they get their money, which is practically what they do. The wiping out of Division Courts would be a heavy blow at the whole credit system, would enable storekeepers to sell more cheaply, and would give them a good excuse for refusing credit. Everybody would be much better off if the credit system, more especially as applied to the running of small debts, were done away with. The reform might cause some little inconvenience for a time, but in a short while matter would adjust themselves smoothly enough to the new order of things, and we should all be money in pocket at the end of the year. The merchants themselves would be great gainers by the change, for then they would not be pestered to death to hand over goods to people who they are morally certain will never pay for them if they can find any way to get out of it." The Herald's argument is based on a wrong premise. The credit system is a legitimate part and parcel of the trade and commerce of not only this country, but the world, and is here to stay. Used as it should be, it is an adjunct to trade; but, like many other good things, it has been abused, and it is this that has resulted in the breeding of evils which are a hinderance instead of a help to trade. Dating ahead, long credit, and indiscriminate giving of credit are among these evils.

As a concomitant of the trade and commerce of the country, the credit system is entitled to the protection of the law. The country is over run with people who will pay no more of their way through life than they can possibly help, and every merchant, no matter how careful he may be, will in turn get duped by them. It is against this class of customers particularly that the merchant needs protection. About the honest man there is no need for concern. Instead of talking about "wiping out the Division Court" and the law regarding the collection of small debts it is the simplifying and strengthing of these laws that should be urged. As at present constituted and enforced the law relating to debts and the collection of the same is a farce. Even if the plaintiff does obtain judgment it is of little or no benefit to him, for should he succeed in securing the amount in dispute the chances are ten to one that the cost will more than wallow it up.

The customer who obtains goods which he does not intend to pay for gets them under false pretences, difficult as it may be to prove it. To get at him through the Division Court, if the amount be small, is the only alternative, and to close up this only avenue would be, to our mind, as unreasonable as to ask that the law against larceny be not applied to the pilfering of goods exposed for sale at store fronts. In fact we do not know but that it would be more so, for the tempation to be dishonest is often greater in the careless way that goods are exposed than in the matter of giving credit. But at any rate, why deprive only the retailer of the right to use the machinery for the collection of accounts? Why make the class that have the hardest row to hoe perspire all the more by erecting new obstacles? But would it not be well before the one is repealed to enact a law making it illegal to give credit except above a certain value? That would be only reasonable. But how then would the poor but honest mechanic fare in the spring, whose surplus earnings were exhausted after a long winter's inactivity? The experience of the past spring is sufficient answer.

To talk of the merchant being better off if the Division Courts were removed, is all moonshine. He would be nothing of the kind, any more than would a house be stronger were one of its foundation stones removed. If a debtor has any self-respect at all he will not let his name appear as defendant in the Division Court proceedings if he can help it, and as the last resort to prevent this is the payment of the account he will often do this when a lawyer's letter announces that it is the only alternative to escape legal proceedings. No, what is wanted is revision not removal of the law regarding collections. And the sooner it takes place the better.

A good many interesting and valuable books are issued by the Dominion Government every year, but none are more so than the "Statistical Year Book of Canada." The eighth volume has just been issued by the Department of Agriculture. Sydney D. F. Roper, who compiled the work, is evidently profiting well by each year's experience for the present volume is the best issued Compressed within its 659 pages is a digest of practically all the blue books and much besides, but it is presented in a more attractive form. A feature of the book is a statistical summary of the Dominion since Confederation up to June 30, 1892, giving comparisons of population, revenue, expenditure, imports, shipping, etc., and while all the figures are not as favorable as one would wish, they at least show one thing, and that is that in most of the essentials the country is growing. On the figures adduced by the census of 1891 regarding population so much has been already said that they may be dismissed with the remark that out of the total population of 4,833,239 the males numbered 2,466,573 and the females 2,366,666. The revenue in 1892 was $36,921,872 and the expenditure $36,765,894, against $13,687,928 and $13,486,092 respectively in 1867, the year of Confederation. In 1867 the imports were valued at $73,459,644 and the exports at $57,567,888, while last year the respective totals were $127,406,068 and $113,963,375. In 1867, 8,028 vessels of 2,104,009 tons passed inwards and 7,978 vessels of 2,215,312 tons passed outwards, while last year 15,672 vessels of 5,475,999 tons passed inwards and 15,289 vessels of 5,276,975 tons passed outwards. The figures relating to 1892 have only been exceeded on two or three occasions, and that only slightly. In regard to vessels built the showing is anything but satisfactory. In 1867 there were 355 vessels of a total of 87,230 tons burthen constructed, while in 1885 the aggregate tonnage was 188,098 and the number of vessels 489, but last year the totals were only 44,321 tons and 278 vessels. In 1867 the vessels registered were 539 with a total tonnage of 113,692, while last year the respective totals were down to 331 and 61,457. In 1881 there were in operation 7,260 miles of railway, with working expenses of $20,121,418 and earnings of $27,897,509, while in 1892 the miles of railway in operation were 14,588, working expenses $36,488,228 and earnings $51,685,768. At Confederation the paid up capital of the banks was $30,289,048, the assets $77,872,257, and the liabilities $43,722,647, while last year the paid up capital was $61,512,630, the assets $292,054,017, and the liabilities $209,362,011. In 1867 there were 3,638 postoffices, through which there passed 18,100,000 letters and 18,860,000 newspapers, while last year the postoffices were 8,288, the letters 102,850,00, and the newspapers, including books, samples, etc., 98,152,651. The net public debt at Confederation was $75,757,135, while to-day it is $241,131,434.

A report recently issued by a London firm emphasizes what THE GROCER has at different times said in regard to the growth of the Indian and Ceylon tea trade. The report in question deals with the trade during the last thirty years. In 1862, out of 80,000,000 pounds of tea consumed in England only 500,000 were from India, all the rest being of China growth. Last year, however, Great Britain took 110 million pounds of India tea and only 34 million pounds of China. Even Ceylon has outstripped the Celestial Empire, having last year contributed 63,000,000 pounds to supply the wants of the tea-drinkers of the United Kingdom. In 1887 Ceylon only sent 10,000,000 pounds. It is said that the Indian tea-growers now look upon China as not even worth being counted a competitor. Ceylon and Assam are the only ones accounted to be classed as such. Behold, how are the mighty fallen! China, once the synonym for tea, not recognised as a competitor in the tea market! China's lowly position in this respect may stimulate her to renewed exertions and the adoption of more modern methods of tea culture; and then she is likely to benefit by the silver crisis. China tea has got a good many friends yet, and there is no telling how much of the lost vantage ground it may regain.

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

"Say, but the boys are having the laugh on H. C. Fortier, of the Toronto Biscuit Co., these days," said a friend of his and of mine the other day, as he held his sides and burst into a convulsive roar of laughter.

"Well, what is it? Let's know," I queried.

"Well. you know, his city traveller was away on his holidays last week and Mr. Fortier kindly took his place. Fortier is live and energetic. He believes in getting acquainted with his customers, and he thought it would be a good opportunity of doing so. You know he's genial, not by any means a bad looking fellow, and makes lots of friends. Well, as I was going to say," continued my friend as he got back to his moorings, "all went well till he reached a store in The Ward kept by a woman. I won't mention her name. Fortier succeeded in getting an order. She could evidently trust him for that, but when he undertook to collect a small account that was due she drew the line. Shortly afterwards, however, she appeared in person at the office to tender payment. 'You know,' she explained, as everybody within earshot snickered, 'Your traveller called on me, but I didn't like his looks one bit, now, and so I just thought I'd better bring it down myself. Who is he, anyhow? I wonder Mr. Fortier employs such a man!' After she went out a roar of laughter went up that shook the flour dust from the window sills.

During my wanderings a few days ago I ran against a gentleman from New York who is pretty well posted on what is going on in the tea market there. "Do you know what became of the Pingsuey's that failed, because of poorness of quality, to pass inspection in New York York recently?" I asked.

"Well, I understood that the tea, some 6,000 packages or over, was to have been sent back to the market of production. They could do nothing else with them. Whether they are gone yet I cannot say. Last Thursday nearly 600 packages of poor stuff was sold in New York to a Montreal man. He wasn't a tea man, however. He was a speculator, and for the life of me I don't see how he's going to clear himself at the price he paid."

I had a brief chat with J. A. Milne of Eby, Blain & Co.'s the other day regarding his recent business trip up the lakes. "The crops on Manitoulin Island," he said in reply to a query of mine, "are looking well and the prospects for fall trade are favorable. You know Manitoulin Island is a great grazing country. Did I find many changes since my last trip? Well, in Gore Bay we found a number of changes. D. I. Miller has moved into a new store. John Mutchmor is occupying Miller's old stand. Jackson Bros. we found in Goodmurphy's old place. F. Jenning's, who was out of business for about a year, has again started up. Sandy Irving is also opening up in Gore Bay. On our return to Manitowaning we were sorry to hear of the death of a daughter of A. Nelson, a leading merchant there. She was about 19. There are two new stores and a hotel going up at Manitowaning. "Business at the Soo," added Mr. Milne as he again turned to his samples, "is good, and work on the canal is progressing rapidly." Mr. Milne refused to tell any fish stories. At least he said he hadn't any.

BYSTANDER.

DRUMMERS AT THE FALLS.

When the drummer drops his grip and turns his attention to pleasure dull care is banished and fun and frolic hold sway. In him are combined to a higher degree than in any other man the shrewdness and perserverence of the business man and the joviality of the man whose brow is unfurrowed by care.

When the drummer works he works and when he plays he plays. Wednesday last was one of his play days. That is, it was for the city Knight of the Grip. It was on that day that was held the annual excursion of the City Travellers' Association of Toronto. It took place at Niagara Falls and Buffalo, although the former was, of course, the greater rendezvous. The route taken was via the Niagara River and Lake Ontario Navigation Co.'s line of steamers to Queenston and Lewiston, from the former of which those destined for the Falls took the electric cars, while those booked for Buffalo took the cars at the latter place.

And benignly did the gods smile. Had it been possible for the excursionists to have ordered the weather for the occasion it could not have been more favorable. The lake breezes were just strong enough to be felt and cool enough to be invigorating. In any way you take it—both in point of numbers and in amount of unalloyed pleasure—the excursion was a success. Everybody praised it. Several grocers were noticed with the party, the Retail Grocers' Association being represented, among others, by President Clark, Robert Mills, A. G. Booth, John Butcher, — Sinclair, A. G. Marmion, E. Dewey.

The trip up the Canadian side on the new electric railway was delightful. The ejaculations of surprise and of admiration evidenced that. And it will be remembered as one of the most pleasant features of the outing.

The arrangements that the managing committee had previously made for sightseeing at reduced rates was taken advantage of, the six or seven hours at the Falls being spent in visiting the many points of interest or in picnicking in the shadey groves that abound in Queen Victoria Park or in mingling with the retail grocers of Hamilton, who were also spending the day at the famous resort.

Nearly every member of the Association lent a helping hand to make the excursion a success, but the honors are of course due to the labors of the gentlemen who composed the managing committee. They were: Robert Maxwell, chairman; F. Galow, treasurer; J. A. McGuane, secretary; J. Owen, Ben. Dack, A. M. Piper, R. C. Morrison, W. Soper, E. N. Tyrrell, S. G. Martin, J. F. Smyth, C. F. B. Spencer, W. F. Daniels, W. Bremner, A. G. Fleming, J. Mortimer.

Some of the excursionists reached home at 8.30 p.m., while others came over on the later boat. Ghioni's brass and string band accompanied the excursionists and materially assisted to enliven the outing.

HAMILTON GROCERS AT THE FALLS

Successful was the fourth annual excursion of the Hamilton Retail Grocers' Association to Niagara Falls on Wednesday last.

It took four special trains of twelve cars each to carry the excursionists to their destination; and then the cars were crowded. Hamilton grocers came out to "have a time" and they had it. They saw all that was to be seen at the Falls and vicinity, swarmed across to the American side, traversed the new electric railway from Queenston to Chippewa, and lolled about beneath the shade of the many trees in Queen Victoria Niagara Falls Park and discussed the tasty contents of their lunch baskets or feasted upon the music dispensed by the far-famed 13th Batt. band of the Ambitious City, which accompanied the excursionists. A local barber who was shaving a Toronto man thus remarked: "There's about eight thousand Hamilton grocers here to-day." That gives an idea how the people of Niagara Falls looked upon the excursion.

When hospitable Hamilton grocers go picnicking they always ask some of their friends. When they get them they look after them, too; and on Wednesday they did not depart from the rule, for an upper room of the old museum building was set apart for this purpose. Mr. Bolinger was master of ceremonies, and when he espied one of the Association's guests he trotted him up to the room and placed at his disposal a luncheon that was a luncheon. Everybody took according to his ability and voted Hamilton grocers right jolly good fellows, which they are.

Much of the success of the picnic is due to the efforts of President Winnifrith and to Chairman Adam Ballantine, Secretary N. R. Harvey, and Treasurer Bremner of the committee. It was a tired but highly delighted crowd that got back to the shelter of the Mountain Wednesday night.

The Toronto Retail Grocers' Association have secured the 48th Battalion (Highlander's) band for their annual excursion, which takes place to Niagara Falls Wednesday week. All that is wanted to ensure a repetition of the success that has attended previous picnics of the Association is fine weather.

COCOANUT FROM TREE-TOP, TO TABLE.

Cocoanut, with the exception of rice, is perhaps the greatest of all food products consumed in countries lying 20 degrees north or south of the equator. It is the most delicate, soothing, and health-giving of all food, but containing such a large percentage of fiber (50 per cent.) there are few who can digest it after the nut has become fully ripe, as it always is when shipped to northern climes. This not only applies to the cocoanut in its natural succulent state, but when it is cut and dried, or desiccated, the fiber continues to harden and the natural juices disappear. Manufacturers of disiccated and shredded cocoanut attempt to atone for this by adding glycerine and paraffine. The latter, particularly, is not a food product, and adds greatly to the indigestible character of the woody fiber. To meet all these objections, fiberless cocoanut is now made and condensed to a heavy syrup, canned and sterilized, so as to keep after exposure.

The cocoanuts are ground so as to break the juice cells, and then so manipulated as to discharge the milky fiber of all its flavor, oil and nutriment, presenting a beautiful white cream or true milk of the entire cocoanut, which is condensed, sugared, and finally canned; and notwithstanding the large percentage of fat commonly contained in the cocoanut, it retains the wonderful affinity for water, and is readily dissolved for drinks and all forms of manipulation in cooking and flavoring, creams, candies, pies, cakes, etc. It now is presented as a digestible food product, a boon alike to invalid and healthy persons, and can be employed in many forms of cooking and flavoring heretofore unknown. The invalid who is seeking carbonaceous or fat-producing food, can find every nourishment in the fiberless cocoanut that is sought for in cod liver oil, but more readily assimilated and agreeable to the taste. Millions of people feed on cocoanut in the tropics, and its soothing, heat-dispelling properties are universally acknowledged. The natives of Ceylon, by hand manipulation, milk the grated cocoanut and free it from fiber, but it will not keep, and is not concentrated, and it remained for American ingenuity to bring fiberless cocoanut to its present merchandisable condition. It may be of interest to know that 3,500,000 acres of this earth are planted with cocoanut trees, and the nut is the staple food product of many millions of people in India, China, and the islands of the sea. Ceylon alone has 500,000 acres planted 80 trees to the acre, and South America 1,200,000 acres.—American Grocer.

TEA AND SCIENCE.

It is apparent from the published experience of those interested in the tea industry of Ceylon and India, that there are serious defects in the tea grown in those countries. Some of them are due to wrong processes of manufacture and affect flavor and keeping qualities. These defects are not alluded to where these teas are consumed and where efforts are being made to introduce them. And yet in these defects may be found the reason why American consumers do not take kindly to India and Ceylon tea. An Eastern exchange, in discussing tea and science, says :

"There are many suggestive facts in the short history of tea production in Ceylon for which an expert would be able to assign a cause. In more than one instance, within our own knowledge, qualities that had been lost were afterwards restored, showing that, in those particular cases, the process employed, and not the soils or capabilities of the estate were at fault. Tea is a delicate produet, and is easily affected by neglect, for want of a thorough knowledge of the chemistry of the process employed, and is peculiarly in want of scientific examination.

"One defect, common to all Ceylon teas, is that they do not keep. This is a serious disadvantage, and one that will tell against them more hereafter than in the past. Till now the demand for Ceylon tea has been so active that none has had to be kept long unconsumed ; but as the production increases, and after the consumption ceases to keep pace with it, its lack of keeping quality will be more and more felt. We have noticed, in some of the latest advices, since the recent run on the lower qualities set in, a preference having been given to China teas in blending, because of their superior keeping qualities. We have several times brought this property of keeping into notice in our columns, and it is now of greater importance than ever it was.

"The problem is not how to impart a new quality which might be a very difficult or impossible matter, but how to fix in our teas those they naturally possess. This is a much simpler problem, of which an expert would probably discover the remedy easily. We have ventured to express the opinion, based on experience with coffee, that the lack of fixity of the aroma of tea is due to too great rapidity in the firing processes It is in these that the fixing of the properties of the tea consists. Col. Money, in his book on tea, says that the Chinese pan their teas, that is: fire them several times, and not by the short and rapid process used in our factories. He reports that frequent experiments satisfied him that there was no advantage gained by these repeated firings, and he, therefore, does not advise planters to adopt them. It does not appear, however, that he tried the effect of frequent pannings on the keeping qualities of the tea, as this could only be known by a comparison of teas, made by the two methods a year or more afterwards, and we do not see that he made any such comparison. Possibly, some of our planters may have tried the experiment. Be that as it may, the keeping qualities of Ceylon tea is a great desideratum, and worthy of crucial experiment and consideration.—American Grocer.

BUTTER NOSTRUMS.

During the past seven years the farmers of this country have been tempted to invest in various secret nostrums, which it was claimed would increase the yield of butter.

A sample of genuine dairy butter, which was furnished to the Department of Agriculture, after an analysis was found to contain : Water, 15.92 per cent. ; butter fat, 80.53 per cent.; ash, 0.38 per cent.; curd and undetermined, 3.17 per cent. The above represents a fair sample of butter, with the exception of water and curd, which are a little higher than the average. In the premium butters obtained at the Chicago dairy show in 1889, the percentage of moisture varied in ten samples from 8.69 to 11.86 per cent. respectively. On the other hand, the artificial butter, which was prepared with the patent compounds by the Producers' Dairy Company, was also subjected to an amlysis by the Government chemist, with the following result : Water, 49.55 per cent.; butter fat, 45.45 per cent.; ash, 1.34 per cent.; curd and undetermined, 3.66 per cent. It would appear from the above that the artificial butter had been made by churning the pure butter with diluted milk. A further practical test was made in the laboratory of the Department, and it was found that with one pound of butter, one pint of milk and about one grain of the butter compound, two pounds of materials could easily be made which resembled very closely a first-class article of butter, except that it was much softer.

It was then suspected that the nostrums contained some emulsifying substance, either of a mineral nature or some organic ferment. The butter compound was subjected to a test and was found to contain 70.48 per cent. of anhydrous of sodium sulphate and 29.52 per cent. of organic matter. The latter responded in a perfect manner to a pepsin test ; probably part of it was pepsin in a crude form. The compound acting as pepsin gave the product an emulsion which enabled it to incorporate an equal amount of milk in its substance without altering its appearance materially. The gilt-edge butter compound is pink in color, with some organic coloring matter to hide its real nature. The anhydrous sodium sulphate seems to be added simply as a carrying material, and it is not supposed to produce any active effect in the emulsifying process ; in fact, pepsin, pancreatin, trypsin and rennet used without anhydrous sodium sulphate produce exactly the same emulsifying effect as the "gilt-edge" butter compound. By this simple device the unprincipled dealer could easily impose upon customers by furnishing an article that contained less than half of pure butter. The keeping properties, of course, of the emulsion butter is not as great as the unadulterated, but in rapid consumption the fraud would not be detected.

In 1892 the fraud of the gilt-edge compound having been so successful, another firm entered the field. Advertisements appeared in all the agricultural and other papers, and the fradulent manufacturers of "black pepsin" became so bold that the notice of the Government was called to it. The latter answered innumerable inquiries by answering that "'black pepsin' had essentially the properties ascribed to it, but that its use in all cases must be regarded as a fraud and hence avoided." The sale of such butter is also practically an adulteration of a food product, and should be prohibited by law. In spite of the warning given by the Department of Agriculture, Dairy Commissioners, and at the agricultural experiment stations in each State, a brisk and an increasing trade has been kept up in these substances. The innocent purchaser suffers, and the consumer also is cheated by a product not butter, but a mixture of butter fat with water, casein, milk, sugar and other constituents of milk. The magnitude of these fradulent practices and the extent to which they have spread throughout the country have been revealed in a startling manner by replies to a circular asking for information on this subject sent to the Boards of Health, members of the Dairy and Pharmaceutical Associations and city officers throughout the country.

An analysis of "black pepsin" was made, as follows : Salt, 83; annatto, 15; rennet and organic matter, 3 per cent. respectively, making the value of a two-ounce box, costing at retail $2.50, about 3 cents.

The Government chemist publishes a circular which states that the U. S. Salyx Co., of New Concord, Ohio, claim to be sole proprietors of this compound, and at the beginning of the year asserted in a circular that they would expend $125,000 in advertising during 1893 of three specialties—viz., black pepsin, electrofied silver, and a compound extract of salyx. The former is reputed to be a powder prepared expressly for increasing the yield of butter and cheese. Each box, it is claimed, will make 500 pounds of butter. It retails at $2.50 per box, $24 per dozen, ten per cent. off to wholesale and jobbing trade, and three per cent. off for cash in three days.

Prof. H. A. Weber, of Columbus, Ohio, states, "black pepsin consists of salt and coloring matter. The results claimed for the compound could be obtained without their aid." About a year ago a man was convicted and sent to States prison for selling a similar compound. A sample of butter analyzed by an eminent chemist was found to contain : Water, 31.93 ; fat, 67.30; curd, 0.63, and ash (salt), 0.15.—N. Y. Bulletin.

A PUZZLED GROCER.

"It has always been a queer thing to me that people who willingly pay 75 cents for 40-cent. tea are madder than hops if butter jumps two cents a pound."

And because people are queer the grocer ought to get a good round profit. It is said that there are very few experts who can place a correct value on certain lines of linen, velvet, etc., where quality differs slightly between the various samples. We know that tea experts vary greatly in estimating the value of tea; that consumers find it almost impossible to carry color by the eye from one place to another sufficiently well to make a fair comparison. Because of this inability to judge correctly, grocers should get good profits. As a rule, consumers keep posted as to the value of staples. They know the cost of granulated sugar, of established brands of flour and of butter, but when it comes to tea, coffee, spices, dried fruits, flavoring extracts and the larger portion of the line of shelf goods, they are not well enough posted to judge whether the tea or coffee is worth the price asked or not. Just so long as the quality does not offend, they are satisfied. It is folly to cut prices on articles in common use and which people must have but only in limited amount; for instance, bath brick, stove polish, bluing, flavoring extracts, shoe polish, matches, etc. It is the profit put upon little things which offsets the sale of staples at a profit insufficient to cover the cost of the service. Therefore, push the sale of specialties, knicknacks, shelf goods, etc., and let the staples take care of themselves. There is more profit in selling ten cents worth of rice or prunes than five times the quantity of sugar or the pound of butter. Why not, then, put the effort on the paying goods?

To know the peculiarities, the whims, the habits of the people, is as much a part of the grocer's trade as to know the cost of flour or butter, or to know how to count, measure or weigh. In buying shelf goods or such articles as are not freely used consumers will argue to themselves if the price is high: "It's only a trifle, and I don't use much of it anyway; therefore I will not find fault." And it is these very trifles that determine the net gain of a business. There is only a small quantity of tea used in each family daily, and, therefore, its cost makes little impression on the mind of the housekeeper. Then there is the deep-seated impression that the more it costs the better it is; and this the grocer must turn to his advantage. Fancy teas are of high cost, and as the difference in price between these and good medium teas, which suit nine-tenths of consumers, is great, the grocer can always get a heavy profit.

Few palates are educated up to appreciating the niceties of flavor; and that is also a point in favor of good profits, which the people will pay willingly, while getting mad "if butter jumps two cents per pound." People will grumble about quality before they will about price. A perfect service is a safeguard against fault-finding about cost.—American Grocer.

REMINISCENCES OF A LOBSTER PACKER.

An elderly citizen of Portland, who was one of the first to pack lobsters in Maine, and who began business in 1850, talks very interestingly in regard to the great changes in the business since that early period. In 1850 the lobsters caught in Portland bay and those brought from Friendship and Bristol were sufficient in quantity, but the business grew, and in 1859 the firm established a large plant further down the coast. But comparatively few traps were necessary then, for every day each trap would catch from twenty-five to thirty lobsters, and frequently when it was pulled up three or four great savage fellows, weighing from fifteen to twenty pounds, would be clinging to the outside. Disturbed by the movement of the trap, they had seized it and pugnaciously held on. There was no close time then. They packed lobsters there for seventeen summers, and at the end of that time it almost took twenty-five traps to catch a lobster. They had been packing an average of about 20,000 lobsters a day. All the time they were filling orders from the great firm of Crosse & Blackwell, in London. They sent them annually from ten to twenty thousand dozen cans a year. The English were very fond of the spawn or red roe of lobsters, and one specification was that each can should contain a piece of it. Little girls were employed to remove this from the female lobsters. About seventy-five to one hundred pounds of it were handled daily. Of course, this meant the destruction of possible myriads of lobsters in the future; but the present law is no more effective than the absence of law then. It provides that no female lobsters shall be taken with eggs attached outside, but those with the eggs, or roe, inside are still taken. A law prohibiting the catching of any female lobsters during the proper months (between April and September, perhaps) would alone prevent the rapid annihilation of this delicious shellfish that is going on to-day.

In 1874 the firm was obliged to remove to Nova Scotia in quest of sufficient lobsters. Their was the first, or possibly the second plant on that coast, every little cove of which has now a packing establishment. Then they paid 35 cents for 100 pounds. Now the price is $1.50. In so far as he knows our informant was the first to stop the cruel and unnecessary practice of thrusting small pegs of wood into the joint of the lobster's claw to prevent their biting each other when placed in the cars. It was fully 20 years ago that he told his men not to "plug" the lobsters that year. They were placed in the car and the trifling injury they did each other was nothing compared to the value of the cans of the meat that had been spoiled by one of those pine plugs being boiled with it. Also the vast time and labor of making the plugs and plugging the lobsters was saved. The plugs were about an inch and a half long, flat on one side, round on the other and with a sharp point. We learned for the first time, and believe that many who read this will have a similar experience, that lobsters are right and left-handed, so to speak. The two long claws on either side of the head are different. The larger has no sharp teeth on the edges, and is used to hold the prey or food, while the smaller has many sharp teeth and is used to tear the food, held by the larger, and carry the fragments to the mouth. These claws are on right and left sides indiscriminately and apparently with no preference either way, as will be seen by examining any pile of lobsters. Our informant says that few people are aware of this fact, that he has seldom known a retail fish dealer that knew of it, and offered to make the experiment at the nearest fish market. We found that the dealer, though he had handled lobsters for years, had never noticed this peculiarity of their claws. A right-handed lobster would be one whose smaller claw, which does the tearing of food and feeding of the mouth, is on the right side and vice versa.

There is an unusually large catch of lobsters this year; not for many years have the smacks brought so many to this market. Our authority says it is due to the fact that there have been fewer heavy storms along the Nova Scotia coast than for many years. Always during his long experience he has found that more lobsters are caught under such conditions. The more the water is disturbed the more they hide away under the rocks, and vice versa.—Portland Transcript.

SOUTH AFRICA FRUIT TRADE.

The South African fruit season, having come to a close, so far as exports to England are concerned, the trade have made up their statements, and found results very encouraging. The total number of packages shipped was 18,128, yielding an average return of about $13.50 per package. Grapes were the largest item, 10,896 packages, and peaches next, with 2,428 packages. There were 533 packages of apples, 654 of pears, 481 of apricots, 181 of melons, 2,717 of tomatoes and 206 of quinces. The figures here given are small when compared with the yearly imports of fruits into Great Britain, but representing as they do the early efforts of South African growers to open up a new market for their products, they are of some importance both in volume and in variety. The steamship lines trading between London and the Cape of Good Hope have done much to encourage this trade, making special arrangements in their steamers for carrying the fruit shipments, and it is stated that in no single instance where advantage has been taken of these, have the fruits been landed out of condition. Taken in conjunction with experiences in the Australian fruit shipments, the results prove that delicate fresh fruit can be conveyed in cool chambers a long voyage through the tropics in good condition and with the flavor fully preserved.—N. Y. Bulletin.

A BIG DEAL IN RASPBERRIES.

During next week the first carload of Canadian raspberries will leave Montreal for Boston, being the first shipment on account of some sweeping purchases made recently in Canada on behalf of fruit dealers in New York and Boston. The agent who did the buying for the syndicate of Americans was a well known Bonsecours market dealer and he has had his men out scooping in all the berries he could get during the past fortnight. The result of this heavy purchasing has been that although the receipts of berries at Montreal have been unusually heavy the crops being a large one prices have been kept steady by the prospect of this large quantity of fruit been taken across the lines and so relieving the local pressure. So far as known from 70,000 to 100,000 packages of berries have been contracted for on behalf of the American syndicate, and the ruling price has been 70c. From this it is evident they must want the fruit very badly, for it is the exact figure at which they are jobbing out in an ordinary way to the trade in Montreal. Therefore the Americans must have hopes of a pretty high market at home to induce them to make these large purchases at this comparatively full figure. Most of the buying so far has been done in the St. Jerome district, but they are paying attention to other sections as well.

MORE ABOUT CANNED SALMON.

THE GROCER has from time to time exclusively posted the trade with regard to the phases of the position regarding canned salmon, predicting the possibility of some interesting developments. It seems likely from news to hand this week in Montreal that these developments were likely to follow. All sorts of rumors have been in circulation during the spring and summer with regard to the new pack; first of all there were extremely low offers, and then these were supplemented by the news that the pack was to be restricted, in fact everything was calculated to mix up buyers. Recently, however, news has been received in Montreal which outlines the future situation with a reasonable de-degree of certainty. This news is that the Indians and half-breeds on whom the British Columbia canners depend for salmon had struck for higher prices for their fish caused considerable excitement among the grocery trade to-day. Advices are that the run in the northern rivers is a pronounced failure. There is a very good run in the Fraser River, but it is about three weeks late. One agent sold about 34 cars early in the season, and the men who bought at that time are considerably elated, as they stand to make considerable money, their contracts being made at $1.27 per dozen, while it is doubtful if contracts could be made to-day at $1.50. There is a strong probability, however, that these orders will not be filled, but that the purchasers will only receive a proportion of their order as there is hardly a doubt now that the packers will not be able to fill them, the lateness of the run and the strike of the catchers being drawbacks which they will not be able to overcome. No talk is now heard about that agreement under which the packers agreed to curtail the pack. All in all, as we have said, the situation promises to be interesting, as we predicted at the time these very low offers were made in the spring and early summer.

"TEA WEIGHTS AND TARES."

DEAR GROCER,—The letter under the above title in last issue is a departure in journalism re the tea trade, in that he is the first, I believe, to point out that wholesale merchants sometimes buy a tea for Ceylon and it turns out an Indian, or vice versa. The reference to tares is important, as showing that many grocers don't know enough to weigh their tea and see that they get it. I suppose the same rule applies to sugar and soap. If not, why not? Your correspondent seems to be a good man to buy tea from, as he appears to claim to give two lbs. more tare than anybody else, though I can't quite defend his leniency when dealing with the man who sells a tea for one kind and it turns out to be another. Your correspondent is something of a humorist. His offer to prove his statements by giving names to THE GROCER privately, recalls the story of the man Mark Twain tells about, who was chased by a buffalo, and that when he climbed a tree for safety the buffalo climbed after him. As some of the boys seemed to hesitate about receiving the statement, he exclaimed, "Now, if some of you boys don't believe that buffalo climbed the tree, here's a piece of the bark!" The young men who get ahead of their customers and then go to the bucket shops with their ill gotten gains, should read his letter carefully and mend their ways while yet there is time. The warning to them should have particular force coming from the source it does, and with his example before them, we fervently trust they will turn them from the narrow way, and enter the broad road that leads to scientific knowledge in tea blending and buying.

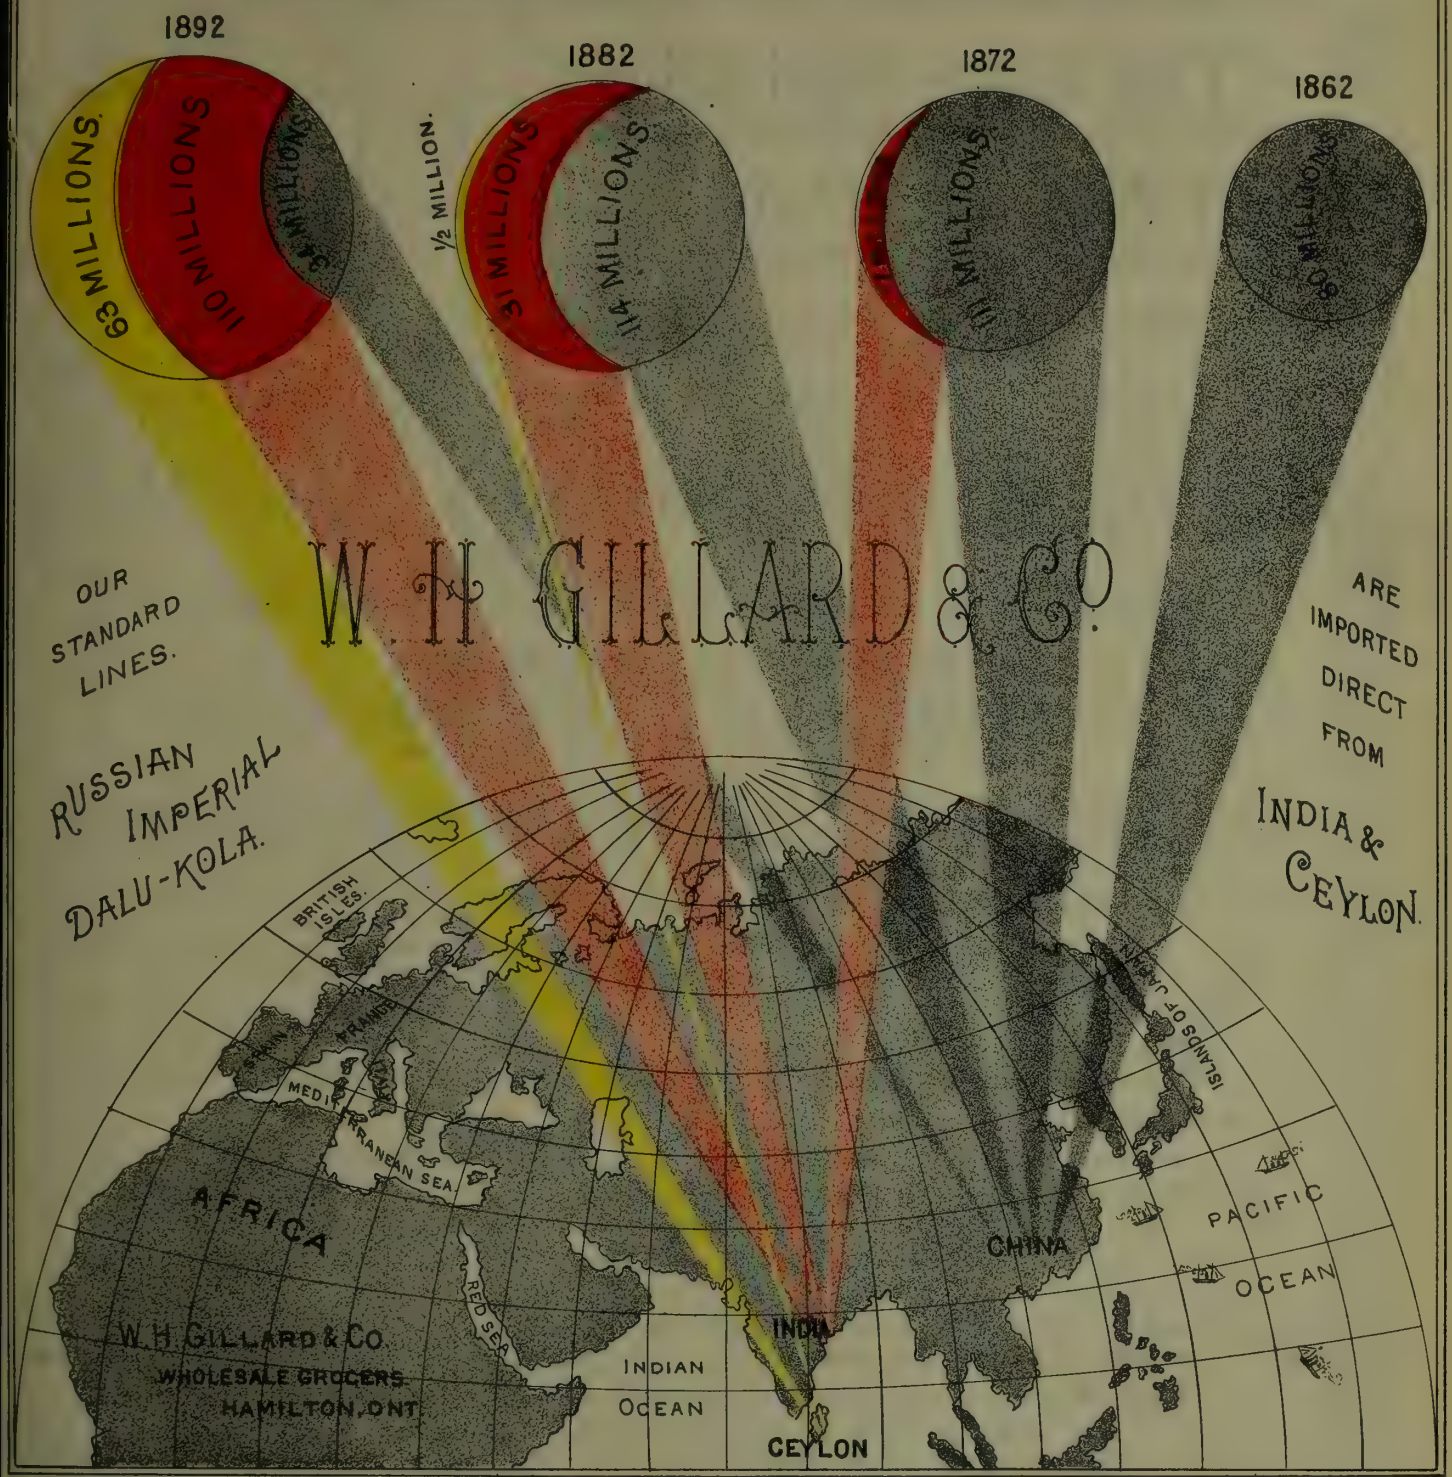
LONDON GROCERS' PICNIC.

The program of the third annual picnic of the Retail Grocers' Association of London, to be held in the Queen's Park, London, July 26th, is out. It reveals that the Association has provided entertainment ad infinitum for the occasion, and a most enjoyable outing is anticipated. These compose the managing committee: W. H. Ferguson, president; John Moule, vice-president; C. J. Wall, treasurer; E. Sutton, secretary. All the London grocers' will close up on the day of the picnic.

BRANDS OF CURRANTS.



Referring to the pretentions made by some currant shippers regarding the importance of securing their brands in order to avoid the inferior grades that "it has been the custom of late years to import into this country," the following extracts from a letter from a well-known shipper savor of sound common sense:

"Currants are not a manufactured article, and no one can make them any better than the atmospheric conditions of each season admit of, and the care and attention of each individual grower to his crop, further allows of. Now each firm established in this trade has endeavored to find out which growers, in each various district, are the most careful and reliable in the cultivation and preparation of their produce, or which (owing to certain favorable conditions of their soil, etc.) are able to show the best quality, and it has been their endeavor always to secure the first refusal of these favorable lots." In this respect the advantage is clearly with those long-established and well-known firms who have acquired the sympathy and esteem of the most desirable growers, by many years of favorable experience and fair dealing, and these make no absurd pretentions to the exclusive advantages possessed by their BRANDS, though they pack some of the best growths, under brands, which by careful selection from year to year, the trade have come to recognize as reliable. The bulk of the crop (provincial) they do not ship under brands. It consists of the growth of many provinces, from the fine production of Campos, Kyparissia, etc., down to the low grades of Calamata and Nisi, and it is a well known fact that the importations of Provincial currants to this country are of a much higher class than those imported to the United States, the standard of which (American staple) is quite unsuited to Canadian requirements. It is absurp to suppose that a fine Provincial currant of good color, etc., that a buyer here concedes to be worth ¼ to ½c. per lb. more than a low grade, can be bought by anyone in Greece at the same price. They are better judges of value than we are, and a grower of fine quality gets his price, on the quality (i. e. what it is worth in excess of a poor sample.) The shipper that has the best facilities, and the most complete connection throughout the growing districts, with the most reliable growers is the only one that can claim any advantages over others in securing reliable qualities.

F. W. Hudson, 50 Front street east Toronto, has been appointed local agent for Sterling soap.

Due entirely to an oversight THE GROCER, in the issue of July 7, failed to give credit to the American Grocer for an article published under the heading, "The Grocer and the Kitchen."

"The Cups that Cheer but Not Inebriate."

We direct the attention of the Retail Trade to the Tea chart presented on the foregoing page of the Grocer.

THIS Chart exhibits in a striking manner the extraordinary development in the production of India and Ceylon Teas, and the rapid increase in their consumption in Great Britain.

The hold that these TEAS have taken upon the public taste in Great Britain is due to their superior intrinsic merit in parity with China growths. In Canada they are slowly and surely winning their way into popular favor, warranting the prediction, that it is only a question of time when they will as fully supersede China grown Teas in Canada as they have done in the United Kingdom.

To meet the growing demand we have been giving special attention to the importation of India and Ceylon Teas, and we will be pleased to supply samples of the following standard lines:

DALU KOLA, - -	Price 35 Cents.
IMPERIAL, - - -	" 33 Cents.
RUSSIAN, - - -	" 30 Cents.

These Teas are packed in 50, 80 and 100 lb. air-tight, metal-lined cases, with hinged lids, and incased in wood. This is far ahead of the lead-lined packages. The Tea keeps better, and especially in retailing, as it is never exposed when not in use. The character and flavor are always maintained, so that buyers can depend on having precisely similar Tea when re-ordering, and save the time and trouble of matching. They are RICH, HEAVY LIQUOR, FULL-BODIED TEAS, and just such lines as thousands of consumers are looking for. The "IMPERIAL" is particularly adapted for alkaline water.

Wherever sold these Teas have given unusual satisfaction, resulting in a steadily increasing trade. We would be pleased if every reader of the Grocer not handling them would write us for samples.

PACKAGE TEAS, are claiming a good deal of attention, but, for the reason that there is an extra expense in putting up in ½ and 1 pound lead packages the profit to the merchant is necessarily less provided the same quality of Tea is sold. To meet the popular demand, however, we have secured control for Western Ontario, of the MALLAWALLA; a blend of pure Indian and Ceylon Teas, rich and delicious in the cup, and a trial with other advertised brands will convince you of its superiority over all package Teas. The MALLAWALLA is packed in ½ and 1 pound lead foil packages, 50 pounds in a case, or in assorted cases of 50 pounds, containing equal weight of ½ and 1 pound. This Tea is sold largly in the United Kingdom and Australia, and is the only package Tea offered to Canadian consumers which has stood the critical test of English tea drinkers for upwards af 12 years.

The steamer Bonavista, of the Black Diamond line, sailed from Montreal on Friday last for St. John's, Nfld., with 21 head of cattle and 20 sheep, which are being shipped as an experiment. This is the first shipment of Canadian cattle to Newfoundland, and the result will be watched with interest by cattle shippers. The cattle were butchers' stock, weighing on the average 1,150 pounds each, and the sheep averaged 150 pounds each. It will take the Bonavista about six days to reach St. John's, as she will call at several intermediate ports.

"How is it," said a gentleman to a good old Scotch woman, "that your son John, who had so fair a chance when you set him up in business, should have broken down, while you began with nothing at all, and are now well off?" "I will tell ye," she answered. "When we began, my auld man and me, we lived on oat meal and haver bread, and a' things of that sort, but when we began to be weel-to-do we would noo and then have a chicken; but the trouble wi' John and his wife is, that they began wi' the chickens, and now they can hardly get the oatmeal."

Elwood Cooper, the noted horticulturist of California, is reported by the Ventura Observer as saying that he had on fifteen year old trees over 200 pounds of olives to the tree. Bottled, the profits are as follows: Eight and three-fourths pounds to the bottle, say 22 bottles, worth $1, less 5 per cent., 1,188 bottles, $1.129. Cost of pickling and preparing, 25 per cent., $282; net $847 per acre. According to this, it is stated that olive trees at 15 years old are much more profitable than walnuts, apricots, or probably any other kind of fruit grown in California.

The teacher had the arithmetic class before her, at the head of which was the grocer's boy. "John," she asked, "if a man should buy a barrel of sugar weighing 200 pounds at 3 cents a pound, and sell it at 6 cents a pound, what profit would he make?" John gave the question only a moment's thought. "Seven dollars and a half ma'am," he answered with confidence. "Next," said the teacher promptly. "Hold on," interrupted John, "my answer was right." "It was not," said the teacher with firmness. "Why wasn't it?" insisted John. "Let the next boy answer and you will see." The next boy answered $6. "That's correct," said the teacher. John looked at the other boy contemptuously. "Maybe it is, in arithmetic," he said, "but it ain't in the grocery business," and as John gave place to the boy below him the teacher heard him mutter something about "extry fer sand."—Detroit Free Press.

After the return of the drummer from his travels his young wife explored his grip, with an expectant face. Failing to find that for which she was apparently in search, she turned to him and said:

"Where is the jag?"

"The what?" he asked in astonishment.

"The jag. Mrs. Laces says her husband saw you in Chicago with a lovely jag on. Whatever it is, you are not wearing it, and it isn't in your grip."

"Oh, that's all right I left it at the office, By the way, I saw a handsome spring hat in a milliner's shop down town. If you care, we will go down town and you can look at it, and if you like it you can have it."—New York Press.

STEER STRAIGHT.

"There is only one road to success, and that is in a bee line from where you stand." That saying of a well-known writer upon commercial topics might be classed as one of the axioms of trade. Men follow it and attain success, and then comes the danger, the deviations and disaster. The successful man gains besides money, a supreme confidence in himself. And he has a right to. He has demonstrated that he is the possessor of those qualities which the world has endorsed as the chief requisites of success. His straight steering has brought him to affluence and given him a surplus. That surplus is the reef upon which the successful man is apt to become a wreck.

He seeks to employ it in lines or ventures foreign to the business he has pursued for a life time. The personal equation is largely eliminated when the surplus goes into the Central American Gold Mining Company; the Irreproachable Dish Washing Machine; the Consolidated New Process Refrigerating Company; The Paradise Railway, or other promising corporation or scheme.

His money goes into the control of others, to be used in operations of which he has no technical knowledge. He has a voice as a director or officer, in a line of business of which he is not a master—only a novice. He can be and is misled, deceived, disappointed—often ruined.

We recall X— with $50,000. He became interested in a patent for making a very merchantable article in twenty-four hours, which ordinarily required days. He pinned his faith and put up his money to back the enterprise. He was told by a shrewder man, that while the process was feasible, the product lacked keeping qualities. He was blind to all objections; went ahead, built a factory, produced the stuff, saw it spoil as predicted, was chagrined over the failure; lost his money, and died broken-hearted.

Recently the newspapers announced the failure of a man trained to a business that netted him $75,000 per year. That would enable him to spend $25,000 per annum for living, and put away $50,000 per annum, and thereby add $750,000 or more to his fortune every ten years. But he was fond of schemes; particularly those controlled by patents, and into them his money poured; they proved so many sink holes, and finally left him high and dry, minus his prestige, business and fortune. Almost every day the newspapers tell a similar story.

A few days since, a manufacturer who started in life with nothing but one superior article, refused $12,000,000 for his business. He steered straight from the beginning up to the present. Money rolls in upon him in huge volume, and he is solicited to enter innumerable enterprises. Approached to invest in another long established and profitable business he said: "No! I have one inflexible rule. Never to touch any enterprise other than my chosen business. I will not have the care and responsibility of divided interests. My surplus income goes into first-class dividend-paying bonds." That man's only trouble outside of his business is cutting coupons.

It is common rumor on Wall street that one of the richest associations of capitalists in this country has lost money in nearly all of its operations outside of that in which it is legitimately engaged, and which has made some of the greatest fortunes in America. Within a short time they were forced to put up millions er means. Temptation to outside investment. They have been saddled with enterprises that are unproductive and minus a future.

What is true of giants in the business world is equally true of the men of smaller emans. Temptation to outside investment comes to the proprietor of a news stand or peanut vendor, if he has loose money, with the same persistency that it pursues a millionaire.

We have noted retail grocers who have taken an interest in a patent buzz saw, carriage spring, or other notion, and which little side show has withdrawn their attention from business, and led them into annoyance and losses.

The road to success is easy, plain and very straight. From success to disaster is a very inviting road, and many there are travelling thereon. The remedy is to invest surplus money where it brings an income from sources that do not demand personal attention, and call for additional capital. Risks there must be, but keep them as light as possible. Today there are tens of thousands wishing they had in their main business the dollars they put into outside enterprises.—American Grocer.

THE SYSTEM OF BUYING.

My article on "Popular Brands," says Jacob Furth in Interstate Grocer, has had the effect of setting grocers to thinking, and has brought out views and expressions of opinion from many who stand high in the estimation of their brother grocers, and who occupy commanding positions in the various trade centres of the country. This much accomplished, I will ask a little more time of the busy grocer to further consider the subject which so much concerns us all, viz., Why is the state of affairs in the grocery business so unsatisfactory and why are our returns so meagre? I take the liberty of suggesting one other reason with my object still continuing to be an effort to get merchants to express themselves, to interchange thoughts, and thus help bring out new ideas, new systems, and a betterment of our condition. In the very nature of our business we are kept so busy attending to details that we frequently overlook the more important duties that attach to our position as business managers. We attend personally to what should be attended to by much cheaper labor, and we fail to take that position in our respective houses which we should take, and which can best be likened to the position of the captain on the bridge. It is in business as elsewhere, the higher we stand the further we can see, the broader is our horizon; the lower the position which we take the more obstructed will be our vision, the less broad will be our ideas, and the less liberal will be our policy. It is true that our business is one of many details which require the personal supervision of proprietors, and much, yes, too much, is expected from them, except when the business is large enough to admit of division into departments, and when competent and experienced men can be employed as department managers. It is therefore but natural that much should be overlooked, and hence an appropriate danger signal may not be considered inappropriate. We frequently attribute all our troubles to our employees, and particularly so to our salesmen, but we do not stop to investigate our own conduct and methods, and to consider whether some at least of our troubles do not originate with us, and whether or not in the most important department of our business, in the office, there is not necessity for the display of more thought and better judgment.

Setting aside for the moment the question of credits and collections, which will furnish subject matter for future consideration, let us examine into our system of buying and carrying stocks. I think I am safe in asserting that as a rule wholesale grocers buy more goods than they need, and carry larger stocks than their capital warrants. The exceptions to this rule will be found to number in their midst the richest houses in the trade, and it has been my experience and observation that the jobbers who buy their canned goods in 50 and 100 case lots, who buy them when they need them, who frequently buy from those jobbers that carry the large stocks, and who are looked down upon with a sort of pity and compassion by the buyers of 5,000 and 10,000 case lots, are those who have money enough to discount their bills, who do not need to look to their banks for accommodation, who sleep soundly in panicky times while the large dealers do the walking and eat the humble pie in the directors' rooms at the various banks. Why is it that jobbers all pitch in at the same time, buy their canned goods either in the beginning or before the opening of the packing season; why, they make bids of five cents per dozen below any price brought to them by the obliging broker when they have not the remotest idea what the goods cost to pack; why is it that they stock up year after year all at the same time; why is it that they try to create a demand for goods that are not needed for six or eight months to come; why they are anxious to relieve the packer of all burdens and all anxieties and assume these burdens for themselves, is beyond my power to comprehend. Has it not occurred to them that if every house in the trade stocks up at the same time that an unnatural competition is created? They rush out to get ahead of their neighbors, to dispose of their early purchases and find out that everybody is as smart as everybody else. that they are similarly situated; that the goods cannot be sold at a reasonable profit when forced on the trade before they are needed. On an advancing market the retailer buys the goods and the jobber is relieved of his cheap goods and forced to replenish at higher prices, and thus it is that he has no goods on hand when they advance and carries the stock on a level market or when they decline. The smart retailer has the cheap goods, the smart jobber has replenished at the advance. The time spent in unloading such goods could be spent to much better advantage by attending to the ordinary routine business and supplying the trade with what is legitimately needed and what could therefore be sold at fair margin and with a reasonable profit.

Year after year profits are thus sacrificed at the beginning of the packing season; heaven and earth are set in motion to get rid of goods thoughtlessly bought; to crawl out from under them as the phrase goes among the trade, and the same mistakes are made every year, and, following a leader like a herd of mules, we all buy, because one man bought, and we all pay the penalty of our foolishness. Year after year when the packing season draws to a close or is entirely over, the manufacturer appears as a competitor to the jobber that carries a large stock, and forces him to buy again at the decline in order to average up the cost of holdings and nothing short of a drouth or boom can pull the holder out of his difficulties. We all know how much money is made in booms. I venture to say that the greater portion of all the money thus made is made only on paper, and, like the men in Buckram, is more or less a delusion. When the end of the season comes and stocks are cleaned up, there is more money lost on a case of goods carried over than was made on five cases in the early part of the season, and losses are entailed greater than the profit made on the advances. The speculative nature of the grocer seems to be abnormally developed. He differs from the oirdinary speculator in having but one string to his bow, while the man in the pit or on the floors of the exchanges has two strings. The ordinary speculator can make as much money on a decline as he can on an advance, but the grocer is always a bull. For him goods must go up to make money, but we all know that they do not always go up, and, consequently when they go down he is frequently and sometimes seriously hurt. The spirit of gambling is abroad in the land and the grocer is no exception. In no one article is our folly better and more frequently illustrated than in the one article of dried fruits. We know in this city, of fruits being sold ahead at a price far above what was deemed fair and prudent by the majority of the trade. Within five weeks after the purchase of these goods the buyers had a loss of fifteen per cent., but this loss would be insignificant, and would be nobody's business but their own, did not offers of this kind have a serious and demoralizing effect on the entire business. The commission merchant holding such contracts can afford to pay more money for the goods than is warranted by existing conditions and the state of the crops, and by doing so sets a precedent and establishes a basis for every grower, dryer and dealer. Everybody tries to get as much money for his product as his neighbor, and the rash act demoralizes a market, retards trade, and does a positive injury to everybody in the business.

It is, of course, an easy matter to reject fruits on a declining market, and perhaps for that reason there may be less risk in buying them, but I am satisfied that no such motives prompted these buyers, and, while they will certainly be entitled to take advantage of every technicality to get out of a bad bargain, there is neither rhyme or reason in making offers on goods of which we do not know the value; when every advantage is on the side of the seller and none on our side. Large stocks entail large carrying charges, and make it necessary to dispose of goods without that regard to profits which sound judgment would indicate. Large stocks mean heavy indebtedness, and when the day of reckoning comes, as it periodically does, when loans are called and prices decline, then comes the wail and the cry, and we look about for causes, and we ask ourselves why it is that the grocery business does not pay. Let us think this matter over; let us talk it over; let us put the blame where it belongs. Let us endeavor to force the manufacturer to carry stocks as his profits justify him in doing so while ours do not. Let them furnish their goods to the jobber as he needs them, and there will be always a legitimate profit for the dealer and less occasion for the grumbling and for cutting prices. Let us remember that we cannot be smarter than our competitors; that they have the same means at their command that we have; that information is to be had even without asking for it; that in addition to the telegraph and the telephone, steam and electricity, we have with us that creation of the industrial age called the broker. It is his business to sell goods, and when the large buyer is filled up, or appears overstocked, he is kind enough to furnish supplies and information to those who buy in smaller quantities, and we find that the battle is not always to the strong, and that the smaller jobber, with his 50 and 100 cases, is a competitor even more dangerous then the largest holder. It is almost always the jobber who buys frequently and constantly, who looks after his stock regularly, that makes the money, and in course of time, of yore, "the stone that the builders rejected" becomes the keystone of the arch, and the houses which were despised and looked down upon by the large holders of stocks became the leaders, while those who did the large business vanished from the face of the earth, and not a trace of them is left. Every large trade centre furnishes proof of this assertion, and in 25 years that I have been on the street I have seen dozens of such large buyers go out of business and the small ones gradually become larger, and take their places at the front. All this, in my opinion, demonstrates the truth of my assertion that in the buying lies the secret of success and the key to the situation.

A NEW DRYING ESTABLISHMENT.

The fish drying establishment on Liverpool wharf is the scene of activity just now. It is here where Whitman's drying process is in operation. A description of this large building and an explanation of the drying process has already appeared in the Chronicle. A Chronicle reporter paid a visit to this establishment yesterday afternoon. Everything was running in full blast. Forty-five men are employed. The fish are landed on the wharf and carted into the lower storey of the building, where they are washed and heaped. The drying machine is in the top storey and the pressing is done in the second. A ridiculous statement has been made by a city paper to the effect that this establishment is depriving a certain class of people of employment. The case is just the opposite. Formerly the fish were partially dried at the outports and the process completed in Halifax. Now the fish is brought here in the green state and a large number of men find profitable and steady employment in preparing it for shipment. The new process is giving splendid satisfaction. The fish is commanding a higher price and readier market than that cured under the old process and the fishermen are enabled to dispose of their catches without waiting five or six months for their returns. The stock of fish on hand at present is valued at $25,000. Mr. Whitman is to be congratulated on the success of his venture.

Julius Liebscher and David White are keepers of shops in the same building at No. 235 Delancey street, New York. Liebscher is a shoemaker and White a grocer.

"How are your eggs to-day, neighbor?" asked the shoemaker yesterday, and he took away two.

In a few minutes he returned with a sour face and with the eggs in a glass. They had outlived their usefulness.

"Nice fresh eggs, eh?" he said. "Well, give them back to you for nothing."

The grocer received both glass and eggs full in the face, and the court was subsequently called upon to adjudicate.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, July 20, 1893.

GROCERIES.

The volume of business this week is probably not so large as a week ago, but it is still of fair proportion notwithstanding. Travellers are sending in good sized orders and the outlook is bright. A deterrent to trade at the moment is the fact that a good many merchants in the country are taking their holidays. Most of the warehouses are short-handed because of much the same thing. There is a little better feeling in teas and people are more disposed to buy. In sugars the situation remains much as before, except it be that the demand is not so brisk. Nothing new or interesting has developed in coffees. Trade is fair in dried fruits and a fair movement is reported in rice. Demand is probably lighter for canned goods, but there is no change as regards price. No complaints are heard regarding payments.

COFFEES.

There is nothing new to note on the local market. In New York the better grades are steady, while the poorer grades are rather easy. The market there is inactive, no one in view of the financial condition being disposed to do business. We quote as before: Rio, 19½ to 21½c.; East Indian, 27 to 30c.; South American, 21 to 23c.; Santos, 21 to 22c.; Java, 30 to 32c.; Mocha, 26 to 27c.; Maracaibo, 21 to 23c.

DRIED FRUIT.

There is not a great deal doing in Valencia raisins, and prices are unchanged. Ordinary off-stalk Valencias sells at 4¾ to 5¼c. according to quality and selects at 6¼ to 7c. A good trade is being done in currants at steady prices, good provincials selling at 5½ to 6c., fine Patras at 7½ to 8½c., and Vostizzas at 8 to 9c. There is the usual trade doing in Sultanas at 6¼ to 6¾c. for good, 7¼ to 7¾c. for fine and 8 to 8¾c. for choice. Demand continues limited for prunes at 7½c. for "U's" and "A's," and 8½c. for "B's," in cases. Dates, dull at 5 to 5½c. There is not much stock of figs and the little demand that there is is confined to the cooking article.

NUTS.

Quiet and unchanged. We quote:—Brazil nuts 11 to 11½c. a pound; Sicily shelled almonds, 32 to 35c. a pound; unshelled, 16 to 17c.; peanuts, 13 to 14c. for roasted and 11 to 12½c. for green; cocoa nuts, $5 to $5.50 per sack; Marbot walnuts 11½ to 12c.; pecans 13½ to 16c.

RICE AND SPICES.

Rice is in fair demand, with more of the finest grades moving than anything else, at about 5½ to 6c.; B is quoted at 5⅝ to 5¾c. Spices quiet and unchanged, whole ginger being quoted at 20 to 25c.; pure white pepper at 20 to 28c., and pure black at 14 to 16c.

SUGAR.

There has been no material change in the local situation regarding sugar. The volume of business may be scarcely as large as a week ago, but there is still a good movement, although principally in small lots. For granulated 5¾c. is the ruling figure, but the range runs ⅛c. lower for the Lower Province article; 4½ to 5¼c. is the range for yellows, the latter figure being for an extra bright and the former for a dark sugar.

Willett & Gray's, New York, Sugar Statistical says: The week—Raws unchanged. Refined advanced 1-16c. Receipts, 31,295 tons. Meltings, 12,000 tons. The total stock in all the principal countries, 941,694 tons, against 1,230,443 tons at same date last year. Afloats to the United States from all countries estimated, 50,000 tons, against 70,000 tons last year.

Raws—There has been an almost entire absence of demand during the week, caused by the change of policy on the part of refiners to a hand-to-mouth basis. The first half of the year refiners have worked their houses very full and somewhat beyond the requirements for consumption, thereby carrying all the time a surplus stock of refined, which may be estimated at say 40,000 tons. The wholesale and retail grocers of the country have been placing their business on this hand-to-mouth basis for several weeks past, and have now pretty generally reached it, so that soon there will be very little, if any, invisible stock in this country beyond the usual minimum amount absolutely required in store or in transit. The purchases of raws during the remainder of this campaign will probably be closely limited to the current demand for refiners' product. This demand should be quite large for the next 60 days at least, before the expiration of which time our Congress, which is called together for August 7th, may be in agitation over a tariff on sugar, which will introduce a new element of uncertainty into the business.

Refined—As already said, the country is rapidly approaching a hand to mouth basis of buying, partly, no doubt, because of the financial troubles crowding upon us, and partly because the trade generally have secured good profits thus far this year, which they will not risk so readily on the present advanced basis of values. There is some danger of carrying this conservatism too far on all sides, and with reduced production and delayed purchases, some disappointment may come from delayed shipments, which are already being met on a few grades of softs, of which there are no surplus stocks. The demand of the week has evidently exhausted the consigned stocks of refiners in western cities and has brought largely increased orders to the eastern markets, especially during the last few days. This tends to restore to some extent the nominal parity of difference between raws and refined, and a first small advancement of 1-16c. has been made, to be followed very likely by other advances later, if required by existing conditions. While it is well, perhaps, to keep to a conservative basis of buying, yet no danger of loss is visible from carrying a fair over supply of stock, and it may save some disappointment in the way of deliveries to do so.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.

Syrups remain quiet and unchanged at from 2c. up. Molasses dull, and the ruling price is 32c. for barrels and 34½c. for half-barrels.

TEA.

There is a little better feeling in teas, people showing more disposition to buy, but values are yet low. Locally the demand is mostly for new Japans. Latest advices from London report the market extremely quiet notwithstanding the arrival of the new crop of Monings, the quality of which is on the whole good. This is particularly noticeable in Ningchows. The price of the new Monings keeps up, but as yet they will not compete with Ceylons.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The situation is in sellers' favor, demand being good, prices firm, stocks light and the feeling healthy. Receipts are mostly of store-packed tub, the greater part of which, when sweet, goes out at 17c. The range for this is 16 to 18c. for strictly fine dairy packed, and 15 to 16c. for store-packed mediums mixed in color. Fine dairy crock is selling at 16 to 18c. Farmers' pound rolls are in good demand and plentiful at 17c. Bakers' butter is scarce at 12 to 15c., according to quality. In creamery tubs there is not much required, and we quote 20 to 21c. Pound prints, however, are in good supply and demand is brisk at 22 to 23c.

The cheese market is firm and demand good, with the greater part going out at 9¾c.; the range is from 9½ to 10c.; 9c. is the idea in the country.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Not much doing and prices remain as before. A medium article can be got at $1.20, but for good hand-picked beans $1.40 to $1.50 is the idea.

DRIED APPLES—Quiet; jobbers are paying 3½ to 4c. and selling, as a rule, at 4½c., although the range is from 4 to 5c. according to quality and size

EVAPORATED APPLES—Nothing doing and prices are nominal at 8½ to 9c.

EGGS—Receipts are liberal and prices easier at 11½c.

POTATOES—Old are practically out of the market, and they are nominal at 75c. on track; new are lower at $2 75 to $3, HONEY—Quiet and unchanged at 5 to 8c. for extracted dark and white respectively.

POULTRY—Supplies are plentiful and prices are lower at 50 to 65c. for spring chickens and at 50 to 70c. for ducks.

ONIONS—Unchanged, at $2 to $2.25 per sack for Egyptian onions and at $2.25 to $2.50 per crate for Bermudas.

HOPS—Quiet and Unchanged, at 17 to 18c. for small lots.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

In dressed hogs there is not much doing on account of the hot weather; $7.75 to $8 is the idea as to prices. A good enquiry is

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

Like about every branch in the grocery trade canned goods is unmarked by any predominating feature. Taken on the whole the volume of business is of a good average character, although vegetables do not exhibit as much activity as they did. As regards futures, the policy of the jobbers seems to be to refrain from placing orders an this account, and business of this kind is lighter than it has been for years. The demand for tomatoes is rather lighter than it was, but it is with the margin of profits that dissatisfaction is expressed; 85 to 90c. is the idea, and while a few cases might be obtained under the inside figure quoted that is, as a rule, about all. Peas are unchanged, the general run going out at 85 to 90c., with the fancy article selling up to $1.40. Present season's growth are now being packed. There is a fair movement in corn, and while stocks in this line are lighter than in any other it is likely they will be ample for requirements; 85 to 90c. is the ruling price for ordinary and $1.25 for fancy. Peaches are not much wanted and stocks are light and prices unchanged, at $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's and $3 to $3.25 for 3's. Pumpkins are in good demand at 85 to 90c. Plums are in fair demand and unchanged at $1.45 to $1.55. There is very little doing in raspberries and prices are unchanged, at $1.75 to $2. Apples are scarce, but there is not much doing. We quote as before at $2 to $2.25 for gallons and 85c. to $1 for 3's. Salmon is in good demand for the better brands; $1.50 seems to be about the lowest figure at which can be got good fish in tall cans. Light stuff can of course be got much cheaper, but no one seems to want it. The best brands of lobster are still in good demand; but other brands are neglected. An inferior article can be got as low as $1.60, but the idea is $1 90 to $2.10 for talls and $2.50 to $2.70 for flats. Meats are in fair demand and unchanged in price.

MONTREAL.

So far as local business goes the canned goods market is flat with nothing of importance doing, except in salmon which is very scarce and grades are paying $1.50 freely for supplies and find them hard to get. We refer to the matter specially elsewhere.

MARKETS—Continued.

reported for barrel pork for the lumbering camps at $21 for mess and at $21.50 for short cut. There is a good demand for smoked meats and there is a brisker movement in lard, owing at least to some extent to the higher prices for butter. There have been some carload shipments of green meat to the Coast, 11¼c. being obtained for hams, 9c. for rolls, 11½c. for breakfast bacon, and 12¾ to 13¼c. for lard. Further enquiries from the same direction have been heard for hams.

BACON—Long clear, 10½ to 11c. Smoked backs 12½c., bellies, 13½ to 14c. rolls 10½ to 10¾c.

HAMS—In good demand and firm at 13 to 13½c. for smoked.

LARD—Pure Canadian is 13c. in tubs, 13¼c. in pails and 12¾c. in tierces. Compound 10 to 10½c.

BARREL PORK—Canadian heavy mess $21, Canadian short cut $22, shoulder mess $19.50.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef fores are 5 to 5½c., hindquarters 9½ to 10c., mutton 7 to 9c., lamb 15 to 17c.

GREEN FRUIT.

Trade continues good. There is a brisk movement in lemons, but the season for oranges is about over. The market for bananas is weaker than it has been this season on account of large supplies and a demand none to good. They can now be got as low as 75c. per bunch. Watermellons are selling well, while supplies are not as liberal as a week ago. Raspberries are plentiful and cheap. We quote: Oranges —Messinas, ½ boxes of 80's, $2.50; ¼ boxes of 100's, $2.50 to $2.75; lemons, $4.50 to $5.25; bananas, $1.50 to $2; raspberries, 7c to 9c.; cherries 90 to $1.25 per basket; red currants 65 to 75c. per basket; tomatoes $1.30 to $1.40 per crate; cucumbers, 30c per doz.; beans, 75c. to $1 per bush.; gooseberries, 50 to $1 per basket; cabbage, $1.75 to $2.25 per bbl. for Canadian; watermelons, 20 to 30c.; California fruit—Apricots $2.25; peaches, $2 to $2.25.

FISH.

Trade in fish continues good, although the hot weather has compelled fresh water caught fish to drop out. Blue back herring has declined $1 per hundred. We quote as follows: Fresh sea salmon, 15c.; skinned and boned codfish, 6½c.; Labrador herring, $3 per half barrel; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 11 to 12½c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; blue back herring, $1 to $1.50 per hundred; blue pickerel, 4 to 5c. a lb.; yellow ditto, 7 to 8c. a lb.; salmon trout and white fish, 7c.; eels, 6 to 8c. a lb.

SALT.

Sales in salt during the week have been good, this being the busy season with salt dealers. Ruling prices in car lots were barrel salt $1; coarse, in sacks, 68c.; dairy, $1.25; Liverpool rock, $10 per ton.

HIDES, SKINS, TALLOW, WOOL.

HIDES—The market in hides remains weak. Few car lots are being sold at 4¾c. Green is coming in at 4c. for No. 1 and 3c. for No. 2.

SKINS—Calfskins remain much the same. Veal dealers are paying 7c. for selected No. 1. No demand for cured. Lamb skins remain firm at 40c.; few full grown sheep skins are running at $1 to $1.50. Pelts are from 15 to 20c., having dropped 5c. during the week.

WOOL—A few round lots are moving at 17 to 18c. for selected combing. Large dealers say these prices are too high, as they leave no margin of profit to the dealers of domestic wools. United States wools have dropped down to a point that is fairly out, and compares favorably with our domestic wools As the anticipated change of the United States tariff has already been discounted, farmers and dealers in wool in Canada need not expect any rise in the price of wool by a reduction of duties. Foreign wools are in moderate demand, but not equal to the demand, as factories are running on full time the consumption of wool is large.

TALLOW—The tallow that is being offered is of an inferior quality and difficult to sell, the soap manufasturers not caring to buy country summer-rendered tallow. Several factories have closed down, as they cannot find a market for their productions at prices that will pay, and if this goes on tallow will have to come down. Dealers are paying 5c. for rendered and selling at 5¾c; rough is unchanged at 2c.

PETROLEUM.

The Petroleum Advertiser, in its weekly report, says: We are pleased to note this week a stronger feeling in crude values, and the signs of the times can be seen on our Oil Exchange, for where a good deal of apathy has been displayed for a long time past, one sees now enquiries made for large blocks of oil, with holders displaying an amount of confidence that was not observable a few weeks ago. A continuation of this policy means a hastening of that day of $1.50 oil which is now dawning. Activity in refined continues very good for the time of year, although shipments have improved for illuminating oils the past week, it can hardly be said that the market has advanced beyond 10c. car lots. The market to-day may really be said to be very sympathetic, each refiner watching the other, and manifesting, as a rule, a desire to await the course of events, and does not launch out into the cutting business, and there seems to be a general desire on the part of manufacturers to decline quotations for future deliveries, except at advanced figures. The disposition among refiners, we are informed, is to hold oil for higher figures for the last half of September, in car lots, but the free offers to dealers of five and ten barrel lots at 10½c. has had the effect to disturb values.

MARKET NOTES.

Musson & Co. have an exceptionally fine line of Rio coffee in stock.

Smith & Keighley are offering fine selected Valencia raisins in 14-lb. boxes.

Eby, Blain & Co. are placing a good many orders for salmon to arrive.

Sloan & Crowther are still showing some fine values in first Young Hysons.

Perkins, Ince & Co. have just received a shipment of their "Sailor Boy" brand of Japan tea.

T. Kinnear & Co. are showing a fine sample of imported Japan rice at a reasonable figure.

Warren Bros. & Boomer are quoting low prices on Valencia raisins for a new lot just to hand.

A London letter to J. L. Watt & Scott, dated July 8, says: "New Kintucks are high. The first cargo was placed on the market on the 4th inst., and up till now prices paid are good. Common teas will be scarce and dear, 6 1-2d. being now paid here for teas inferior to those selling at 5 3-4d. last July."

T. Kinnear & Co. have just received a shipment of "Scripture" brand, this season's pack. The stock is first'class.

The new hand cured cod offered by Lucas, Steele & Bristol is meeting ready sale. Another lot is now on the way.

Sloan & Crowther are in receipt of a shipment of canned sausage, "Cambridge" brand.

The Toronto Salt Works reports the following sales: Four carloads of barrel salt, 4 carloads coarse sack salt, 2 carloads dairy. They are offering Liverpool rock at $10 per ton.

Gallon canned apples suffer more or less from the general depression in the canned fruit trade. In any event first-class Maine pack was offered at $2.20 here, while some brands not as popular with discriminating buyers went at about 10c. less.—N.Y. Bulletin.

Advices received by J. L. Watt & Scott from Dem. Schisas, of Patras, under date of July 4, says: "Market quiet, but very little really good serviceable fruit is now left here, and the condition is such that I would recommend to Canadian buyers that they had better await next crop. The new crop, in spite of the appearance of mildew in nearly every district, promises well in quality and quantity, though we have many risks to run until the complete housing, and a reliable estimate of the yield can be well formed."

The position of canned tomatoes is a nice problem, but the indications are that holders of a few hundred cases have the advantage. In any event small orders come along with enough frequency to make it clear that jobbers have no more stock on hand than they can find outlet for at a good margin of profit. By way of illustration, 2 1-2-lb. California stock sold at $1.27 1-2, against $1.22 1-2 paid a few days ago, and full standard Eastern pack at less than $1.40 do not appear in sight.—N.Y. Journal of Commerce.

Initial prices from Denia indicate that Valencia layers can be sold delivered in New York for first half August steamer shipment on a parity with 7c. per lb. duty paid; that by the second direct steamer, which would apparently sail prior to August 25, this season, they can be laid down at nearly 1c. per lb. less than this; so that compared with last season late September shipment is likely to be as low as 5c. The cost of fine off-stalk would be from 3-4 to 1c. per lb. below the price of layers, the fruit being shipped in boxes of 28 lbs. each. The Denia crop is said to be from 30 days to six weeks in advance of that of last season.—N.Y. Journal of Commerce.

Recent London market reports on tea state that this season's new make Congous are very difficult to move, and prices are low, and offer capital value against other kinds of tea in half-chests. There is really no demand for China tea, and sales are of the most retail character; buyers are waiting for the new season's, but the trade are taking Ceylons freely. A drought is reported in India, and this, together with the forced enhanced value of the rupee, it is thought, favor the demand for both China and Ceylon tea, as the latter will be able to lay it down at a lower cost.—N.Y. Journal of Commerce.

Attention is directed to the delicious pickles and sauce advertised by W. H. Gillard & Co., of Hamilton. These goods are English made and unsurpassed by any similar goods now on the market. W. H. Gillard & Co. are sole agents for Western Ontario, and the trade would do well to try them.

Moffatt & Heath's Tea Circular says: During the past month the general market has been very quiet, and the amount of business passing, small, even for this season of the year. The Moyune, with the first cargo of tea from Hankow docked early on the morning of the 4th, and up to the date of this some 4,500 packages have changed hands at prices ranging from 5 3-4d. to 1s. 11d., the trade shows less interest in the teas than usual, and, with the exception of Ningchows, we consider it an inferior crop to that of last season. The imports of the month for London are 9,055,000 lbs., as against 8,410,000 lbs. last year. The deliveries for London are 18,618,000 lbs., against 17,523,000 lbs. last year. The stock in London on June 30th was 54,842,000 lbs., against 59,170,000 lbs. last year.

Farmers as a rule are very careless as to the quality of salt used for butter making, and are not very often enlightened by the grocers. The analysis of Diamond Crystal Salt show it to contain 99.698 per cent. of pure salt. If this were used instead of common goods butter results would show to better advantage.

Wright & Copp have just issued a neat little circular setting forth the quality of McLaren's Imperial Cheese, Snider's Home-Made Catsup and Pettijohn's California Breakfast Food, for which they are agents. They announce that they have decided to substitute a brown stone jar for the glass jar that now holds McLaren's Imperial Cheese, it having been found that the latter attracts the heat.

A splendid illustration of the stride made in the consumption of Indian and Ceylon teas will be found in W. H. Gillard & Co.'s advertisement on another page. The chart will no doubt prove interesting to thoughtful merchants, and W. H. Gillard & Co. are to be congratulated on the novel method used of conveying the figures up to date. The firm have been paying special attention to this branch of the trade, and their suggestion to merchants to write for samples, if acted upon, will prove mutually advantageous. Their standard lines have made many friends wherever introduced, and it has proved a most satisfactory and money-making investment to the many hundreds of merchants now using them.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, July 20, 1893.

GROCERIES.

The grocery market as a whole has been a quiet one, but there has been a fair movement in sugar, and this has gone to preserve the week from absolute dullness. Values all round continue steady, and in some lines, for instance, canned salmon, there are indications that prices may go higher, as the news from the coast is bullish in its tenor. Tea keeps very quiet. Coffee is firm at full former prices, and spices are generally steady under a fair volume of business. Syrups and molasses are quiet, and in dried fruit there is little business to note for the reason that practically all the fruit in first hands has been cleaned up here, which tends to quietness in a wholesale way. Payments rule much the same, but the extreme tightness of money is causing some uneasiness, although it has not had any appreciable effect in regular business circles as yet.

SUGAR.

The sugar market generally speaking is quiet. London cables were rather easier at the close of last week, but it has had no effect on the spot market. As to the actual movement on spot there has been a somewhat improved enquiry, granulated leaving the refineries in good round quantities at 5 1-2c. and yellows 4 1-2 to 5 1-4c. as to grade.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There is little or nothing doing in syrups and molasses also is quiet at unchanged prices. For the former 2 to 2 1-2c. has represented the basis for business in Canadian, and 33 to 34c. the regular combine price for the latter, but outside lots are still offering here for less money.

TEA.

A little more activity has been to note in the tea trade, medium grade Japans worth about 18c. being in very fair demand. In blacks and greens the volume of business is limited. We quote as follows: Common Japans, 11 to 13c.; medium, 15 to 17c.; fine, 18 to 21c., and finest, 24 to 30c.

COFFEE AND SPICES.

The coffee market continues firm, and business has transpired during the week at steady prices. Round lots of Maracaibo sold at 21 to 21 1-2c., which shows this plainly. We quote: Jamaica, 19 to 20c.; Maracaibo, 21 to 22c.; Rio, 19 to 21c.; Java, 24 to 28c., and Mocha, 25 to 28c., these prices being for straight lots only, small quantities calling for an advance.

Spices remain steady and unchanged. We quote common Jamaica ginger 16 to 18c.; finer grades, 20 to 23c.; black pepper, 8 to 9c.; pimento, 6 1-2c., and nutmegs, 50 to 52 1-2c. and $1.

RICE.

The local market continues steady. We quote: Ordinary, $3.85 to $4; Japans, $4 to $4.50; Patnas and Carolinas, $4.50 to $6.50.

DRIED FRUIT.

There has been a steady jobbing demand for dried raisins sufficient to clear out practically all the stock remaining here in first hands. Off-stalk Valencias have moved at 3 to 3 1-2c. for fair to good sound fruit. Advices from Denia to brokers here state that the prospects for new crop are encouraging.

In currants business has been quiet. The tenor of advices tend to strength with regard to new crop, but there is no change here, and we quote 5 to 6c., as to quality and quantity.

GREEN FRUIT.

There has been a good business in lemons and oranges at steady prices. We quote the former $3 to $4, and the latter $2.50 to $5 per package.

Raspberries are in liberal receipt, but there has been a good American as well as local demand. We quote 70c. to $1. Other fruits are precisely the same, bananas, etc., showing no special change.

BEANS.

The market rules quiet, and we quote hand picked, $1.40 to $1.45; ordinary, $1.25 to $1.30, and inferior, 95c. to $1.10.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market is steady but dull. We quote: Canadian short cut, per barrel, $21 to $22; mess pork, Western, new, per bbl., $22.50 to $23; hams, city cured, per lb., 12 to 13 1-4c.; lard, Canadian, in pails, 11 to 12c.; bacon, per lb., 11 1-2 to 12 1-4.; lard, common refined, per lb., 9 1-2 to 10c.

EGGS.

The egg market holds steady at 11 to 11 1-2c. The demand is fairly good, being about equal to the supply. Dealers say that prices are too high to ship, and as there is no prospect of any decline the exports from Montreal will likely be small.

BUTTER.

Butter this week does not furnish anything special. The tone is steady, with buyers and sellers somewhat apart. Creamery, 20 1-2 to 21c.; townships, 18 to 18 1-2c.; Western dairy, 15 1-2 to 16c.

CHEESE.

The cheese market is steady, the secret purchasing in the country showing plainly that some cheese is wanted here for this week's steamers, as we intimated last week. Finest Ontario colored, 9 1-8 to 9 1-4c.; finest Ontario white, 9 to 9 1-8c.; finest Townships, 8 7-8 to 9c.; finest French colored, 8 7-8 to 9c.; finest French white, 8 3-4 to 8 7-8c.; under grades, 8 1-2 to 8 5-8c.; cable, white, 45s. 6d.; cable, colored, 46s. 6d.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

American buyers have taken something like $7,000 to $10,000 worth of raspberries off this market since last Wednesday.

New Japans are being offered here at 16 1-2 to 23c. as to grade, but sell very slowly.

Brazil advices on coffee to brokers here are very bullish, and are having their effect on holders of coffee on this market.

Outsiders are still quoting low prices for Barbadoes molasses, but the combine stoutly stick to their basis of 33 to 34c.

The anticipation is that all the salmon on the coast would be wanted this year, no matter if the run is going to be large or not, and from information which we publish elsewhere it does not look as if it was.

Burman advices are very strong on rice, and the acute stage which matters in Siam have reached is likely to accentuate the feeling of firmness among growers in that country.

Some round orders of Menier's chocolate have been sent west during the week.

Messrs. Caverhill, Hughes & Co. have received their first consignment of Lipton's celebrated London teas. THE GRO-

Mr. David Brown, the Canadian manager of Tetley's teas, is at present down East, and reports business in packet teas in the Maritime Provinces very good.

Mr. Rose, of Rose & Laflamme, who is at present in England, is expected back at the end of the month. The firm will handle a complete line of grocery specialties.

Messrs. L. Chaput, Fils, & Co. report some good orders for molasses from the Three Rivers district at the regular full prices.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Wm. Ross, Port Perry left for the World's Fair on Saturday.

J. F. Eby, of Eby, Blain & Co., is holidaying around Penetang, Midland, etc.

Robert Hopper, of Claremont, has returned from the World's Fair. He reports having had a good time.

R. T. Macdonald, of Eby, Blain & Co.'s, is spending his vacation at Windermere, Lake Rosseau.

W. J. Reid, crockery and glassware, London, is in England purchasing supplies for his house.

C. F. Fairbairn, of the Imperial Extract Co., whose leg was fractured during the Ontario Jockey Club's race meeting in May, is doing nicely.

Elder Boddy, of J. S. Boddy & Bros., of Bradford, is taking his holidays on Lake Simcoe, making his headquarters at Big Bay Point. He has the use of his brother-in-law's (J. McL. Stevens) steam yacht.

W. Dallas, New York, representing Mourylan, Heimann & Co., is in the city showing Japan teas. He talks steady on the market in the States and Canada, and says the situation is better than for years. There are very few old low grades in New York, and in Canada he finds they are pretty well cleaned up between Quebec and Toronto, both cities included. The demand has been quieter than usual, or there would have been a thoroughly bare market when new teas came. The Canadian trade is more active than it was. He looks for a steady market throughout the year. Some houses say there is a shortage of 25 per cent., but he doubts that it will be as great. The first crop was 3,000,000 lbs. short.

FREE EXCURSION.

The Sterling Soap Co., St. John, N. B., have arranged to give a free excursion to the citizens of Toronto, as an advertisement for their soap, on July 28th to Wilson, N. Y., by steamer Garden City. W. J. Forrestall, the Ontario manager, has the matter in hand and is sparing no pains to make it the best excursion of any kind that has left Toronto his season. Every retailer handling this soap will receive an invitation for himself and family and also for a limited number of customers only, as they do not wish to take more than will comfortably fill the boat. A special orchestra of professional musicians will accompany the excursion.

ADVERTISING SAWS.

Don't think that because you put your money into print you're bound to get it back. Much depends on the print and where it is printed.

"What may words say, and what may words not say." In advertising it's not so much what they say as how they're said.

Everybody's willing to give a prospective advertiser some good advice, but will ever any of them take their own medicine when it comes to spending their own money?

Catching the eye in the show window doesn't always sell the goods. A smart talker is wanted inside to clinch the sale. Apply this to an advertisement.—Business.

SUGAR AFFAIRS IN CUBA.

A statement issued recently by Senor Joaquin Guma, of the well-known crop statistician, shows that to June 30, this year, the exports of sugar from the Island of Cuba amounted to 3,901,752 bags and 13,465 hogsheads, a total of 549,292 tons, against 4,669,647 bags and 31,565 hogsheads, or 668,087 tons for the corresponding period last year. The stock on hand on June 30 amounted to 1,440,900 bags and 657 hogsheads, or 199,865 tons, while on the corresponding date last year there were on hand 1,786,607 bags and 6,172 hogsheads, equal to 251,524 tons. These totals, with the amounts taken for local consumption added and the stock of old sugar on hand January 1 deducted, show the receipts for the first six months of 1892 and 1893 to have been respectively 924,666 and 769,657 tons.

During June of the current year the average prices of sugar as compared with those paid during the corresponding month 1892 were as follows:

	1893.	1892.
Centrifugal, in bags	4.42	3.14 1-20
Molasses sugar, in bags	3 40 13-20	2.23 3-10
Muscovado, in hhds	3.26	2.13 1-2

The Havana Weekly says: The weather keeps propitious, cane is doing well, and the appearance of the fields continues improving. Despite the overwhelming taxes imposed on sugar in the new budgets, planters and tenants expect to obtain remunerative results next year, and whilst the former improve and increase their means of production, the latter bestow their best attention upon the cane, whose culture has been increased to a considerable extent during the past month. Though it was reported at first that the abandonment of the old fields and the reluctance of growers to place new ones under cultivation would certainly cause the next crop to be a very small one, stimulated by the liberal offers planters made them, tenants changed their minds, and if we are to judge from the extension given to cane culture and the care bestowed upon the fields, it is likely that production next year will exceed the past one.

CAUSE OF THE SHORT WEIGHT.

There is a little story going the rounds, says an exchange, which does not help to raise one's estimate of human nature. A certain baker, in business in a small town, obtained his supply of butter from a farmer in the neighborhood. One day he discovered that the rolls, which were supposed to weigh three pounds each, were not up to the standard, and further examination revealed a steady diminution. At last the baker lodged a formal complaint against the farmer, and the affair was brought before the court. "Have you any scales?" enquired the magistrate. "Yes," was the reply. "And have you any weights?" continued the judge. An answer this time in the negative was given. "But how didyou manage to weigh your butter?" asked the magistrate. Then the farmer related that ever since the baker had taken his butter he had returned the compliment by buying his bread. The baker supplied him with three-pound loaves, and he used them as weights for his butter. "It is his fault, not mine, if the weight is not correct," added the farmer, who was speedily acquitted and left the court in triumph with an escort of friends.

DRY GOODS.

MONTREAL MARKET.

The chief topic of conversation in dry goods circles during the past week has been the subject of dating a long way ahead and the cutting of prices. Conservative merchants all agree that every means should be adopted to do away with both these ruinous practices, and they announce that they are prepared to back up to the full extent of their ability any steps decided upon with that end in view.

Regarding business during the past week orders from travellers have been quite satisfactory, and already several houses have been compelled to forward repeat orders for several lines of staple fall goods. This is considered a very encouraging sign, and those who have been affected this way feel correspondingly happy. The lines running in most demand have been cashmeres, skirtings, jaquards, and ladies' cloakings.

Payments have ruled fair, and in several cases improvement is reported in this connection. It is the fervent wish of everyone that this change for the better will not be a flash in the pan, but be of sufficient duration o make itself felt in an appreciable way.

The wholesale millinery men have been conferring with the railway people regarding reduced rates to the fall millinery openings. The latter have announced their decision to allow reduced fares on the 25th, 26th and 27th August, good to return until the 11th September. These fares will apply only to points in the territory west of Kingston and Sharbot Lake and do not apply to the district east. For this reason they are not satisfactory at all to many of the houses. In fact some of them hold that the concession means practically nothing, for their customers up there will not come into town, but will do their business through the travellers. Besides, the large bulk of the patrons of two or three of the houses lie east of Kingston, and it is these that they want toconvenience, but the railways don't seem disposed to do so. The exact reduction has not been made public yet.

Coverhill & Kissock are giving their warehouse an extensive and complete overhauling. A convenience that will be decidedly welcome is an electric passenger elevator which is now in running order.

Brophy, Cains & Co. are receiving skirtings in silk stripes and moire effects, also meltons in single and double widths.

Gault Bros. have been receiving recently some extensive repeat orders of cashmeres in popular shades. Bright colors seem to be taking very well.

Jas. Johnston & Co. are receiving some handsome lines of velveteens. They report good orders from their travellers for meltons, etc

Some handsome Moreens in bright and natural colors were received by Greenshields, Son & Co. They are in good demand for skirtings. The same firm were turning some fine lines of laces into stock also.

TORONTO MARKET.

Sorting trade has dwindled down to very small proportions. The exodus from the city to the pleasure resorts has made the buying by city retailers very meagre and half-hearted. All the trade that is being done on present account is being done at a loss, but clearances must be made.

Fall shipments are going on and large quantities of goods are being moved every day. Reports from travellers show that trade promises to be fully up to the average, although buyers are very cautious and no remarkable sales are being made. The tone of the trade is very fair considering everything, and complaints are conspicuous by their absence.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. opened this week a quantity of manufacturers' sample Cashmere hose and half-hose, bought at job prices.

John Macdonald & Co. are cleaning out the balance of their cotton neckwear, also balances of summer underwear and topshirts.

For the sorting trade Wyld, Grasett & Darling have a line of ribbed cotton vests, laced front, short sleeve. They are scarce goods.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. show a novelty in 36-inch printed flannelette skirting of German manufacture. This line is finding ready sale and is likely to be popular.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence are showing special value in estamine and diagonal serges suitable for travel and boating wear. Blacks are in stronger demand than usual.

W. R. Brock & Co. are reducing the prices of the balance of their stock of ladies' blouses. Buyers in need of this class of goods can secure samples and quotations on application.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence report that their fall stock in the gloves, hosiery and underwear department will be complete next week. They will thus be fully prepared for all visiting buyers.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. report unprecedented success in their dry goods department, orders for the coming season being the largest and most satisfactory they have ever booked.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling show new styles in ladies' waterproof cloaks. In Marguerite and Olympia shapes they show a large number of new patterns. They also show special values in plain and ribbed cashmere hosiery for the fall trade.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence have a balance of cotton hosiery and fabric gloves they are anxious to clear out at reduced prices. They report their summer stock of gloves, hosiery and underwear lower than it has ever been in the history of the house. This indicates that the sorting trade has been exceedingly favorable for this house. Next spring their entire stock must necessarily be new and their customers will then be sure of the latest in these lines.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling are showing this season an especially desirable range of men's waterproof coats, with 26-inch capes, sewn seams, fly fronts, worked buttonholes and large pockets. They show them in plain black and fancy tweed patterns.

W. R. Brock & Co.'s stock of Madras and colored muslins in white, cream, lemon, terra cotta, azuline and coquelicot effects is very complete and attractive. Many new lines have just been received.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling are showing some special lines in umbrellas. These are made in 25 and 27 inch, each size in low price as well as in finer qualities. The handles are especially unique and the goods are in every way desirable.

John Macdonald & Co. have opened a new shipment of pongees in 25 different shades. These are 22 inch goods and will be sold at a job price. A line of colored silk Bengalines in all the new shades is also to hand. Over 100 cases of black and colored henriettas have just been passed into stock.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. a few days ago placed in their travellers hands a collection of samples of Japanese silk handkerchiefs bought at almost the lowest point the market touched. Their embroidered goods from 85 cents to $2.25 per dozen are excellent value.

W. R. Brock & Co. for fall, have several plain lines in their hosiery, glove and fancy goods department. Amongst them are the "Bouncer" mitt, the "Bulger" glove, the "Startler" vest, N. N. and R. W. P. hose in ladies' sizes, Arctic and R. G. L. heavy wool socks, any of which can be retailed at the popular price of 25 cents with handsome profits.

John Macdonald & Co. have now their complete fall stock of wools, consisting of 2, 3 and 4 ply Canadian yarns, Canadian fingerings in black and colors, Scotch fingerings in black and Baldwin's Beehive in 3 and 4 ply in black, white and colors, 2, 4 and 8 fold Berlins, German and domestic Andalusian wools, 'Popular 'Queen City,' and 'Standard' Saxony wools. Art embroidery silks are shown in a full range of manufacturer's shades and qualities. New lines of tassels and pompons are to hand, as are also chenille and silk cords. Beads and Daisy fringes are also shown.

THE WIFE IN BUSINESS.

Although the bachelor merchant perhaps has an advantage in respect of his cheaper living expenses, yet the prospects of success of the married dealer should on the average be more promising, other things being equal, on account of the assistance which the wife can render her husband at critical periods, when accurate judgment is needed to steer a right course, and when two heads should be better than one. As a writer in a woman's journal says: "A man's wife often knows more than he does about a great many things, and, while he need not lower himself in her estimation by admitting her mental superiority, it is well sometimes for him to silently recognize her superior intelligence and profit by it. If he is a wise man, he will not be too ready to come into accord with the opinions of his wife, but will affect a great deal of wisdom of his own, even though he knows that he has none. It never increases a wife's respect for her husband to know that he is her inferior in anything, and it certainly does not increase her respect or affection to have him intimate by word or look that she does not know anything at all. The judgment of the average woman regarding the disbursement of money is often better than that of the average man, particularly when it comes to spending money for domestic purposes. It takes a shrewd tradesman to get over the average sensible woman, while a tradesman finds it easy to work off stale goods on the average man: and the most conceited man might as well acknowledge frankly that his wife can attend to most of the affairs of her own household better than he can attend to them for her. Women very often have the most acute perception regarding business affairs. If men would only "talk business" with their wives, instead of taking it for granted that women "don't understand anything about business," there would probably be fewer failures. Many a successful business man owes his success to the keenness of judgment of a partner whose name does not appear in the firm or over the shop window, and who is not supposed to have any connection with the business, and that partner is his wife, in whom he is wise enough to confide."

We believe that many of our married readers could testify from their own experience to the truth of most of the statements in the foregoing clipping. To those who are incredulous regarding the help that their wives can render them in business, we say, consult them when in doubt, and learn from practical experience that woman's intuition is often more accurate than the slower and more laborious reasoning of the man.

Since writing the above, we have received the London Grocers' Chronicle, in which we find the following sentences on the above subject: "We remember once hearing a grocer say that the grocer's wife was a most important partner in the business. Her judgment is not always to be despised in buying, whilst it has been well said that her taste might more often be consulted in the matter of window dressing and shop decoration. Not infrequently she takes a very considerable part in the bookkeeping, whilst, of course, there is no person more interested in the progress of the business." Surely after all this testimony no one will doubt the value to the business man of a prudent wife's counsels upon matters of business, or hazard the opinion that the chances of the average married merchant's success are not better than those of the average bachelor dealer!—Merchants' Review.

SHRINKAGE OF STORED GRAIN.

In deciding whether to sell harvested grain or to store for higher prices the American Agriculturist thinks that the question of shrinkage from drying and from attacks of vermin is of important consideration. It appears that C. E. Thorne and J. F. Hickman at the Ohio station (B. 16, IV. 1.) selected 100 pounds of ear corn at the husking time from each of 38 varieties. The 100 pounds of maize were weighed out when husked and placed in a loose box in a mouse-proof room, remaining there to dry until in February, when it was again weighed. The average loss in weight of all 38 varieties was nearly one-tenth or nine and one-third per cent. The medium sized yellow dent varieties lost the least, or five and two-thirds per cent. The large yellow dent came next, with a loss of just over 10 per cent. Then followed the large white dent with a loss of over 10 3-4 per cent. The mixed dent lost nearly 12 per cent., and the medium sized white dent lost most, or over 12 per cent. The individual loss varied from 2 per cent. in the yellow King of the Earlies to 22 1-2 per cent. in the Mammoth White Superior. J. F. Hickman selected samples of each of 20 varieties of wheat (B. 42) and in August placed them in small boxes, the two sides and ends of which were made of half-inch pine, thoroughly seasoned, the bottom of window screen wire and the top of glass. The full boxes were numbered, weighed, and buried for a year in a bin of wheat, after which they were left in one corner of the bin without any covering until the end of the third year, when it was found that six, or nearly one-third of the 20 boxes were badly injured by insects. The other 14 boxes were weighed in August, and showed a loss in weight from three years' storage of nearly one fortieth, or two and one-third per cent. The loss varied from nothing in the Hungarian wheat to nearly 5 per cent. in the Bearded King. A similar test through the six months, from January to July, showed a gain in weight, caused by weather conditions.

BAD COLLECTIONS A BLESSING.

Being on very confidential and intimate terms with one of my old customers, writes A. J. in a contemporary, in corresponding with him I have sometimes mentioned matters in my business that either pleased or annoyed me, although not of special interest to him. Recently in writing him I wound up by saying: "Nothing new at present, but extremely worried over collections, which are very bad." In a day or two I received a letter from him, which, I think, might give some other fellow a hint and a help as it did me. I quote from his letter as follows:

I regret that you find collections slow, but right here is a chance for you to firmly establish some of the best customs you will ever have. By a kind, personal talk with many of these fellows, by giving them your confidence and telling them your needs you will get their confidence in return and some new ideas as well. Here is your opportunity; they don't know anything about business compared with what you know, and by careful attention you can learn their weak points, which will enable you to instill some of the simplest yet most important business principles and precepts into them. These simple foundations of business success are all that many of them lack, for they are industrious and even enterprising, but bad pay for the lack of something which they would gladly acquire if it could be secured without humbling their pride. With your fund of knowledge and wide experience nobody could better than you apply the remedy, but do it in such a way that he will remember you when your hints bear fruit, of which, it is needless to say, your share will not be withheld. Enquiry into the inner affairs of a man's business requires tact. If done conscientiously and a fearless recommendation is given of the needed reform, it will gain you a friend, as well as secure firmly a customer, who will pay better as the plans suggested progress. The reason it is so hard to sell goods to some men who are dealing with another house is more frequently than you have any idea due to just such a past history. To keep your temper and be generous and just under the exasperating influences of tight money and bad collections with men whose business methods are stupidly and radically wrong is difficult, I know. If, however, you are equal to the strain you will be successful in time in making slow payers prompt payers, and the outlay of vitality and mental effort will bring big dividends. It takes a man of wide experience, great ability, generosity and gentle firmness to collect from slow payers and reform them, but it pays to study and fill these requirements. Such a condition in the majority of cases is due to selling your customer more than he can dispose of, and then he is entitled to great consideration from the seller.

—Easy, now! I'm dead sure you're goin' t' fall, an' you know it yourself. Easy, now; e-a-s-y!—

—Well, you did ease your ole corporation down one step, didn't you? But you jest mark my words, you mizzerble 'nebriate, you're bound t' tumble, an you might 's well get good an' ready. Slow, now; slo's mud.—

—Look out, there, you tank! look out! Oh, well, it don't make any difference. P'raps you'd better hurry up an' git it over with. John Philloo 's booked for hittin' th' sidewalk, an' I hope he will.—

—That's jest what I said, you paresis-scarred ostrich! that's jest what I said; an' now th' nex' time a sensible man talks t' yer you sit down an' listen t' him an' don't try t' monkey with a flight of steps. Now go home, you sway-back!"

There is a good deal of talk in England hese days about adulterated Danish butter.. The Danes are ranked among the best but-er makers in the world and much of the in-reased attention which Australian and New Zealand butter has lately received in the English market has been due to their adopt-ng to some extent the Danish creamery ystem. Lately however a good deal of com-laint has been heard in England regarding he Danish article. It is charged that some f it is being sent into Great Britain fraudu-ently adulterated with water, but marked, t the same time: "Guaranteed pure but-er." The maximum percentage of water llowed by the authorities is 15. Some of the oards of trade at the consuming centres ave from time to time taken legal proceed-ngs and had the butter confiscated and the mporters fined. Partly no doubt as a result f this the imports of Danish butter into reat Britain last year exhibited a slight de-me.

The Danish Government seems to have a alous regard for the country's reputation s a butter maker. Margarine factories find difficult to establish themselves there, ow-g to rigid restrictions. Last year two large ctories pulled up pegs and settled in Eng-nd, where they found the conditions more ngenial. Now, in view of the new danger that threatens the Danish butter industry, the government of that country has asked the British Government to co-operate in a convention directed against the adulterated butter trade. Over this proposal has arisen some discussion both in and out of Parliament. The British Board of Agriculture, although it has not, as far as we know, finally given its answer, does not seem to favor the proposal. The reason is that "a free country could not interfere with the importation of adulterated food stuff provided it was healthy and pleasant." This plea is accounted weak by those who favor the proposal, and is scarcely in accord with the policy that has been pursued of late of prosecuting farmers whose butter was found to contain more than the maximum 15 per cent. of water. "It was unfair to the British farmer and to the honest foreign producer that they should be handicapped in the present competition by the profit arising out of fraudulent adulteration of foreign butter," remarked a member of the House of Lords, who added: "It was also unjust to the retailers that they might be convicted of innocently selling such adulterated butter as genuine."

This Danish butter matter again revives an important question. Unquestionably there are adulterations that do not injure. And these it is the duty of governments to, as a rule, regulate, not prohibit. Water is not injurious to butter. In fact butter free of water does not exist. But the wrong is done when an excessive amount is allowed to remain with fraudulent intent. Although the British Society of Analysts have fixed the permissible quantity of water in butter at 15 per cent., there being no statutory law governing the matter, all authorities are not unanimous on that figure. But in the matter of the Danish adulterations there does not appear to be any question as to intent. To prosecute under such conditions is only right and proper; and while Denmark's honesty of purpose in proposing a conference is to be commended, the question as to whether England shall or shall not agree to it is a delicate one to decide.

A contemporary remarks that "the best plan is to advertise for a reputation and not for a "store scouring." This is true enough, but it is nevertheless just as necessary to sometimes advertise "a store scouring," or clearing sale as it is commonly called, as for a reputation. The latter requires continual and systematic advertising; the former is special. No matter how careful a buyer a merchant may be, he will at the end of different seasons find himself with certain goods in stock which, either because of the fickleness of fashion or the unusual character of the season, are undesirable. Even if the goods are staples and might be sold if carried over to the next season, there are a good many whose financial strength would scarcely be equal to the task. The proper course for merchants who find themselves in such a position is obvious. In justice both to themselves and their creditors it is their duty to try and dispose of the goods in question. And we have yet to hear of a better way than through the medium of clearing sales. If a better way can be found, why by all means adopt it. But in lieu of something better, start clearing sales when you want to get rid of superfluous stocks. But when you start one, be honest about it. Do not say you have fifty thousand dollars' worth to be sold when you have not perhaps half that amount, or that you are selling for fifty cents something that ordinarily sells for one dollar. In a word, do not deceive people. There are always a number of people on the lookout for bargains. Advertise right, make your display of goods neat and attractive and you will catch customers. Be live and pushing, but be honest.

A clean and attractive wagon and a clean and attractive store should go together. Too often they do not. Even some grocers who are financially able to turn out a first-class rig do not. Appearances go a long way with some people. From appearances they form their impressions, and if the one is not inviting the other is not good. Make, then, the best appearance you can in the matter of the delivery wagon as well as in your store or yourself and clerks. Besides those who from a point of cleanliness like to see an attractive wagon—are those who are actuated by pride. A nicely appointed wagon drawn by a prancing horse and being driven up to their door by a smart looking young man makes them swell out with almost as much pride as if the turn out was their own. They have perhaps been trying to give their neighbors the impression that they are "somebody," and to have a first-class grocery waggon driven up to their door will, of course, assist in the premises. They are dealing with a first-class grocer and so of course must be "somebody." No grocer is warranted in going beyond his means in the matter of a delivery waggon any more than in any other particular. All that he is justified in doing is to go just as far as the size of his capital will permit, and no further.

Grocers cannot too frequently impress upon their customers the observance of common-sense rules regarding the use of canned goods. Time and again have the public been warned against leaving the vegetables, fish or meats, or whatever it may be, in the can after it has been opened, but again and again has the warning gone unheeded. And if the victims who sometimes experience illness because of their own or somebody's carelessness were the only ones to suffer it would probably not be regreted as long as the consequences were not serious. It would teach them a lesson. But the trouble is that the canned goods trade is injured wherever the illness is announced, and that, it can be guaranteed, will be in a good many places. An English exchange to hand chronicles the illness of a young man through eating canned salmon that had been left for some time exposed in an open tin. There is no more danger from eating canned goods than any other food product if certain simple rules are complied with, but if these are disobeyed penalties are just as likely to follow as in the case of the breaking of any other law. Canned goods are more and more becoming a staple article of food notwithstanding the many obstacles, in the way of prejudices, that they have had to surmount, but this is all the more reason why consumers should have pointed out to them where the safety marks ends and the danger point begins.

Business matters that require prompt attention are many. Among them none probably more so than the answering of letters; and yet there are merchants who are sadly remiss in this particular. Negligence in the answering of letters suggests carelessness and lack of attention to business, and when this idea obtains look out for your credit. Just as sure as two and two make four will it decay, and when your credit is gone, where are you? Like a vessel drifting to destruction, the keel of your business is already grating on the rocks of bankruptcy, for without credit you cannot do business. Protect it, therefore, as you would your good name. Procrastination is probably the cause, more than any other, of letters going unanswered. Some wholesalers tell us they cannot get answers from some customers until, after repeated writing, they threaten legal proceedings. This is not right. It is not business. No matter what a man's financial condition may be he should not omit to answer promptly the letters of every creditor. If he is not in a position to meet his obligation let him say so. Nothing is lost by being honest and outspoken. Men admire straightforwardness in their fellows. But he who tries to hide behind the hedge of silence gains nothing by it. On the contrary he loses, for his very silence creates suspicion, and where there is suspicion a calm and unprejudiced view of the conditions is often prevented. If you have not a set time for answering your letters appoint one and religiously stick to it. There is nothing like system in letter writing as well as in everything else.

The grain blockage at Kingston does not show much sign of improvement and some of the vessel owners have already began suits for damages against consignors. Interference with the movement of merchandise is to be deplored at any time, but now, when trade needs all the encouragement possible, it is still more regrettable.

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

"O, say," remarked Robert Stewart of Eby, Blain & Co.'s to me Saturday as he threw his leg over a corner of W. H. Seyler's desk, "I was at Jie D. Stewart's place one day this week. Who's Jie D.? Don't you know? Why he was at one time Eby-Blain's representative in the northwestern part of the province. Now he sits, like the Psalmist of old, under his own vine and fig tree—he has them both—at Russelldale, near Mitchell, where he is justice of the peace and lord of all he surveys."

"And yes," interrupted the poetical Mr. Seyler, "he has every opportunity to ruminate and mount his rural pegasis and soar to the heights of Olympus. Jie D. is a poet you know."

"He has got just a regular Garden of Eden," enthusiastically continued Mr. Stewart, "and his door is always open to the wayside travellers. He has got the most delightful fifteen acres I ever set eyes upon. There are roses galore—and such roses. Why, he is celebrated for them the country round. When I went into Mitchell with one in my coat, I was hailed by the remark, 'O, you've been out to Jie D's.' He makes a specialty of Jersey cattle, and makes the finest butter in the country. And, by-the-bye, he raises dogs on the side. Then he's noted as an horticulturist, and even in New York State he is quoted as an authority."

"Yes, and he's got some of the finest Scotch whisky in the country," chimed in Mr. Seyler.

"O, but he's got better than that, Seyler," rejoined Mr. Stewart, as, with a I-know-whereof-I-am-speaking look, he tapped that gentleman on the shoulder, "he's got some sparkling wine, and it's his own make, too. The people up that way think a lot of Jie D., I can tell you. Words fail to adequately describe the man's hospitality. If a traveler goes in there and expects to get out in ten minutes, he never made a greater mistake in his life."

"Well, we travelers may be a nuisance sometimes, but I think we have our rights as well as other people," said a city traveler the other day.

"What's the matter now?" I queried.

"O, I'm mad. Well, I tell you. Several of us travelers had been given to understand by—perhaps I hadn't better mention names. Well, by a west end grocer who has been pretty successful, that if we would call at a certain time he would let us know his decision regarding the samples of tea that had been left with him. We called at the appointed time. He was there. Without saying anything, he went into his bookkeeper. He remained there just one hour. When he came out, Blank, one of the travelers, asked him if he had tested the tea. 'No,' he replied. 'I'm not going to test them to-day.' We were all mad as hatters. Blank was fuming. He used language that the Speaker of the House of Commons would have ruled out of order, but we thought it quite in order, and as he dressed that grocer down the air became strongly impregnated with sulphur and we had to get out. But say, joking aside, don't you think that the treatment we received was shabby? Even if he found that he couldn't keep his agreement with us, shouldn't he, in common decency, have told us so, and not kept us waiting an hour and then letting us find out for ourselves?"

W. L. Hunter, who represents J. W. Lang & Co. in the Midland counties, told me Saturday that the spring wheat in that part of the province is looking first-class. "The straw," he explained, "is short but the head is heavy. The hay crop is enormous and dealers are going through the country buying it up for export. They are paying half the money down and the balance when delivery is made. The merchants in that part of the country are in excellent spirits.

BYSTANDER.

RETAILERS AND CREDIT.

Retail dealers are often perplexed as to ow to deal with slow-paying customers says onmonger. The dealers need the money r their goods, and at the same time they ant to hold all the custom possible, and ey fear to offend patrons by too sharp and ersistent dunning. The ideal condition of ade would be, that the merchant should ceive the pay at the same time the sale is ade. Some merchants are able to carry n business on a cash basis, but to the ma- rity this seems an impossibility. Whether is assumption is strictly correct or not we o not here undertake to say. Accepting e condition of trade as it actually is, it is ertainly true that to many merchants the everest trial they meet in business is to col- ct the pay for goods sold. This is one of e crucial tests of a successful merchant. hat a dealer, to be successful, must have a ractical knowledge of the goods he handles; hat he must know the wants of his patrons nd be able to supply them satisfactorily; ut he must keep posted on the markets nd be prepared to buy closely; that he ust buy discriminatingly and wisely; that e must keep the public informed of what he as to offer and so display his goods and mploy such salesmen, and conduct the de- ails of his business so as to attract custom- rs, these are all points not to be overlooked. But suppose all these matters to have been ttended to in a most scrupulous manner, nd that he has disposed of a large mount of goods at fair prices, does his make him a successful merchant? Not ecessarily. The question remains to be nswered whether he has received pay for he goods. It is no trick at all to do busi- ess on the benevolent plan of trusting any- body and everybody and giving them all the ime they want in which to pay for the goods. That is, it would be no trick to keep this up or a time, but eventually the merchant will ind himself unable to purchase goods to eep his store running, unless he can com- mand the resources of a national treasury, r enter upon ways which do not stop short f Canada or the State penitentiary. It equires tact to keep collections up closely nd hold trade steadily. This train of hought was suggested by a letter The Iron- monger recently received asking advice upon his matter of collections. The opinion of business men who have had years of experi- ence in such matters and who are successful n meeting such cases, would be more to the point, and we would be glad to have such contribute their views. It is, of course, use- less to give advice to apply in individual cases. There are too many unknown con- ditions to admit of this, but general princi- ples may be stated which may be of some help. It would be very easy, in trying to answer our correspondent's inquiry, to say, sell only for cash; or in individual instances to advise instant suing. This summary manner of dis- posing of the inquiry would not be at all satisfactory. Coming at it in a different way we may say to begin with, that a retail merchant ought not to grant sixty days credit. Bills should be payable on the first day of every month, accounts running be- yond that time would be past due. The date when an account is due should be stated on the bill head or statement. Not every merchant would consider it wise to call only once in fifteen days for an overdue account. There are, of course, all sorts of ways of dunning a man. One man will dun a debtor frequently and with sufficient sharpness to make the impression unmistakeable that he is in earnest and yet do it with such tact and good nature as to keep his debtor in good feeling and make him say to himself, "Brown's a good fellow, and I must manage to pay that account by Saturday night at the latest." Make your debtors feel the justice of your claim so strongly that they will stir up their debtors to come to time. If a col- lector does not secure pay for an account when due, he should get the debtor to set a day—as early a one as possible, when he will pay it, and be on hand at the date with- out fail to receive the amount. If the debtor fails to come to time, he should be given to understand that the merchant has gone on with his business arrangements on the basis of faith in the integrity of the debtor's word, and that the least that can now be done is to close the account by note, which the merchant can use temporarily in lieu of cash. Every merchant will be greatly aided in finding the best method of treating individual cases by seeing what tactics his debtors pursue with the dry goods merchant, the grocer, the tailor, the milliner, the butch- er, the doctor, etc. If they are in debt to all these people they can hardly be called "good," and the quicker their career of credit is cut short the better. If they pay others and stand off the hardware dealer, it is not to the latter's credit if he allows the game to be kept up. Many merchants lay too much stress on their fear of losing cus- tom by collecting accounts closely. A man who has the right qualities for a successful merchant will keep his accounts closely col- lected up, and will at the same time hold his customers, even customers who would be slow pay if he allowed them to be. By show- ing care, diligence, energy and persistence, even in pursuing collections, a merchant will command the respect of his patrons. "Busi- ness is business," and a man will be honored for conducting his business in accordance with correct business principles. A man who is thus able to command his capital, and has it in shape to turn it over several times a year, is in better position to serve his cus- tomers satisfactorily, and as a rule will so serve them in prices, quality and variety of goods, than one who is cramped by slow- paying patronage. It does not take custom- ers—the customers best worth having—long to find out the truth of this, and it has a cor- respondingly beneficial effect upon business.

STOCKS EVAPORATED APPLES.

The stocks of evaporated apples are light; lighter, it is estimated, than they were last season, and are being held in the stores and in cold storage in about equal proportions. Holders who have their goods in cold storage are inclined to carry them over rather than cut prices, but there are a large contingent in the trade who want to see their floors entirely bare when the new apples begin to arrive in the fall, and in consequence are not so anxious as to "what shall we sell our goods at?" as to the question, "who will buy them?" This naturally induces a weak, unsettled feeling and enables buyers to pick up what goods they may want for immediate use at about their own terms, and such is the state of the market at the present mo- ment. It is likely to remain so until September, when, according to prece- dent, the fall business should start up and trade become again active. We are now between the season of the old and new, and while holders are desirous of disposing of last year's goods, buyers in their turn are waiting for the new crop to arrive and then purchase only what they need for immediate use. Par- ties who usually take one hundred or two hundred boxes at a time now take twenty-five, and it is not long since we saw a well-known buyer who generally buys in large lots negotiating for half a dozen boxes.—N.Y. Journal of Com- merce.

ENGLISH MACKEREL CATCH.

The latest advices from the English coast indicate that fishermen have taken only a very moderate quantity of mack- erel thus far this month. These advices are not as complete or satisfactory as might be desired, since the bulk of the fleet is afloat and the information ob- tained therefrom obtained in a most primitive way. Fishermen, like nearly everyone else who has something at stake, naturally trim for their own in- terest. It would seem, however, that the catch during the past fortnight has been disappointing. There is no gain- saying the fact the receipts have been light during the interval, and that prices have advanced $1 to $2 from the extreme lowest point of the season here and in the New England markets. Some few early-caught Irish and Norway mack- erel have been brought forward, and Nova Scotia has furnished a fairly liberal quantity. But the supply from these sources has been about all distributed, leaving stocks rather light at this point. Regarding prospects for future supplies from Ireland and Norway nothing tan- gible comes to the surface, nor could any reliable news hardly be expected. The indications are, however, that no decided change can reasonably be looked for during the next month or six weeks unless fishermen are phenomenally for- tunate in securing goods.—N.Y. Journal of Commerce.

THE WHOLESALERS' VACATION.

THE GROCER has much pleasure this week in calling the attention of its readers to the engravings presented herewith, and we feel sure our efforts to present an exact and lifelike reproduction of the wholesale dealers of this city and suburbs (Hamilton) will be duly appreciated. We are chary of boasting of our efforts to please the trade, but it is with a considerable degree of inward satisfaction that we present this work of art to our readers. It has been the aim of this journal to bring the two branches of the grocery trade into closer communication with one another, and, while highly gratified with past efforts, we think a presentation of the august wholesale grocers in naturae will be conducive to more than fraternal feeling. During the days when Sirus is the star of stars, when it becomes necessary to carefully muzzle man's faithful friend, the dog, our reporter and artist find it very difficult to fill their respective columns with matter owing to the absence from the city of the heads of the wholesale grocery houses, and to such an extent has this dearth of news grown that our reporter in desperation decided this season to follow these merchant princes to their rural lairs and keep the trade in touch with their doings.

The first sketch, as can readily be seen, is a representation of the arrival of the grocers at a country farm house on the shores of beautiful Lake Simcoe. It is apparent, from the position of Col. John I. Davidson near the gate that he is bent on drilling an awkward squad of the 48th Highlanders, and drumming up the recalcitrant recruits through the broken gate. Quartermaster Adams, with his Glengary cap, is apparently shocked and outraged at the attempt of H. P. Eckardt to induce him to wear a pair of hoopskirts to cover his "Hieland legs." A very accurate likeness is that of James Ince, jr., in full rig, on the stonewall fence, Sunday hat, cane and all, while on the opposite fence may be seen Capt. Bennett, of the Q.O.R., on his dignity, while Napoleon Hay the Silent is pondering over a remark on lumbering made by his neighbors, Willie and Charlie Warren. Mr. Hugh Blain's patriarchal and beneficent countenance can readily be distinguished in the group in the foreground in deep converse with his partner J. F. Eby, while Policeman Wills, of the Board of Trade is arbitrating between Willie Keighley and Tommy Kinnear as to the possession of the "still." The empty flask on the ground beside Wills did not fall out of that officer's pocket, but was intentionally dropped by J. W. Lang's manager, Mr. Massie, who, after emptying it, is accusing Willie Ince of "getting the drop on the gang." The four prominent parties in the foreground are the Hamilton contingent, W. H. Gillard and Balfour, investigating the contents of a bottle of mineral water for which the latter is the Canadian agent, but the look on Gillard's face is very, very suggestive. He doesn't apparently believe that Balfour brought mineral water along. Bristol, with the Uncle Sam "beaver" on his head, is inducing the innocent Mewburn to come over and sample the fir—mineral water. Everybody knows the heathen Chinee in the centre—Lumbers is too well known through his attempt to "bust" the iniquitous Guild. He apparently wants to join the hoopskirt crowd again. John Sloan and his partner are examining their boot to see if there is anything in it, snakes or other vicious country reptile. John has just returned from a two weeks' outing with the Governor-General's Body Guard on the top of Wells' Hill, and it is not unlikely that there is something in the boot. Cavalry men, like London coaches, always carry "something" in the "boot." The astonished countenance of A. M. Smith is easily recognized peering over the wall by the side of the dude. Altogether the grocers are a happy lot and our artist is particularly happy in obtaining such exact likenesses of the guild and its satellites.

Very little comment is necessary on the second cut. It speaks for itself. It is the grocers' happiest moment—they are fishing, most of them for "suckers," but some of them are getting bitten or stung by the feelers of a catfish or letting an eel slip through their fingers. A lamentable accident has befallen James Ince. He is getting a bath, while it may be observed that John I. Davidson and his partner are struggling with Lumbers for a prize fish. Lumbers' pole is busted, and the cunning 48th's colonel is getting the forward end of the line as usual. Oh, everybody is supremely happy, even the birds in the air and in the trees are having a glorious time, and the poor little worms are making a bee line from the "frying-pan into the fire."

We feel sure our readers will appreciate our efforts to interest them during the hot spell in furnishing them with two such lifelike pictures as the above, and when the enormous expense of their production is considered the appreciation will no doubt be much keener. We hope at some future time to present the august Guild in as fully an interesting manner as the foregoing. Our reporter as only one word of apology to make, and that is to those members of the guild whom the artist failed to catch, but an assurance of future attention is hereby given.

PRODUCTION OF BEER IN EUROPE.

Temps publishes some interesting particulars with regard to the quantity of beer which is now brewed in Europe, the figures given representing the average of the last five years. According to these figures the total quantity brewed is 3,105,000,000 gallons, Germany coming first with a production of 1,071,066,105 gallons, of which 644,752,505 gallons are brewed in North Germany, 344,830,305 gallons in Bavaria, 70,953,750 gallons in Wurtemberg, 56,445,840 gallons in Baden, and 17,083,305 gallons in Alsace-Lorraine. Great Britain comes next with a total of 874,192,275 gallons while Austria-Hungary is third with a total of 308,889,675 gallons; while France follows with about 225,000,000 gallons. These are the only countries in which the production reaches 100,000,000 gallons, but relatively to their population, Denmark, with 49,185,000 gallons brewed, and Norway with 38,804,990, have a much larger production than most of the others. But Russia, with its vast area and large population, produces only 65,892,870 gallons, while the quantity of beer produced in other countries is: Switzerland, 26,694,495 gallons; Spain, 23,062,500 gallons; Turkey, 3,150,000 gallons; Italy, 3,099,665; Roumania, 2,225,000; Luxemberg and Servia, 2,092,500 gallons each; and Greece, 150,345 gallons. The Temps adds that the average quantity of beer brewed out of Europe is 830,668,815 in the United States, 36,258,940 in Australia, and 4,966,020 in Japan. From the foregoing it is seen that Germany and Great Britain only brew a larger quantity of beer annually than the United States.

DEPARTMENT STORES.

The notion that the best way for retail grocers to meet the competition of department stores or bazaars that sell groceries is by "carrying the war into Africa," finds some support in recent developments in the wholesale grocery trade in St. Louis. The Grocer of that city quotes a member of a large jobbing house there as follows: "There is no money in the average grocery staples. A man would go to the poorhouse if he got no other profit than 2-16 of a cent a pound on sugar. We are compelled for self-preservation and self-protection to take up goods that bring more remunerative returns than those which have heretofore furnished a living for grocers, so that to-day we sell pretty nearly everything under the sun."

Looking over the price list of this concern, which is published in the above mentioned paper, we find quoted, in addition to articles handled by New York wholesale grocers, a large list, including the following items: House-furnishing goods, tinware, glassware, washing machines, carts, waggons and buggies, cutlery, lanterns, hand lamps, sewing machines, cotton batting, churns, combs, harmonicas, horse shoes, fishing lines, leather and findings, school primers, show cases, etc.—articles which in this city would certainly not be looked for in a wholesale grocer's stock. At the same time there is a tendency here to extend the list of articles sold by grocery jobbers, and in time, perhaps, as multifarious an assortment of merchandise as the above list comprises will be found in the West Side jobbing houses in this city. It may be as the person quoted by our St. Louis contemporary claims, that the narrow margin of profit on groceries has forced the St. Louis jobbers to handle general merchandise, but we believe the desire to expand the business of each wholesaler is at the bottom of the change. Then the retail department stores have set the wholesalers an example which is easy to follow, as the majority of western retailers handle general stocks, which the wholesaler in the grocery line thinks he might as well supply as not. A great many of the country customers of Eastern jobbers handle general merchandise, hence the tendency of the jobbers to constantly increase the number of articles in their stocks. Now, if it pays wholesalers to do this, why should it not pay their city customers to try the same plan? Groceries and dry goods might not combine well in a small store, but there are many things that could be added to a stock of groceries that would help the sale of the latter, afford a good profit and draw trade. Toilet articles, stationery, crockery and glassware, a full line of confectionery, a soda and root beer fountain, and what are known in the wholesale dry goods trade as notions might be more generally added to the grocery stock in cities and towns, when trade is stagnant and competition keen. The big retail dry goods dealers, in going back to first principles and carrying as general a line of merchandise as was carried by the storekeepers of colonial days, have displayed a spirit of enterprise that deserves success, and whether willing or not, the grocers ultimately may be forced in self-defence to follow in their footsteps.—Merchants' Review.

THE GROCER'S TELEPHONE.

"I say," said a grocer to me the other day, "why don't you write something about the telephone?"

"What do you mean?" I asked.

"Why," said he, "to try and put a stop to this abominable nuisance."

"What nuisance?"

"What nuisance! Why, don't you know? I'll tell you," said he. "Now take out your pencil and put it down just as I tell you, for it is all as true as gospel."

"All right, sir," I replied, as I whipped out my pencil.

"Last Saturday," said he, "was a very busy day with me. I had about six or eight customers in the store, all waiting to get served, when suddenly ring-a-ring went the telephone bell. Being busy I thought the person at the other end, whoever it was, could wait a little while, so I went on attending to my customers. I had just got about half through and was putting an order down, when off she went again, and I had to leave my customer and attend to the confounded thing. I put my ear to the tube and you can imagine how I felt when, instead of an order, or anyone on business, this is what I heard: 'Hello there.' 'Hello,' I answered, 'what do you want.' 'Hello,' came over the wire again, 'is that Mr. D?' 'Yes,' I replied. 'Well, will you send your boy over to tell my wife I will meet her down at King and Yonge to-day at 3 o'clock?' 'All right, sir,' I replied. 'Now be sure and don't forget,' he said, 'for if you do it will put me in an awful mess.' 'All right, sir,' I said, and rang off. That man don't spend twenty dollars a year with me, and his wife lives half a mile from here. I had to send my boy on purpose with the message, and besides the nuisance to my customer there were about two loads of groceries on the floor waiting to be delivered. I sent the boy, and then resumed finishing my customer's order. She was impatient and I don't think I got an order for half what she really wanted just through being disturbed."

"In a reasonable time the boy returned and informed me that the lady was out. In a few minutes more the bell rang again just as I was in the middle of adding up a customer's account. The noise threw me out, so I started to go over it again, but the confounded bell kept dinging in my ears so that I had to leave the account and attend to it. I was considerably nettled, and on going to the instrumentI felt very much like eating someone. 'Well, what is the matter now,' I said. 'Is that Mr. D.?' was the question sent back. 'Yes, it is,' I said. 'Well, if that is you, did you send the message to my wife that I told you?' 'Yes, I did.' 'Well, what did she say?' 'She said nothing.' 'Eh? Why, how is that?' 'She was not in.' 'Well, didn't I tell you if she was not in to send the boy to Mrs. Thompson's?' (Mrs. Thompson lives two blocks away.) 'No, you did not.' 'Yes, I did. I told you distinctly that if she was not at home to send him to Mrs. Thompson's.' 'Well,' I replied, 'if you did, I did not hear you.' 'I did. I told you distinctly. You had better send him over at once, will you?' 'Yes,' I answered. 'Now, don't forget.'.'

"How did I feel? Well, I felt like drowning him. I sent the boy after having promised him I would. The boy had just been gone a minute and I had got started to wait on another customer, when in came a girl, walking right up in front of the customer. She said: 'If you please would you mind telephoning down to Eaton's and ask them why they did not send Miss Bell's hat and when it will be up.' 'What is their number,' I asked. 'I don't know,' she said. So I had to take about two or three minutes to find the number. After a little time I found the manager of the right department and he said he would make enquiries. It took about five minutes for him to do that; at last he returned and said the reason it was not sent up was because it was raining the night before and they were afraid of its getting spoiled. I gave the message to the girl and she said, 'Will you please ask him what time it will be up.' I did so, and she went away satisfied, but a customer had to stand waiting until the performance was over, and one who came in, having to catch the train, had to leave without getting served. The boy by this time had got back and told me that the man's wife was not at Mrs. Thompson's. She did not get the message, and he—Well, I don't know what he did.

"But I had hardly got started with another customer before the bell rang again, and I had to leave the customer and attend to it again. 'Hello,' said a voice at the other end. 'Hello,' I said, 'what the— What in cinder do you want?' 'Eh, what's that?' said the voice at the other end. 'I said what do you want.' 'I want to know if that is D., the grocer?' 'Yes it is,' I said, 'if you have any business to transact let me have it. I'm in a hurry.' 'Oh, that's you, is it?' said a voice. 'Yes, it's me.' 'Well, would you be so kind as to let your boy run over to my wife and tell her I have an invite to see the Spanish caravals, and I want her to meet me at the office to-day to make arrangements. There is one or two friends we will have to call on, so please don't forget, as she is just dying to see them.' 'All right,' I said, 'is that all?' 'Yes, I think so. But, say, don't forget.' I rang off, and again apologized to my customer. Of course, she said it was all right, but I could see she was very much displeased.

"I would not mind if they were messages of importance or cases of life and death, or if they were regular customers but the cheek of them to expect me to keep a boy for their use, as well as waste my time answering the 'phone for them and putting my customers to the great inconvenience of having to wait till they got through; but that is not all. Why there is a lot of these people come into the store and ask for the use of your telephone, and they would spend an hour, and sometimes longer, while other people and even myself have to wait until they get through. Why there is that lady who just passed, Miss M.; you know her. That tall lady with the reddish hair."

"Yes, I know her. She is Col. M.'s daughter. I know her well."

"Well, sir, she came into the store the other day and asked if she could use the telephone. I said she could. She rang up eight or ten different parties and asked them to dinner. She gave each one a message with a conversation sandwiched in between. Well, she did that regular once or twice a week, and it did not matter who was waiting for the 'phone, they had to wait until she got through. At last I got so disgusted with her that I told her it was out of order, and the telephone operator got to know her voice so well that she has gone to as many as half a dozen or more 'phones only to be told by the operator that they were out of order. I asked the operator why it was. She told me: 'Oh, I know that girl. She is a perfect nuisance. Let her send her invitations by post like other people.' Well sir, I had just got through with her one day when in came two rather nice looking girls, and the taller of the two asked me for the use of my telephone. I gave permission. Two minutes afterwards I was sorry for doing so, because they occupied fully half an hour, and this is what they said: 'Hello, central. Is that you central? Well, give me 7—, please. Thank you. Oh, is that you, Tom? How are you to-day. Quite well. Oh, I'm so glad. I was afraid you would be sick after Friday night. Oh, I'm so glad. Jessie is here with me. Wouldn't you like to be here? I know you would. She wants me to give you her love. Don't you believe it? Well she does, and,say,I saw you down town yesterday driving with a young lady, and, say, I'm jealous. What for? Oh, you know. Don't you really? Yes, you do. I know the young lady who was with you. Yes, I do. Oh, it's no use of your trying to get out of it. I feel awful bad. I've a good mind not to speak to you again. You are naughty. Yes, you are. Oh, you silly boy, what did you want to do that for: I'm surprised. Oh, I'm shocked. I could not believe it. You did not tell me her name. Won't you tell me? I won't tell if you do. It starts with M. What's the next letter? O? Mo—. Montgomery? Is that it? What is it? Oh, that is real mean of you now. Why won't you tell me? If you don't tell me her name I won't speak to you again, no never. Say, I'm going out for a drive to-morrow evening. Will you come? Yes, I'll take you. I'll forgive you. Will you come?' I don't know how much longer they would have stayed," said the grocer, "but they became aware that two travellers were snickering at them, and they stopped, much to my gratification. Some people would not believe this, but it is true. And that is the abominable nuisance I want you to write about and try and put down."

Saturday was the last day of the Industrial Fair, Winnipeg, which proved a great financial success, the attendance being away beyond that of former years.

It is said that the gooseberry yield will be a big failure this year in the neighborhood of Kingston on account of the ground becoming so hard around the bushes.

The annual combined picnic of the employees of John Taylor & Co. and R. & T. Watson took place at Wilson Park, N.Y., on Friday last by steamer Garden City.

All peddlers in Victoria, B.C., will now have to pay a semi-annual license of $20. Heretofore the license has varied, peddlars of certain wares being charged less than pedlers of other goods.

A villager passing William Scott & Co.'s general store, Brucefield, the other morning, discovered two men burglarizing the establishment, and immediately gave the alarm. After a lively tussle both burglars were captured and taken to Clinton jail.

The Winnipeg Board of Trade met jointly with the City Council and passed unanimously a resolution urging the Dominion Government to re-establish the river police force, the port being now virtually without any protection, to the great prejudice to trade and commerce.

The average circulation of the notes of Canadian banks for June was $33,484,413, the highest average June circulation since Confederation. The nearest approach was in June of last year, when the circulation was $32,614,000. During the nine years 1883-92 the average June circulation was $29,900,000. The note circulation last month was 12 per cent. higher, therefore, than the average of the previous nine years.

At a special meeting of the London City Council the offer of the M.C.R. to run the L. & P. S. road for thirty days on a basis of 50 per cent. on the profits was accepted, the city guaranteeing the M.C.R. against loss from law suits. The L. & P.S. Railway Board ratified the action of the Council, and once more the white elephant has been safely housed for a month.

Some Kingston merchants with large bank accounts and ample possessions endeavored in 1890 to form a protective association. Their idea of protection is to pass round an untruthful and insulting paper regarding another citizen who tried to collect an account three years old for work they had ordered. They could be in much more creditable business.—Whig, Kingston.

John Murphy is now building at South Westminster a salmon saltery. Here at the beginning of the great sock-eye run he will make a commencement of packing salted salmon for export on a large scale. It is believed that this branch of the B.C. fishery trade, which is at present of almost insignificant proportions, is capable of growth to very large and profitable dimensions. Hence Mr. Murphy's enterprise will be watched with considerable interest.—B.C. Commercial.

St. John Telegraph: Nova Scotia lobsters are very popular on account of their excellent flavor, being taken from a rocky bottom and not being able to get into the mud, as in this vicinity. During the present season 54 cargoes of live lobsters have been brought here from Nova Scotia, comprising 393,335 lobsters. Many of these have gone to the canneries along the coast and others, have supplied the retail trade.

There are still several plans on foot for the establishment of a French line of steamers between Canada and France whenever the commercial treaty between the two countries comes into force. Mr. Baddin, a millionaire, who arrived in Montreal a few days ago, is the latest promoter in the field. He would have a line of steamers from Montreal to Rouen. He is now interviewing Montreal merchants on the subject.

Returns gathered by the U.S. Department of Agriculture show that the acreage devoted to potatoes this year will be 101.1 per cent. of that of last year. This is not an unusual increase. The percentage of condition is 94.8 for the whole country, being not far from the average of July returns for a series of years. Colorado beetles have put in an early appearance, and promise to be unusually troublesome, especially in the central West.

The grand aggregate trade of the Dominion for the last fiscal year was $236,651,282. The returns showing the exports and imports for Canada for the past fiscal year have been completed by the customs department. There was an increase for the year of over one million in the exports, and a decrease of nearly six millions in the imports, as compared with last year's figures. Although the imports show this large decrease, still there is an increase in the duty collected of $611,291.

R. T. Rokeby, ex-president of the Commercial Bank, Winnipeg, who was reported to have decamped because a warrant was out for his arrest for making false returns to the Government, has safely crossed the lines, and is now in Minnesota. He drove to the boundary, where he took a train. He cannot be brought back as the offence is not extraditable. No other warrants have been executed, and it is not now likely any will be, as President McArthur's explanations are said to be perfectly satisfactory.

The growth of the hop industry in Washington State may be judged by the fact that it is reckoned that nearly 6,000 pickers will shortly be required to gather the hops grown in Yakima county. The reckoning is very likely something of an overestimate, but it is certain that several thousand pickers are required by that district. B.C. Indians being now prevented by the Alien Labor Law from taking their part in the work, white laborers are being called in to supplement the Washington State Indians. One dollar a box is the standard price for hop picking.—News-Advertiser, Vancouver.

The death of James Southcott removes another of the pioneers of London. In the first London directory he and his brother Charles are described as keeping a tailoring establishment on the corner of Richmond and York streets, where the Grigg house now stands. In 1864 Mr. Southcott quit tailoring and joined Mr. Ayers, then warden of the county, in a general grocery and produce trade on Talbot street. On the death of his partner he continued the business until his health compelled him to retire a few months since. Deceased was born in Morchad-Bishop, Devonshire, England, and came to Canada on his wedding trip, settling in London.

MERRY MONTREAL GROCERS.

When eight or nine hundred grocers, their sisters, cousins and aunts decide to have a good time it would take a large sized obstacle to stop them. There was no obstacle in the way, however, on the 19th instant, when the retail grocers of Montreal held their annual picnic. The weather was as perfect as that which proverbially graces a queen, the site selected for the outing, Highgate Springs, an ideal pleasure ground; in fact, everything contributed to make the event as successful as any of the thirteen pilgrimages of the Association which preceded it. It was thirteen years ago that the Association first conceived the idea that it would be a good thing to take a pleasuring like the one we are chronicling, and ever since that first event, which, by the way, was held at Highgate also, the grocers' picnic has been one of, if not the leading event, of the summer picnic season. Naturally as grocers they know what is good for the inner man, and each succeeding year their picnics have been noted for the tempting good things provided to satisfy eveen the most fastidious gourmand. This has in fact been one of the particular features of all their gatherings, and one of the reasons why they have always been so well attended, for a grocer's picnic lunch under a cool canvas tent is a thing to dream of, and there is no danger of those who receive invitations failing to respond. This year this particular department was in the hands of the following gentlemen, and if the spread given is any criterion they certainly fulfilled their duties to perfection, and their choice of a caterer, Mr. J. E. Dixon, a commendable one: Messrs. S. Demers, chairman; S. D. Vallieres, J. B. V. Daoust, N. Lapointe, J. Z. Goulet, J. E. Manning, E. Elliott, Mr. Hughes, Jos. Rabeau, Jos. Gareau, C. Leclair, S. Cardinal, P. B. Messnard, P. Desormier, Jos. Archambault, Marcel Lemieux, R. S. Auld.

Appetite and a good digestion are necessary adjuncts to all good dinners, and the grocers saw that both were provided, for the lunch was soarranged that it was sandwiched in between an extensive and varied programme of sports, the details of which are given elsewhere. The gentlemen who looked after this important part of the programme were Messrs. John Scanlan, chairman; A. Beauchamp, Thos. Gauthier, B. Cannaughton, V. Raby, J. E. Manning, H. Viger, John Johnston.

Now the grocers never neglect the ladies also, and to provide amusement for the fair and their swains, a complete list of dances was arranged and a capable orchestra on hand to tempt them to indulge in the light fantastic. Mr. J. O. Levesque was the chairman of this part of the programme, and the activity displayed by a person of his substantial build was surprising. In fact all the dancing and musical committee were men of generous frame, exemplifying the saying that to be a fat man does not of necessity imply that you are a bad dancer. Messrs. J. A. Dionne, L. H. Goulet, J. B. V. Daoust, D. Lapointe, J. H. Howard, T. Hodge, Wm. Duckworth, were the gentlemen who assisted Mr. Levesque in his pleasant task. In fact everything was in capable hands.

Messrs. B. Cannaughton, chairman, and S. D. Vallieres, W. Carignan, John Scanlan, Ed. Quinn, J. E. Manning, R. Turner, L. Marchand looked after the railway facilities, while the financial arrangements were in the hands of equally indefatugable members of the Association, as the following names will attest: Messrs. John Johnston, chairman; A. D. Fraser, Ans. Labrecque, James O'Shaughnessy, John Robertson, A. Chasse, M. Delehanty, Geo. Graham, A. Desjardins.

The run to the grounds was pleasant, the C.O.R. providing two trains of nine cars each so that there was no crowding. Once there it was surprising how soon the crowd of fifteen hundred people got out of sight. THE GROCER man was one of the first off the train, and the idea struck him as a good one to time the matter. By his watch it took just fifteen minutes to do the trick, the long string of people who wended their way up from the railway track rapidly melting into little groups or disappearing among the trees. Heading the procession were two pipers, Pipe Majors Mathewson and Clarke, of the Royal Scots, bravely skirling it away until they reached the rather steep ascent leading to the grounds. There they came to a sudden stop rather mixing up the procession headed by the president and prominent guests who followed. (Piper Clarke afterwards assured THE GROCER man that they did it to see whether the procession could keep step or not.) First among the processionists was President Demers, accompanied by a genial smile, who was escorting two prominent guests, Messrs. A. T. Lepine, M.L.A., and Pelletier, M.P. Then "the wind blew," as Mr. John Johnston, or, "John," as the trade familiarly term him, accompanied by what the ladies would call his "loves of whiskers" passed the gate. Vice-President Manning, with a heart-breaking look in his merry Irish eye, was not far away, and then Mr. John Robertson, who has so often safeguarded the financial interests of the Association, came along, accompanied by Mr. Geo. Wait, the well-known wholesale produce dealer, who, according to his own assertion, has never missed a grocers' picnic and never intends to do so while Providence permits. Mr. A. D. Fraser came along next, explaining to Gen. Henry and Col. Taylor, two American guests, how the grocers never missed anything, punctuality itself being the main characteristic of his own well known delivery carts, and the General responded with something about "When I was in the war." Mr. Bernard Cannaughton and a palmetto hat of generous proportions, like the "White plume of Navarre," an unfailing sign of his presence everywhere, escorted Mr. Chas. Childs, of the well-known wholesale grocery firm, and a host of others followed.

The reception committee, with Chairman O'Shaughnessy, who offered to run anyone if they would load up to his weight, were on hand, untiring in their efforts, Messrs. Labrecque, J. O. Ricard, J. B. V. Daoust, F. Bigaouette, John Scanlan, A. D. Fraser, M. P. Laverty, and D. Ruel ably assisting their chairman in seeing that no one was neglected, and no one was.

Mr. Geo. Wait, who acted as judge and master of ceremonies at the games, assisted by Mr. Charles Childs, lost no time in getting off the different events, while Messrs. Johnston and Robertson showed themselves as adept at policeing a track as in persuading a customer that so much sugar or tea would be absolutely wanted. As noted above, the games were partly got over and then everyone sat down to lunch. President Demers presided, with the two legislators above mentioned on his right. The vice chairs were filled by J. E. Manning, with Mr. Chas. Childs on his right; Mr. Johnston, with Mr. George Wait in the place of honor, and Mr. A. D. Fraser, who had General Henry and Colonel Taylor on his right. The chairman proposed "The Queen," which was duly acknowledged, after which Mr. A. D. Fraser toasted the "President of the United States," which called for replies from Gen. Henry and Col. Taylor. "Canada," the next toast, was acknowledged by Messrs. Lepine and Pelletier, after which Mr. Johnston gave "The Wholesale Grocers." Mr. Chas. Childs responded in a few well chosen remarks, and then "The Judges" were honored by Mr. John Scanlan, Mr. Geo. Wait responding. The healths of "The Chairman," "The Press," and "The Ladies," followed, bringing a pleasant little luncheon to a close.

The balance of the programme was afterwards finished in plenty of time to allow for an hour or so of dancing before the return journey to town was commenced at 5.30 p.m.

EXPERIENCING IN ADVERTISING.

My store is a very modest one and is the prototype—or was—of the little Dutch corner grocery, familiar, I have no doubt, to all of you.

I succeeded to a business formerly owned by a German who allowed what had been at one time a fairly prosperous store, to become afflicted with dry rot. I sometimes think it would have paid me better to have started in an entirely new neighborhood. I not only had to build up my own reputation, but I also had to live down his—a rather trying ordeal I assure you. Still I had made the start and was determined to succeed if it was at all possible.

I early looked around for every possible means of attracting custom. I read with avidity all the hints our trade papers conveyed, and studied with interest the methods of my dry goods neighbors, who placed such reliance on the virtues of advertising. I talked the matter over with all the drummers with whom I came in contact, and was much impressed by a short extract from an article by Mr. J. Edward Cowles, of Thurber. Whyland Co., and whom I knew very well, which appeared some time ago in Art In Advertising. What already dawned on me was that no one was suffering for my groceries, and that if I would effect sales I must devise some scheme to bring the people to the store.

I accidentally hit upon an idea that makes me smile when I think how simple it is, and yet how far reaching it has been in its effects. Whenever a very small child came to the store, I made it a point to put a cracker or a bit of candy in the hands of my diminutive customer. When the parents accompanied the child I made it two crackers The result was surprising. I became at once a great favorite with the children, and I am afraid that I was frequently the recipient of orders that were meant for my more opulent neighbor across the way. In this way my store became known to the parents, and I frequently heard it said that they never would have thought it worth while to give me a trial had it not been for my kindness to the children.

I early began the observance of special days, so to speak. On Saturdays, though usually a busy day, I announced in flaring posters in the window that I would throw in a dozen clothespins with every purchase of soap or other articles incident to wash day. The profits on these staple articles, particularly the ones largely advertised, are not calculated to make a Rockefeller out of the corner groceryman with appalling speediness, and I was in doubt as to the wisdom of the experiment. But the ultimate result soon justified my temerity. I noticed through the week that a great many other articles naturally followed the demand for soaps, and on the whole, I count the scheme among the best I have yet devised.

My store windows were small and almost wholly obliterated with different signs, placed there by enterprising salesmen, etc. I soon decided to put in large front plate glass windows arranging panels on the bottoms and down the side. I readily let the spaces thus secured to the various firms who desired an out door display, and the rental from those signs, not only paid for the plate glass eventually, but earned a neat little profit besides I was also enabled to make a splendid showing in the window wherein I was careful to show only such goods as were being then largely advertised in our daily papers. Thus when Cottolene appeared, I had the window decorated entirely with pails of new goods. I never hesitated to buy freely of goods that were heavily advertised. They are good sellers, and though the demand at first is slow, yet it is all important to anticipate the demand, rather than wait till you can no longer afford to be without it. I also reproduced the main feature of the advertising thus : "Here is the new shortening, Cottolene, you hear so much about. It is worth trying." I found that there is always a disposition to try new things at once, but if you have to wait a week or so people get over curiosity and let it go for the time being. Besides I was anxious to get a reputation for having everything first. I had French soups first, plum pudding, etc., etc., and the idea took well. Anything that brought trade was what I wanted.

About this time I removed the awful structure that surrounded my store, which was by courtesy called an awning or shed. It darkened my store and cast a blight on the whole place. I replaced it with a handsome, stylish awning in blue and white. It made a wonderful improvement. I also removed the big, bulky stove that stood in the middle of the room, and took up more space than anything else in the store. Other trifling improvements of a similar nature were made from time to time, and did much to gratify my customers and attract trade. I do not think money thus invested is ever lost. If I had more money I would spend it all on handsome fixtures. I would follow the plan of the bar-rooms : "Nothing is too good for them," and it evidently pays.—Art in Advertising.

SPECULATION IN CLOVES.

Cloves have for many years been a favorite article with speculators, but of late, principally owing to the large accumulations of stock in the warehouses, they have been severely left alone. Left to the purely legitimate demand, Zanzibar cloves fell last year to about the lowest price on record, viz., 2¾d. per lb. The lowness of the price induced speculation, and a small syndicate was formed to buy up the article. Operations were conducted on a large scale, and considerable quantities changed hands at continually rising prices. During April and part of May Zanzibar cloves for June August deliveries were quoted 4 1-16d. per lb. The present spot quotation for this description is 3⅝d. to 3½d. per lb. It should be mentioned that Zanzibar cloves are practically the clove market, although there are both Amboyna and Penang sorts to be had in comparatively small quantities. The present stock of Zanzibar cloves in the warehouses is 48,481 packages, against 35,000 at the corresponding period of 1892. The deliveries for the first twenty one weeks of this year amount to 7,483 packages, against 6,289 packages during the same time last year. It will thus be seen that the consumption has sensibly fallen off in consequence of enhanced prices, and that the present stock is equal to about three years' requirements, according to the published deliveries to date. Recent advices received from Zanzibar state that the next crop promised to be large, but owing to the lateness of the rains, fears were entertained that they might have a damaging rather than a favorable effect. Clove cultivation in Zanzibar appears to suffer considerably from insufficiency of available labor, especially since slavery has been more or less abolished. It is stated on reliable authority that large estates are falling out of cultivation, although this may be caused as much by the low prices so long current as by want of laborers. However, the fact remains that the Zanzibar clove crop of 1892 has fallen short of that of 1891 by some 50,000 frasilas (a frasila equals about 85 lbs.,) while that of 1890 was upwards of 100,000 frasilas better than that of 1891. The present quotation for Amboyna cloves is 4½ to 5¾d. per lb., and for Penang 6d. to 1s. per lb. It will, therefore, be seen at once that Zanzibars at 3⅜ to 3½d. per lb. are sure to be most in favor with consumers.—Manchester Guardian.

EPSOM SALTS.

Tallyrand once said of the English in his light-hearted epigrammatic way—so much wisdom packed into a bon mot—that they were a droll people with their thousand religions and their solitary sauce. That was the French view, from the cuisine standpoint. The Germans were as astonished to find that with all our religions we had but a single natural water. They were so rich themselves in such waters, and we had only Epsom Salts. We have the name still, but it is difficult to realize that the little town on the breezy downs, this week a centre of feverish interest, all other weeks so salubrious and dull, was once a popular English Spa, and ranked with Tunbridge and Bath. It has, indeed, its horse races, its gambling, its gay company, but all that history seems to have been wiped away and forgotten, and the record of it reads like a page in a foreign guide book. No novelist has done for Epsom what Jane Austen did for Bath, and Thackaray for Tunbridge Wells. The festivities and modish history of the little place have faded from memory, quai vate sacro caret. They had their vogue in their day, and the day dates as far back as Queen Elizabeth. The qualities of the spring were discovered by cattle, who all through a dry summer refused to touch it. Then the Galen of the day came down with his tests and his Latin phrases, and Epsom spring was solemnly pronounced "vulnerary and abstersive." It survived these hard names, and the country people gave it a kind of capricious patronage which neither injured it or them. But with the Stuarts came a new analysis, and James the First's physicians found it charged with calcerous nitre. Still these were not the days of companies limited, and the nearest thing to a Kurhaus at Epsom was the building of a shed by the lord of the manor. But there was a good time coming, and about 1640 France and Germany suddenly woke up to the curative properties of salts. They were to do for debilitated mankind in the East what Peruvian bark was afterwards to do in the West. Salts were sold in England at 5s. an ounce, life was to be indefinitely lengthened, and the ordinary drugs laid aside. Soon Epsom made its start. Families and foreigners flocked to it, the lord of the manor built a ballroom 70 feet long, and then it was that the Elm Walk was planted, leading from the London Road. The visitors thronged in, and lodging-houses were run up where they were boarded for the summer season. This was interesting, because it gave rise to a law point, to a leading case involving large interests. Were these proprietors, who supplied the fashionable folk with bed and breakfast and dinner, not publicans in disguise, and so liable to take out a license? The judges solemnly decided they were not, and the place prospered on the decision. The largest taverns in England were then built at Epsom; sedan chairs brought the fashionable folk down to the springs; coaches lumbered in from town several times a day. There was a public breakfast, music at the wells after it, races on the downs at noon, cudgelling, wrestling bouts, and foot-races in the afternoon, dancing and music at night. In 1711 appeared Toland's description of Epsom, "with the humors and politics of the place, in a letter to Eudoxa." Sixty coaches—he tells Eudoxa—he counted in the ring one Sunday night, and was proud to add that he himself caught a pig by the tail. The great promoter of Epsom in these days was, naturally enough, an apothecary, who built assembly rooms and booths for milliners and toymen, made a bowling green, and opened rooms for "raffling, diseing, fairchance, and all kinds of games." We fancy our simple ancestors in those modish times, with their sedan chairs and their rappee and their chocolate, their gossip, their scandals, their duels, and their little network of small interests, concentrated at that very spot where to-day passengers are discharged in tens of thousands, and all is tumult and excitement. All of a sudden the waters lost their efficacy. For ten years either the cures or the faith dwindled, and the place seemed blighted. Then it suddenly sprung into vogue again. It was just before the South Sea Bubble burst. The village was filled with quacks and alchemists, gaming was carried to a great height, and the cure was believed in—all sorts of things were believed in. A woman established herself as a bone-setter, and called herself "Crazy Sally." She became the vogue at once. The novelty counted for much, and then there was interest about her, for she was sister of the "Polly Peacham" who married the Duke of Bolton. Sally's rooms were crowded; she made 20 guineas a day, and her fame alarmed the surgeons of the place. What was the good of a diploma, if this unlicensed stranger was to carry off all the money? They sent a strong man, with a feigned dislocation, to her for cure. Crazy Sally saw the trick, and took him at his word. She put his wrist out with great skill and composure, and told him to go back to the fools who sent him. But gradually Epsom was losing its vogue. Salts were, after all, not such a panacea. Another faith was arising which was to do heavy damage to the Spas, to wipe away merry Epsom, to eclipse the fame of the more ambitious Tunbridge Wells, and even to overshadow Bath itself. People were taking to "the new fashion of sea bathing," and it was impossible to predict what that might lead to. So said the newspaper of the day, and this generation has lived to see the new fashion established, and Epsom famous only for its horseracing.—Westminster Gazette.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, July 27, 1893.

GROCERIES.

The feature of the trade this week was a decline on Tuesday of ⅛c. in the price of granulated sugar. Otherwise the situation remains much as before. The volume of business continues fair for the season, although the decline in the price of sugar has tended to cause a falling off in the demand of that article. The farmers are busy harvesting. Some of them are even cutting fall wheat before they are through haying. It is seldom that a farmer is to be found in the towns and villages, and travelers report that business is in consequence quiet in the country, although the prospects are bright and the merchants in good spirits. Payments appear to be on the whole fairly satisfactory. The local coffee market remains in much the same uninteresting condition as before, and that outside does not seem to be any better. In fruits there is the usual quiet trade doing. Rice is in fair demand, and a seasonable trade is doing in spices. Syrup is quiet and molasses dull. In teas there is some improvement to report. Canned vegetables are slow, but in salmon and lobster there is a brisk trade doing.

COFFEES.

Locally there is just a fair trade only doing and the finest grades are still scarce. During the week the outside markets have ruled tame, although supplies are diminishing. Advices state that jobbers in the New York have to pay cash and on this account they are not buying so freely because of the scarcity of money. With a relaxation in the financial stringency on the other side a better feeling is looked for. We quote as before: Rio, 19½ to 21½c.; East Indian, 27 to 30c.; South American, 21 to 23c.; Santos, 21 to 22c.; Java, 30 to 32c.; Mocha, 26 to 27c.; Maracaibo, 21 to 23c.

DRIED FRUIT.

There is a fair demand for the cheaper kinds of Valencia raisins at 3½ to 3¾c. a pound but outside these there is not a great deal doing. Layers sell ordinarly at 6 to 6½c. The new crop Valencia raisins will likely be shipped about August 10. Currants are if anything in rather better demand than a week ago, but the movement at the same time is not large. Fine fruit is scarce and will likely be cleaned out by the time the new crop arrives, which will probably be about the end of September. Ruling prices are 5½ to 6c. for provincials, 7½ to 8½c. for Patras and 8 to 9c. for Vostizzas. Sultana raisins are quiet and unchanged at 6¼ to 6¾c. for good, 7¼ to 7¾c. for fine and 8 to 8¾c. for choice. The demand for prunes continues to fall off; 7 to 7½c. in cases is the idea. Dates dull and unchanged at 5 to 5½c. In figs the market is about cleaned out and the only thing that is selling is a few cooking figs.

NUTS.

There is no change, and trade remains much as before. We quote :—Brazil nuts 11 to 11½c. a pound; Sicily shelled almonds, 32 to 35c. a pound; unshelled, 16 to 17c.; peanuts, 13 to 14c. for roasted and 11 to 12½c. for green; cocoa nuts, $5 to $5.50 per sack; Marbot walnuts 11½ to 12c.; pecans 13½ to 16c.

RICE AND SPICES.

Rice is in demand and unchanged at 5½ to 6c. for finest brands, and 3⅝ to 5¾c. for B. quality Japan rice. There is a good, seasonable demand for spices. Whole ginger is quoted at 20 to 25c., pure white pepper at 20 to 28c. and pure black at 14 to 16c.

SUGAR.

The feature of the week in this article is the decline of ⅛c. in the price of granulated, announced by the refiners Tuesday last in sympathy with the outside markets. There was an immediate corresponding reduction on the part of most of the wholesale houses. Granulated is now generally quoted at 5⅜c., although a house here and there is hanging out for ⅛c. more than that figure. Yellows are quoted at from 4⅝ to 5¼c. For some days before the decline was announced some local jobbers who were carrying large stocks were supplying their fellow jobbers with granulated at figures slightly under those obtaining at the refineries. At the same time the trade looked upon the decline as being of a temporary character and expect a higher market again in September, when the demand usually becomes the greatest. In the meantime the demand shows some easing off, sales being altogether confined to small lots.

Willett & Gray, New York, in their weekly Statistical, say: The week—Raws declined 3-16c. Refined unchanged. Receipts, 29,585 tons. Total stock in all the principal countries, 914,694 tons, against 1,230,443 tons at same dates last year. Afloats to the United States from all countries estimated, 50,000 tons, against 70,000 tons last year.

Raws—For the reasons fully given last week the refiners have had no occasion to enter the market for raw sugars, and business has been limited to a few sales. Receipts have been unexpectedly large for the past two weeks, and though meltings are on the increase again, the stocks show a further increase for the week, partly owing to the arrival of a large cargo of Philippine Islands sugar, the first of the new crop. The European markets have been extremely unsettled during the week, fluctuating for beet sugar from 18s. to 16s. 11¼d, and closing at 17s., a decline of 1s. per cwt. or ¼c. per lb. and reducing the parity of centrifugals to 4 3-16c., at which some few transactions were made. The present reaction of prices is not owing to any particular change of the statistical position of sugar, but more directly to the influence of the financial panics or semi-panics both at home and abroad. While these adverse influences continue it is impossible to foresee what the final effect may be upon the sugar speculation abroad, but it is evident that the intention to advance prices largely which existed when beet sugars were above 18s., has been abandoned for the present at least. With a removal of the money difficulties there is plenty of time, however, for another upward movement before the new campaign begins The hand-to-mouth basis is now in full force, and it is probable that by the 1st of August there will be as small an invisible stock in this country as existed on the 1st of January.

Refined—As stated by us at the beginning of the speculative movement in raw sugars, the American Sugar Refining Co. would probably not advance the price of refined sugars to the parity of each advance in raws until satisfied such advance was to be maintained. This course has been followed, and hence the prices of refined have been kept well below the parity of raws, and the present reaction of raws to 4 3-16c. only brings granulated to the usual relative parity at its present price of 5.34c. The same rule will probably hold good now, and prices of refined will only be reduced when a further reduction is made in raws and maintained, for it is by no means improbable that raws will again advance in August, though they may reach no higher figures than those already quoted this season. This will depend entirely upon the ability of the holders of sugar in Europe and Cuba to wait their time of demand. There is accumulating evidence that the trade, with few exceptions, are fully down to minimum stocks, and a more active market for refined should soon appear.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Trade continues light in syrups and what is doing partakes mostly of the brighter grades at about 2¾ to 3c. Molasses continues dull with the ruling price 32c. for barrels and 34½c. for half barrels.

TEAS.

Demand continues to improve. There have been quite a few Japans and Ceylons moving during the week, the former at prices ranging from 20 to 35c. and the latter at 23 to 28c. Medium grade Ceylons are getting picked up and in England they are scarce. One house on the street made six offers for a certain kind and found that the market had been cleaned out of it. In Japans teas, medium consigned are said not to be covering cost at the price at which they are being offered, and the owners have cabled their agents here not to sell at present prices. Medium Japans never showed better value than now and the reason is ascribed to the fact that they have not been buying these teas as freely as usual in the States owing to the financial troubles over there.

Mail advices from Hankow under date of June 5 state that the demand has continued in excess of supplies and prices generally have been fully maintained. Common Congou is quoted firmer, and there were very few such teas offering. Rainy weather had interfered with shipping. Arrivals to date were: Hankow, 480,000 half chests; Kinkiang, 240,000 half chests; total, 720,000 half chests, against 692,000 half chests the same

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

There is not much of especial interest to note this week in canned goods. A few cheap lines, such as pumpkins and corn, are being got rid of with a view to cleaning up, but otherwise vegetables and fruits are quiet. In fish and meats a good trade is being done. Demand is light for tomatoes; 85c. is the ordinary price, but there are some that can be obtained at 80c. Futures have been offering at 85c., but the policy of the trade this year seems to be to wait. Peas are quiet and unchanged at 80 to 90c. ordinarily. They are being offered for future delivery at 85c. The demand for corn is light at 80 to 90c. We hear of some being offered on this market at low prices, but the quality is reported to be bad. Peaches are quiet and stocks are light and prices unchanged at $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's and $3 to $3 25 for 3's. Pumpkins are in good demand at 85 to 90c. Plums are in fair demand and unchanged at $1.45 to $1.55. There is very little doing in raspberries and prices are unchanged, at $1.75 to $2. Apples are scarce, but there is not much doing. We quote as before at $2 to $2.25 for gallons and 85c. to $1 for 3's. This market is about cleaned out of good salmon in tall tins, and only a few are obtainable in flat tins. Stocks are now largely confined to spring catch and white salmon of not desirable brands. Everybody is now awaiting the new pack, which is expected on this market about the end of August or beginning of September. Demand continues brisk at firm prices. We quote first-class stock at from $1.50 to $1.75 for talls and $1.70 to $1.80 for flats. In lobsters demand is good for the better brands and stocks are comparatively light; $1.90 to $2.10 is the idea for talls and $2.50 to $2.70 for flats. Demand for meats continues seasonably good at unchanged prices.

time last year. Settlements—Hankow, 384,000 half chests; Kinkiang, 200,000 half chests; total, 584,000 half chests, against 539,000 half chests the same time last year. Stock—Hankow, 96,000 half chests; Kinkiang, 40,000 half chests; total, 136,000 half chests, compared with 153,000 half chests a year ago. Regarding exchange, the advices reported that four months' credits had fluctuated 3s. 11¼d. to 3s. 11⅝d., closing at 3s. 11⅝d.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

Butter is scarce and firm in price. For dairy butter the demand is good. Good, straight dairy tubs sells at 16 to 17½c. and good store packed tubs at 15 to 16c. The range for tubs, crocks and pails is 14 to 17½c., according to quality. There is a good demand for medium at about 15c. for bakers' use. Farmers' pound prints sell at 17 to 18c. There is just a little jobbing trade doing in creamery butter, and there is not much offering. For creamery tubs 20 to 21c. is the idea, and pound prints are being jobbed at 20 to 22c.

Cheese is unchanged and demand is light. Jobbers are getting 9¾ to 10c., and 9 to 9¼c. is being asked at the factories. The production, owing to the favorable weather, ought to be good.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—There seems to be a little better demand, and good stock is rather scarce. Jobbers are getting $1.10 to $1.20 for medium and $1.40 to $1.50 for a good hand-picked bean.

DRIED APPLES—The enquiry continues to improve and prices are firmer. Jobbers are getting from 4½ to 5c, accordiny to quality, and they are paying all the way from 3½ to 4¼c.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Dull; good stock is quoted at 9c., but a cheaper line can be got at 7c. This latter price is also asked for quarters.

EGGS—Receipts continue liberal and prices are weak at 11½ to 11¾c. They are showing the weather and have to be inspected more closely.

POTATOES—Demand is good and receipts are hardly sufficient to supply it, but prices at the same time are lower than a week ago. The ruling price for both American and Canadian is $2.50 per barrel, and this price at the moment obtains, whether it be for one or twenty-five-barrel lots.

HONEY—Nothing new to report. Extracted is quoted at 5c. for dark and 8c. for white. There is some this year's section on the market and it is selling at 20c.

ONIONS—Unchanged. Bermudas are out of the market and Egyptian are quoted as before at $2 to $2 25.

HOPS—Easier, jobbers quoting large lots at 15 to 16c. and small at 16 to 17c.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

The weather has been too hot for dressed hogs and the price is nominally $8. Hog products, such as hams, long clear and breakfast bacon, continue in good demand at unchanged prices.

BACON—Long clear, 10½ to 11c. Smoked backs 12½c., bellies, 13½ to 14c. rolls 10½ to 10¾c.

HAMS—In good demand and firm at 13 to 13½c. for smoked.

LARD—Pure Canadian is 13c. in tubs, 13¼c. in pails and 12¾c. in tierces. Compound 10 to 10½c.

BARREL PORK—Canadian heavy mess $21, Canadian short cut $22, shoulder mess $19.50.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef fores are 5 to 5½c., hindquarters 9½ to 10c., mutton 7 to 9c., lamb 15 to 17c.

good. Watermelons are scarce. Most of the lemons go out at about $5. The first shipment of Canadian peaches arrived on this market Tuesday. They were from St. Davids in the Niagara district. This is a week or so earlier than usual. The season is about over for oranges. Huckleberries are on the market, and they are selling at 75c. to $1 per basket as to condition. We quote: Oranges—Messinas, ½ boxes of 80's, $2.50; ½ boxes of 100's, $2.50 to $2.75; lemons, $4.50 to $5.50; bananas, $1.25 to $1.75; raspberries, 7c to 8c.; cherries 90 to $1.25 per basket; red currants 65 to 75c. per basket; tomatoes $1 to $1.25 per crate; Canadian tomatoes $1 per crate; huckleberries, 75c. to $1; cucumbers, 75c. per basket; beans, 75c. to $1 per bush.; gooseberries, 50 to $1 per basket; cabbage, $1.75 to $2.25 per bbl. for Canadian; watermelons, 20 to 30c.; California fruit—Apricots $2.25; peaches, $2 to $2.25; pears, $3.25 to $3.50.

FISH.

There is a fair business doing at last week's prices, although the supply is not quite sufficient to fill the demand. Herring are a little more plentiful than they were a week ago. We quote as follows: Fresh sea salmon, 15c.; skinned and boned codfish, 6½c.; Labrador herring, $3 per half barrel; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 11 to 12½c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; blue back herring, $1 to $1.50 per hundred; blue pickerel, 4 to 5c. a lb.; yellow ditto, 7 to 8c. a lb.; salmon trout and white fish, 7c.; eels, 6 to 8c. a lb.

SALT.

Trade in salt during the past week has not been so brisk as in former weeks, although some good sales were made. Prices continue the same: Barrel salt, $1; coarse, in sacks, 68c.; dairy, $1.25; Liverpool rock, $10 per ton.

HIDES, SKINS, TALLOW, WOOL.

HIDES—Market in hides is quiet. Few sales are being made at 4¾c. No. 1 green stands at 4c., No. 2 at 3c.

SKINS—Skins remain much the same as last week. Dealers are paying 7c. for selected No. 1 calf. Lamb skins continue firm at 40c., full grown sheep skins are running from $1 to $1.50. Pelts continue at 15 to 20c.

WOOL—There is a slight move in wool at 16½ to 17½c. for select combing. Owing to the States dropping entirely out buyers are compelled to look to our own consumers, but as factories continue running on full time the consumption is naturally large.

TALLOW—Tallow offered is poor and difficult to dispose of. As soap manufacturers are having no little difficulty in the disposal of their productions at prices that will pay, they do not care to buy country summer rendered tallow. If this continues much longer tallow will have to come down. Dealers are paying 5c. for rendered and selling at 5¾c.; rough remains at 2c.

PETROLEUM.

The Petrolea Advertiser, in its weekly review, says:—"Following the first ebullition of joy or of disappointment, according to the political bias, following the change in the tariff with regard to the importation of refined illuminating oil, and the possible or probable effects on our oil industry here, we do not see any cause to despair. The crude market remains firm. The possible effects have been freely discussed in financial circles, and some have contended that the oil industrial securities will be seriously affected by reasons of unfavorable conditions likely to follow to the detriment of the business. We regard a full discussion of this subject at this time as somewhat premature, but the alarmists are making the most of this opportunity for the purpose of affecting crude oil securities, and this has caused us to take notice of the matter." Petrolia crude, $1.07 per barrel.

There is a brisk trade doing on the Toronto market in both burning and lubricating oils. Canadian oils are ½ to 2c. per gallon lower, and American show a decline of 2½ to 3c. We quote, imperial gal., Toronto: Canadian, 12½ to 13c.; carbon safety, 16½c.; Canadian water white, 17c.; American water white, 18½ to 19c.; photogene, 22c.

in the world, and also that it has the largest sale of any sauce in the Old Country, have just commenced pushing in the Dominion. They have appointed C. H. Binks & Co. of Montreal, sole agents for Canada. Yorkshire Relish will be well advertised and a large business will no doubt be done in it, and the trade is advised to write Messrs. Binks & Co. for samples and prices.

In this issue appears an illustration of Jas. A. Skinner & Co.'s latest Code's. The price of the package is only $6.50, which speaks for itself.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. are still holding a few cases of mackerel, and they are in a position to supply small orders that may be sent in immediately.

Wright & Copp are said to be beseiged with orders for Pettijohn California breakfast food. They are unloading a car this week when all orders will be promptly filled.

The T. A. Snider Preserve Co., Cincinnati, have just issued a neat price list for the Dominion. The principal change is a reduction of 50 cents per dozen on quart tomato catsup.

Smith & Keighly are offering a novelty in teas. It is condensed tea with cream and sugar, put up in form of a paste in one-pound tins. Each tin will make about 40 cups. The quality is a fine black.

The "boom" in spot canned tomatoes seems to have spent its force. In any event, anxious buyers would have been accommodated on Saturday with first-class American goods at $1.40 per dozen, while Canadian pack was offered a shade less than $1.25, landed here, immediate shipment. New pack American goods were offered at $1.10 for delivery not later than September 1st.—N. Y. Bulletin.

No grocer or general dealer should be without Nixey's goods in stock. They are popular, and are gradually becoming more so, because of the excellent value they give. Just now the Toronto agent, W. Matthews, No. 7 Richmond street west, is in receipt of a fresh supply of blue, black lead (3 kinds), and knife polish. These goods can be obtained from the wholesale houses in all trade centres. It is said that there is a probability of an advance in prices taking place shortly.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, July 27, 1893.

GROCERIES.

The week as a whole in groceries has been a quiet one, but for all that has not been wanting in interesting features. The chief in this respect is sugar. Outside advices on this staple have been rather soft, and the fact, coupled with some fluctuations in the price of raw in New York, create some easiness on spot, which has led up to the refiners marking down the price of granulated ⅛ of a cent The fact that the feeling was easy, however, has not by any means checked the enquiry, for all the houses report a fair business in sugar, in fact state that it has furnished the bulk of the movement. Whether the easier feeling in raw will cause any serious reaction in the price of refined is a matter furnishing a difference of opinion on spot. A good many in the trade take a negative view, arguing that the refined article has had no such abnormal advance as raw, and that hence there is no reason for reaction in it. In teas there has been a rather wider movement at steady figures. It appears after all that supplies of Barbadoes molasses are not so excessive, and members of the combine maintain as firm views as ever. Syrups are quiet and inclined to be easy, while coffees and spices are firm. There has been a fair trade in dried raisins, which rule fairly steady. Payments rule fair on the whole.

SUGAR.

Outside advices have been easier on sugar, especially from London, cables from that market a few days ago stating that it was was demoralized and declining rapidly. New York followed suit to a certain extent and then steadied up, but the effect on spot has not been markedly appreciable until within a day or so when refiners decided to cut down granulated to 5⅜c. a decline of an ⅛c. but not touch yellows at all, which remain as before, 4⅜c. and upward according to grade. Whether the refined market will react materially in sympathy with the easiness in raws is difficult to say, but some dealers here are inclined to take a negative view, arguing that the advance in the price of refined was not by any means equivalent to that of raw, hence there is less reason for reaction.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The demand for syrups is slow, but there is a fair movement in molasses. It is thought that all the Barbadoes stock has arrived, some 7,000 puncheons in all being turned into stock in Montreal since the spring. Dealers contend however that stock on spot are not large as they have succeeded in moving a good quantity. Prices are unchanged, the combine still asking 33 to 34c. and outsiders 30 to 31c. Sales of Canadian syrup are reported at 1⅞ to 2⅛c. per lb. as to quantity.

TEA.

Holders report more disposition on the part of buyers to avail themselves of the favorable opportunity of low prices to provide supplies. The result is a fair movement in medium grade Japans at 17 to 19c., some large parcels being moved during the week. A lot of Pingsuey gunpowder changed hands on New York account, but the terms were kept private. We quote Japans: Common 11 to 13c.; medium 15 to 17c.; fine 18 to 21c., and finest 23 to 30c.

COFFEES AND SPICES.

The coffee market rules steady with sales of Maracaibo at 20½ to 22c. as to quantity and quality. On spot we quote: Jamaica, 19 to 20c.; Maracaibo, 20½ to 22c.; Rio, 19 to 21c.; Java, 24 to 28c.; and Mocha, 25 to 28c. for round lots.

Spices are steady and we quote: Jamaica ginger, 16 to 18c., and 20 to 23c. for finer qualities. Black pepper, 8 to 9c.; pimento, 6½c.; nutmegs, firm, 50 to 52½c. and $1.

DRIED FRUIT.

An improved enquiry is reported for Valencia raisins, but the supply here is small, for, as we have already noted, the stock of fine grades has all been cleaned out of first hands. We quote nominally 3½c. for straight lots. Advices from Denia are easy in tone, there being reported offerings from Denia at 16s. 6d. cost and freight Montreal. Currants are quiet at 5 to 6c.

RICE.

The demand for rice is improving, millers reporting a brisk enquiry at steady prices. New Patna rice is now coming to hand.

GREEN FRUIT.

There has been a good business doing in all lines of green fruit. Lemons have met a good enquiry at $3.25 to $4 for choice and $2.25 to $3 for common to good. Oranges have met a good business, and prices are $2.50 to $4 for boxes and half boxes $1.50 to $1.85. Raspberries are still plentiful and cheap at 60 to 80c. according to package. Peaches are scarce at $2 per box, and pears are in good demand at $2.25 to $2.50. Bananas are in over supply and easy at 80c. to $1.25. Red currants move at 7c. per box. There is a free sale for cherries at 75c. to $1.30 per basket, and watermelons are scarce and firm at 25 to 30c. as to quality. Imported onions are in good demand at $2.40 to $2.50 for Bermuda and $2.25 for Egyptian per case.

BEANS.

The market is quiet and steady, and we quote hand picked $1.40 to $1.50 per bushel, ordinary $1.25 to $1.30, and inferior 90c. to $1.10.

HOPS.

There is a somewhat better feeling in hops, which we quote at 18 to 20c for good to choice, 15 to 16½c. for yearlings and 6 to 10c. for old.

POTATOES.

The market keeps well cleared of old stock. New potatoes are selling freely at $2.50 per barrel.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market is dull and uninteresting. Dealers are generally shading prices to induce business, but the movement in spite of this is small. We quote:—Canadian short cut, per brl., $21 to $21.50; mess pork, western, new, per brl., $22.50 to $23; hams, city cured, per lb., 12 to 13½c.; lard, Canadian, in pails, 11 to 12c.; bacon, per lb., 11½ to 12¼c.; lard, com., refined, per lb., 9½ to 10c.

EGGS.

A good local demand is reported for eggs for this season of the year, at 11 to 11½c. Single cases of choice fancy candled stock make 12c. Receipts rule moderate.

CHEESE.

The cheese market remains much the same. Shippers complain as much as ever about it being difficult to negotiate any new business at present prices, but, in the face of this, free buying in the country continues. We understand that the first half of July has been taken in the Townships at 8⅞ to 9c. in the country, and also that there has been a good deal of picking up in the French district at a fraction less, while it is pretty generally admitted that up west the first half of the month is closely sold up also at 9 1-16c upward. With this free buying at these full prices, and the complaints about close limits, the market is a hard one to understand. It is evident, however, that some people want cheese, for there was considerable enquiry in a shopping way on the streets to-day for colored western and in a minor degree for white also, 9⅜c. being bid for the former and 9⅛ to 9¼c. for the latter.

Colored, however, was hard to get on the street, and there was not much white to do business in either.

BUTTER.

Butter is firm, but the market rules quiet for the reason that holders are rather extreme in their views, while there is not much stock of any kind here to do business in. There is a fair export enquiry for creamery at 21½ to 21¾c., and business has been put through over the cable at within this range. Townships is usually wanted for the local jobbing demand and fetches full figures, 19 to 20c. being the idea in its case. For Western exporters have paid 17c., but this they consider a full price, but we quote 17 to 18c. as holders of it are firm, 16½c. having been paid in the country. We quote: Creamery, 21½ to 22c.; Townships, 19 to 20c.; Western dairy, 17 to 18c.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

Refiners have marked down the price of granulated sugar an ⅛ of a cent.

Valencia raisins, off-stalk, are offered from Denia at 16s. 6d. cost and freight Montreal.

New York buyers have been picking up a round lot of Pingsuey gunpowders on this market. The terms are not know, but 16c. is not far from the price.

New Patna rice will be on hand on the market, it is expected before the close of the present week.

The total receipts of Barbadoes molasses on purely Montreal account this season since the opening of navigation are placed at 7,000 puncheons.

GOING TO HAVE A BIG TIME.

The finishing touches to the arrangements for holding the annual excursion of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association to Niagara Falls are being put on, and if the Weather Clerk does not fail in his duty it will be one of the best outings the Association ever had. After leaving the boats at Queenston the excursionists will take the new and delightful electric railway route to the Falls, where special arrangements have been made for their entertainment. The tickets are $1.25 for adults and 65c. for children. Remember August 2 is the date.

PERSONAL MENTION.

John Moffatt, of Kincardine, starts for the World's Fair August 15.

D. McLachlan, Woodville, was in Toronto this week on business.

E. Wissler, of Salem, is snatching time from business to see the World's Fair.

P. W. Hay, of Kincardine, has been holidaying in Detroit, Saginaw, and other American cities.

C. A. Nairn, of Goderich, who has been touring in Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukee, etc., is again back to business.

L. Schepp, the well-known cocoa manufacturer, was in Toronto Tuesday. He said his reason was to see what inducements the city would give him to locate the Canadian branch of his factory here. The factory is now in Hamilton, and should it be removed to Toronto would be enlarged.

F. A. Mills, of Wingham, has returned from Chicago where he has been taking in the World's Fair. He is much pleased with what he saw.

WATER SETS.

The accompanying illustration shows one of the many designs of water sets shown by Nerlich & Co. Full information was given in their advertisement which appeared in THE GROCER two weeks ago. Their great run is a case containing ten sets assorted, which they sell at $9.50, and some of these sell retail at $2.50. Their price list on these goods shows a great variety of style and decoration. The list can be secured by dropping a card to 35 Front street west, Toronto. They also carry a full stock of pipes, tobaccos, cigars, and fancy goods of all descriptions.

A day or two ago a city traveller named J. A. Amyot, in the employ of David Latour, boot and shoe manufacturer, Montreal, came to the office and reported that he had sold goods to different parties to the value of $300, and at once drew his commission upon the sales. When the firm came to look to the delivery of the goods in question, the several alleged purchasers knew nothing whatever of the supposed sales, consequently Amyot was arrested for procuring money under false pretenses. He was brought before the police court and pleaded guilty to the charge. The unfortunate man said he was being pushed by his creditors and took the money to obtain relief, adding that he intended to refund the same thus dishonestly obtained.

The report of the trustees of the gratuity fund of the Toronto Board of Trade has been presented. During the past year one name has been added to the membership, making the total of subscribing members 851. There have been 44 transfers made this year, the average age of those relinquishing their interest being 43, and of the new participants 39. There have been 15 deaths during the year. The average age of those who died was fifty years. The amount on mortgagge is $52,250, invested on property appraised at $118,000. The amount in bonds is $23,000. The average rate of interest is a fraction over five per cent.

While speaking generally, the prospects for grapes in this vicinity are fairly good, although the fall will have to be open to ensure their ripening. A strange blight has struck some of the vines in the gardens in this town. The blight came on very suddenly—in fact, in a few hours. The young fruit at first has a wilted appearance, followed in a remarkably short time by a sort of mildew gathering thereon, eventually resulting in the bunch withering and becoming quite white. We do not know as to whether the disease is at all general, but we do know that some vines have got it bad.—Galt Reporter.

Controller of Customs Wallace has given a decision allowing hop-bitters ale to be admitted under section 547 of the Customs' Act—articles not elsewhere enumerated—at 20 per cent. duty. This is an English preparation said to be non-alcoholic, and intended to take the place of ordinary ale. It is said to be made with best English hops and cane sugar, and chemical analysis, it is claim of one per cent. of alcohol, so that it can scarcely be called an intoxicating drink.

Victoria's Board of Trade report counsels, amongst other matters, the establishment of a Provincial Board for the regulation of the inland fisheries, and calls upon the provincial press to depreciate and discourage a too prevalent tendency to gamble in paper town sites. The Board also advises municipalities to go somewhat slow in taking up debenture loans, lest they thus in interest exhaust too much of their ordinary income, and also warns public bodies to be very careful in the matter of guaranteeing industries established within their borders.

Post Office Clerk—"No address on this letter, miss."

Miss Simple—"Oh, yes, it's under the stamp."

Miss Etta Lambe, who was drowned at Toronto Island Tuesday last, was a sister of W. G. A. Lambe, the well-known broker of Wellington street east, and he has the sympathy of the trade in his trouble.

DRY GOODS.

MONTREAL MARKET.

The dry goods market has been generally quiet during the past week, but a fair aggregate trade is doing. Buyers generally manifest a conservative spirit, but the steady movement that is going on is all the more encouraging in view of that. Several of the houses report booking good orders for fall woollen fabrics, while summer goods have also been in request in a sorting way, a large number of light dress goods having been disposed of in the aggregate.

Mill agents say that the woollen mills are running full time on orders and have orders a long way ahead, so much so in fact that it is feared that some orders will not be delivered on time. The city retail trade has ruled quiet. Remittances are fair, and city collections show some improvement.

Mr. Fraser, of S. Greenshields, Son & Co., has got back from his holiday trip looking thoroughly rejuvenated.

Jas. Johnston & Co. are receiving some fine lines of fall trimmings this week, and in several cases are simply repacking and reshipping them.

Gault Bros. note a brisk demand for cashmeres in all the various shades known under the caption of Henry II. colors, running from light mauve to a dark purple, etc. If anything the brighter shades have the best of the percentage of sales.

S. Greenshields, Son & Co. will be receiving some extensive lines of fall goods next week.

Wm. Agnew & Co. are opening up this week several extensive lines of meline cloth in all the new shades; also lines of hop sacking in double width, of which they have been forwarding some good-sized orders.

Mr. Towers, of Mathews, Towers & Co., has returned from a western trip, and reports a satisfactory turnover of their fine lines of gents' furnishings. The firm are no longer handling cowboy hats.

The agent of a Paris house has enquired of an agent here what the prospect is for whipcords. The reply was unfavorable, and several of the trade express the same expectation.

TORONTO MARKET.

Strange as it may seem sorting orders are still remaining quite numerous, although the extent of the trade is not so voluminous as the number of orders might indicate. Few buyers have been on the market, but letter orders have been steady and numerous. Travellers have picked up a number of sorting orders of varying size and value. But all combine to maintain a trade, although there can be no doubt that the latter half of July and the first half of August is one of the quietest periods of the year.

Very little cutting is being done, outside of dress goods, in order to clear summer stocks. Some houses have found no occasion to reduce any prices. This is a gratifying feature.

Many buyers and proprietors are away on their summer holidays.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have gone in heavily for fancy flannel shirtings. Novelty of design and coloring characterize this purchase.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence are making a leader of a ladies' elastic ribbed woollen shaped vest with ribbon-trimmed neck. This can be retailed at 50c., and is certainly exceptional value.

Alexander & Anderson have been restocking linens, and their stock is now complete for fall. They are showing special value in cream table linens.

W. R. Brock & Co. have purchased the balance of the stock of Paris quilts in assorted colars. They bought these at a great reduction in price and are offering them at nearly 20 per cent. lower than previous close quotations.

John Macdonald & Co. are showing a full range in horse clothing in jute and all-wool, stripes and checks. A repeat of several numbers of elastic canvas is to hand, and also of two special numbers in bleached tabling.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence have a full stock of small wares in such lines as elastics, hooks and eyes, marking cotton, dress shields, etc. The first two lines are scarce at present.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have purchased a manufacturer's stock of black silk laces (fine mesh) at a discount that enables them to quote less than half ordinary price.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence are showing a novelty in ladies' wear in the shape of a nursing vest, which has two openings, one over each breast, and each opening has a protective flap. This is a very superior article and can be retailed at $1.

W. R. Brock & Co., have received the first shipment of 'Bargain' braces. This is the line which was referred to in a recent issue as having been cleared out from a manufacturer, and which could be retailed at 12½ to 15 cents per pair instead of 20 to 25, the latter being the regular price.

Hook and eyes have been stocked by John Macdonald & Co. These goods have been scarce lately. Dress trimmings in astrachan moss and silk are to hand in great variety. These include all the latest continental novelties in this class of goods.

Alexander & Anderson have now a heavy stock of tapestry, union, wool and hemp carpets. Every line has been replenished with the newest designs, and they claim that their prices are equal to any in the market.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling are opening up some magnificent lines in fancy flannels. These are all wool goods and in newest patterns. Some very new shades and designs in plain and twill flannelettes are shown. They have recently opened large shipments of linens. They show undoubted values in low grade dice and medium cream damasks. Their range of towellings is the largest they have ever shown. The grades are chosen with especial regard for both country and city trade.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have received another large shipment of their now famous satin quilt. They have all sizes in stock at present.

Alexander & Anderson are clearing the balance of their stock of summer parasols at reduced prices. A shipment of the latest novelties in dress trimmings, frogs, mantle and dress buttons are to hand.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence have now on hand a full range of colors in velveteens, also a full stock of blacks. All placed orders will be executed at once. They report fur and astrachan trimmings moving actively for the fall; also a lively movement in jet goods.

W. R. Brock & Co. have just received their fall stock of hemp carpets. The designs are better than last season and prices will be found suitable. This is the second season in which they have carried these goods. They have a line of pure Cape wool flannel that has been singularly successful for the better class of trade.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. report the necessity of cabling for black cashmeres. Though their purchases in this line were of considerable magnitude it is already evident that they will not meet the demand.

John Macdonald & Co. have just opened 20 cases of a low line of 43 inch colored henrietta. This is a line especially suitable for the fall trade, and the size of the shipment will enable them to give many retailers the benefit derived from handling it. Ten cases of silk surahs are also being opened up in plains and shot effects. These are all in new colors and notwithstanding the heavy advance in these goods, are shown at fairly low prices.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. are showing a large range of woollen shawls, and report unusually good results for the coming season. Tourists wraps for immediate use are finding ready sale.

Last week W. R. Brock & Co. enumerated in these columns a number of leading lines which they considered special value—plums to retail at 25c. They have also secured several startling lines which can be retailed at 50c., this being another popular price in the retail trade. Amongst these are the following: A line of ladies' natural wool vests, shaped pearl button front, ribbon trimmed neck, called "Ohmy," which is superior to any line that was in the market last season to retail at 75 cents; a line of ladies brushed merino vests and drawers called "Stunner," in two sizes, and two lines of wool knit gloves for men, Nos. N. 3 fancy and B.B. solid black. In the men's furnish-ng department they have also large ranges f ties, which are choice goods and specially elected.

John Macdonald & Co., are still selling he famous Belwarp serges and worsted oatings. Their numbers are all complete ow, and any merchant who has not yet inpected these goods should arrange to do so. They are made only from specially prepared arns of selected pure wool, absolutely free rom shoddy, and they have all the wearing ualities of the "good old times." Every ard of genuine cloth is stamped on the ack.

FOOD PRICES IN EUROPEAN CITIES.

A commercial return has just been issued, ays an exchange, showing the average reail price per pound avoirdupois of various rticles of domestic consumption, medium ualities, in some of the principal cities of Europe during the year. The cities selected re: Paris, Lille, Berlin, Frankfort-on-the-Main, Hamburg, Vienna, Buda-Pesth, Prague, Rome, Florence, and Brussels. The prices of prime beef varied very much. In Prague it could be obtained for 7d. a pound; n Vienna, for 8d.; in Rome and Buda-Pesth, for 8½d.; while in Paris the price fluctuated between 1s. and 1s. 4d.; and in Lille as much as 1s. 5⅜d. had to be paid. Flour ranged from 1 1-10d.; in Buda-Pesth, to 2½d.; in Paris, Frankfort and Florence, it is curious to notice that, while in Lille flour can be purchased for 2¼d. a pound, and white household bread cost 1¾d. in Berlin; this was exactly reversed, bread costing 2¼d., and flour being ½d. cheaper. Potatoes were under 1d. a pound in all the cities except Hamburg. Rice ranged from 1¾d. (in Brussels) to 5d.; sugar, good white lump, cracked or sawed, from 3¾d. to 7½d. (in Rome and Florence), and coffee (Brazil or plantation, roasted and ground, without chicory or other coffee substitute), from 1s. 1¾d. in Berlin to 2s. 6d. (fresh roasted) in Paris. In Brussels, coffee from Dutch colonies can be obtained for 1s. 2⅔d. a pound.

NEW CROP VALENCIA RAISINS.

In less than three weeks time the first of the new crop Valencia raisins will have started on the voyage to this port. The proportions of the first shipment is at present a matter of some doubt, and whether the invoice loaded will consist largely of consigned goods, or actual orders, is also a question which at this time is rather difficult to decide. Those who are usually looked upon as importers are this year somewhat in doubt as to the course that should be pursued in reference to early importations. The past year, taken as a whole, has been an unprofitable one, and the unremunerative prices realized during the greater portion of the time since first receipts last year are fresh in the minds of the leading operators, hence the hesitance to plunge with the opening talk of new crop this season. There is usually more or less ambition shown among importers to be included in the list of owners of the first cargo leaving Denia, the same being recognized as a good business card from the fact that upon the arrival of the vessel the importer is prepared to offer his customers a line of new fruit, thus paving the way for obtaining additional favors, orders for new crop being accompanied as a rule by memorana including other lines. This spirit of competition, however, does not appear to be present this year. The trade and financial results of the past twelve months have borne with depressing influence upon importers generally, and their feelings to-day are certainly of a subdued character. First steamer shipments have offered in one or two instances at 24s. c. and f. for layer, and 19s. for off-stalk, but as similar prices were asked and obtained at the opening last year, importers now consider circumstances as such that to meet these figures would only serve to invite losses, an experience which the majority have had an abundance, and are now desirous of carefully avoiding if such is possible. Other shippers in Spain, unwilling to contract for first steamer, are in the field seeking orders for all August, a contract term which might mean second or third boat, the goods being placed aboard in August, with bill of lading showing date, and the sailing not actually occurring until September has been entered upon. For such shipment 21s. 6d. c. & f. for layer, and 17s. 6d. for off-stalk has been quoted, but so far as we are able to learn no considerable orders have gone out, importers here when interviewed upon the subject expressing a determination to go slow, and feel their way cautiously until they are satisfied that there is some show or possibility of turning purchases at a profit. The next contract term to follow is first half September shipment, but upon this period there is a singular absence of information, packers abroad not having cabled prices at which they are prepared to accept orders, while on the other hand local importers do not appear at all disturbed by the fact that the fruit is not offered for the period referred to. To judge from appearances there is not likely to be any rush to obtain first, or even early, shipments of new fruit this year. The prices cabled thus far are not in accordance with buyers' ideas as to cheapness.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

SMUGGLING TOBACCO.

The United States customs officers are watching Montreal closely, as they suspect an extensive system of smuggling. Tobacco rated as first-class, with a duty of $2 a pound, is passed through as second-class tobacco, with a duty of only 35 cents. To-day a very large seizure of this tobacco was made in Philadelphia. It was undervalued at that point and had been classifies as second-class at Ogdensburg. Recently six bales of Sumatra tobacco for wrappers, certified to be for Consul-General Knapp of this city, were entered at the port of Ogdensburg, N.Y., as four bales of Sumatra leaf tobacco not fit for wrappers and two bales fit for wrappers. This change in the invoice was not challenged until it reached the examiner. He altered it to one bale unfit for wrappers and five bales fit for wrappers. The consignees thereupon took only the one bale, paying duty at 35 cents per pound, and returned the other five, on which a duty of $2 a pound was asked. Mr. Knapp says the invoice could not be changed without fraud. Ogdensburg is suspected to be the door through which the smuggling goes on.—Montreal correspondent Globe.

John Ballantyne, general merchant, Havreaux-Maisons, has assigned. H. O. Fortier, in the same line of business at Sherbrooke, has followed his example.

The crockery firm of Charles & Bawden of Kingston has assigned to a Kingston firm. The liabilities are about $2,000, the assets about $3,000. The firm was endeavoring to obtain a compromise, when some of the creditors secured a judgment, with the foregoing results.

The inspectors appointed by the creditors of Thompson Bros., the insolvent cheese manufacturers of Kingston, to examine the assets, report that the supposed discrepancies in their accounts do not exist, but that their failure and present liabilities have been brought about by heavy losses incurred in the purchase of sale cheese, butter, hogs, and grain and other produce over which they had no control, and that no transaction of any kind has been attended by any act of dishonesty upon the part of the firm. They recommend that the creditors accept a compromise of 20 cents on the dollar, net cash, and 5 cents on the dollar payable in six months by unsecured note. They make this recommendation owing to the nature of the assets and the fact of their being scattered over three provinces, which would entail a large expense in winding up the estate. The following is a short statement of the assets and liabilities : Assets in Manitoba, consisting of real estate and farming implements, $22,346.10 ; in Ontario, consisting of real estate and interest in cheese faotories, $8,829.75 ; in Quebec, consisting of saw mill and stock, store and stock, and interest in cheese factories, $12.72.75 ; total, $43,548.60. Liabilities, lease, mortgages and secured claims, $14,440; balance, $29,108.60. Unsecured claims about $75,000.

PROMPT CLOSING.

Recently we stepped from the elevated station at West Twenty-third street at a minute or two before 6 o'clock in the evening. Having occasion to purchase some linen, we went to a prominent sixth avenue store, arriving at sharp 6. The door was being closed and we were denied admittance. By 6.07 p.m. we had passed through West Twenty-third street to Broadway, and found every retail store closed and iron gates shut. We discovered that in the greatest shopping district in New York the rule of closing at 6 p.m. is carried out with military precision. It makes no difference how many customers are at the door, the rule is enforced. Within a few minutes after the closing hour the employees leave the place, and all is as quiet as on a Sabbath.

This teaches that retail grocers can, if they will, enforce an early and universal closing at a fixed hour. The patrons of city stores are quick to learn and respect the rules. There is no legitimate excuse for retail grocers working from fourteen to sixteen hours every day. People can be taught to buy their food, as well as their dry goods, within limited hours.—American Grocer.

The consumption of coffee in Europe and in the United States has been on the whole remarkably steady during the past couple of years. This is evidenced by recent reports. For the year ending June 30 last the United States and Europe combined consumed 10,946,228 bags against 10,804,551 the previous year. Of these totals the latter took 6,547,679 bags in 1893 and 6,392,719 bags in 1892, and the former 4,398,549 bags in 1893 and 4,411,832 bags in 1892. According to these figures the deliveries in Europe were 154,960 bags larger in 1893 than in 1892, while in the United States they were 13,283 bags smaller. In tons the aggregated deliveries in these two consuming centres of the world for the year ending June 30 last were 647,000, while the average for the four years ending Dec. 31, 1892, were 651,384 tons. "It is fair," with these figures as a basis," says the American Grocer, to whom we are indebted for the figures. "to estimate that the world requires an annual supply of 650,000 to 660,000 tons (11,050,000 to 11,220,000 bags),and until the production exceeds this quantity there is not much chance of a return to the low prices of 1886." That the total consumption should be larger in 1893 than in 1892 is somewhat a matter for surprise when the fact is taken into consideration that during the one high prices ruled and during the other the opposite was largely the case.

The receipts of coffee at Rio and Santos, the two great distributing ports in Brazil, were 6,202,000 bags for the year ending June 30 last, compared with 7,397,000 bags the year before. Notwithstanding this decrease of 1,195,000 bags, the crop was rather above the average—6,008,800 bags—of the past five years. A decrease is also exhibited in the exports from the two ports referred to compared with 1892, but here too the total was above the average of the previous five years by some 275,000 bags.

Brazil produces about 54½ per cent. of the world's supply of coffee, but, how long she will be able to maintain that position is a query. The coffee lands are gradually getting farther away from the shipping ports. This, under any system of transportation would be undesirable, but in Brazil, where the old pack mule is the chief means of bringing the coffee down to the coast, it is all the more so. The longer the journey means not only increased cost of transportation, but also greater liability to damage by exposure. This latter is said to be sometimes no unimportant matter. In fact to it has been attributed, to some extent at least, the scarcity of first class grades of Rio coffee.

The financial situation in the United States shows some signs of an improvement; and it is to be hoped that they will be permanent. While we in Canada are not directly interested we are indirectly so, just as when misfortune strikes one neighbor the sympathies of the other are aroused, particularly if they also have business relationship with each other, as happens to be the case with Canada and the United States. The tonics which are bringing about the healthier conditions are the expectation of the repeal of the silver law and the turn America-wards of the gold tide. President Cleveland is determined upon the unconditional repeal of the silver law. He has placed himself on record to that effect. And while this may delay the repeal in the first instance it is scarcely likely that any time will in the long run be lost. In any case the free silver men will make a long and a bitter fight, and they would be hardly less willing to accept a compromise that did not give them at least nearly as much as was taken from them than they would be to give up all. With public opinion as it is it is evident that Congress dare throw no sop to the free silver men that will be large enough to mollify them. Under such circumstances the wisest thing to do is to adopt the plan of campaign mapped out by President Cleveland. If the advocates of repeal should perchance not succeed, the last condition of affairs in the United States would be worse than the first. It was when the President called for a special session of Congress for August 7 that public confidence began to be restored. If the object for which it is called is not attained that little confidence will sink lower in the financial horizon than ever before. And what that means is obvious. The duty of Congress is to unconditionally repeal the silver law. After that if anything reasonable can be done for the silver men well and good. But until concerted international action is taken the United States cannot do much for either the silver miners or for restoring silver to the place it once occupied as a factor in the currency.

Confidence is one of the most important essentials in the commercial world. As the keel is to the vessel so is confidence to trade. Remove the one or the other and over will go either vessel or trade at the first blast. There have been many instances of this in the United States during the last few months. When the whirlwind that had its origin in unwise silver legislation began to sweep across that country, menacing credit and trade, the nation became alarmed. Some even more so than the conditions warranted. When people lose their heads they are little fit for anything, particularly business, and at the cry of "wolf" will run without stopping to see whether there is a wolf or not. Possessed by this fear the people in some of the Western States have been making runs upon and bearing to the ground banks that, in many instances, were sound. Although some of these banks are resuming business again, much of the injury that has resulted from the runs consequent upon a lack of confidence is irreparable.

We cover the ground from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and have double the circulation of any other journal in Canada.

Individual merchants as well as people in general can glean lessons from the recent runs on banks in the Western States. To succeed in business a man must have courage. Obstacles surround him on every side. He can not get around them. He has either to surmount them or run away from them. Some choose the latter course. The mole hill they magnify into a mountain and, throwing up their hands in despair they run from it. Their mole hills are sometimes in the shape of accounts falling due, and then in despair, some merchants throw themselves into the arms of an assignee or flee pell-well the country, when infrequently there is no reason for any such action. Instances of this are continually occurring, one only a few weeks ago. In this particular instance the frightened one was a large flour dealer, who, because the markets had gone against him and trade was dull, he, in a moment of weakness, assigned. When his affairs were investigated experts failed to discover any reason why he should have assigned and when the hour set for the meeting of the creditors arrived the insolvent and the assignee were the only ones to put in an appearance. What the business man of to-day wants is a foundation made up of experience, capital, tenacity and continuity. With a foundation such as that confidence will not be wanting when demands are made upon it.

It is often not till after their discontinuance is found to be unprofitable that dishonest practices are discontinued. When there were not so many competitors for the European wheat market the exporter was not so particular as he now is about fraudulently mixing different grades with dishonest intent. And when China produced the world's supply of tea she fell into habits dishonest as well as habits careless. Now, as a result partly of the latter and partly because of competition for the consuming markets, she is awakening to the necessity of mending her ways. One of the ways in which she proposes to do so is in regard to the manufacture of what is significantly known as "Lie tea." This tea, it seems, is not made from the genuine leaf, and to this fact is due much of the loss of prestige of China tea. Now that China has fallen back to third place among the tea producers of the world the Government of that country has come to the conclusion that it is time for it to be up and doing something; and one of the ways in which it proposes to do something is by prohibiting the manufacture, sale and purchase of "Lie tea." An edict to this effect has gone forth, and the punishment promised for disobedience is imprisonment for life.

A woman was the other day convicted in London, England, of fraud. In the evidence it came out that she was employed by a manufacturer at wages that were not enough to keep body and soul together. It was to keep the two from going assunder that led her to defraud her employer. An English trade paper in commenting on the same remarked: "However he (the employer) may be blamed this man must not stand alone. To the full the purchasers must share the blame." This line of argument, to our mind, has little or no legs upon which to stand. No man, whether he be saint or sinner, preacher or layman, wholesaler or retailer, manufacturer or consumer, can be blamed if he buys a thing cheap as long as it has not been stolen. The price of an article is not determined by the whim of this or that purchaser. It is the law of supply and demand that is the great governor. If the manufacturers in any given article turn out more than the market can absorb the price will naturally fall, and so will the remuneration of the employee. The same results are obtained if, in the rush to get business, merchants undersell each other. If merchants and manufacturers cut and slash prices the consumer cannot be blamed if he takes advantage of it. To blame the purchaser because Jones the grocer, Brown the tailor, Smith the hardware man, or Johnson the boot and shoe dealer, sell their goods below cost and do not give their clerks sufficient remuneration is unreasonable. Most of the evils, such as inadequate profits, bad debts, etc., that beset business men are of their own making, and it is no use anyone trying to deny it.

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

"The apple crop north," said a traveler to me Saturday, "is a failure. I saw tree after tree that had not a single apple on it. Do you know I think there is money in dried apples. You can buy them at about 4c. and I believe that in the spring you will be able to 7c. for them. But you have got to hold them. That is the worst of it."

"Homer & Co. of Gravenhurst, and Rosseau are doing an exceptionally fine trade this season," remarked a commercial traveler who has just been up that way. "They are doing a particularly good business at their Rosseau store with the tourists on the different islands. Just now Muskoka is booming as far as the tourists' trade is concerned. By-the-bye, I noticed in the papers that W. Hanna & Co. of Port Carling, had been burned out. Well that is only partially true. The fire broke out in the rear of their establishment, and although it destroyed all the trees in their orchard and licked up their stables the store remained intact and business is as brisk as ever; and it is brisk. Yes they had a pretty close shave, closer than they want again you can bet."

"It's peculiar the excuses that are advanced by some grocers why they cannot close early," said a man to me the other day who is an advocate of early closing. "I heard of one the other day that I'll have to tell you about. A man was carrying a petition up Dundas street the other day asking the storekeepers to close that afternoon. When he went into one grocery store the proprietor replied: 'No, I can't. Look at all those goods there on the floor that I have got to deliver, and I'm short-handed too.' The man carrying the petition then went across the street to get a butcher to sign it, and to him he related the grocers' excuse. 'Just wait,' said the butcher with a laugh. 'In a little while you'll see him put them goods in his waggon and deliver them—at his own back door.' The man waited, and sure enough the grocer did as the butcher said he would."

"Yes, no doubt there is more prejudice against white salmon than there really should be," said a wholesaler to me. "And still I don't know that we could expect much other. Why? Well you see it is like this: There has been a good deal of fraud practiced in regard to white salmon by people putting up as white salmon fish that are not white salmon. I can't for the moment think of the name of the fish. For red salmon they cannot substitute any other fish, and this is a good deal the reason why people have more confidence in red salmon. You know white salmon is all right. As a matter of fact the salmon that come from the Lower Provinces are white, and they are excellent fish you know."

BYSTANDER.

HOLIDAYING RETAIL GROCERS.

The members of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association and their friends held an excursion to Niagara Falls on Wednesday. Most of the party went over on the first boat, but a good many followed on the 9, 11 and 2 o'clock boats.

All told there were probably eight hundred or more in the party, and I made one of the number.

No class of men stick so closely to business as retail grocers; and no class of men give themselves more up to pleasure when they are out than do they. But then I suppose that is natural. Chain up your dog for a week or so. Then one bright summer's day let him loose and take him into the country; not into your neighbor's garden on any account, for that dog will bark and yell, frisk and tear, roll and scratch in a manner that would be allowable only in a ten-acre field after the kine and the horses had shorn it of the succulent grass and the purpose of the farmer was to give it a treatment of ploughshare and harrows. Of course the grocer does not bark, frisk and tear up the grass like a dog when he is picnicking. But as far as extracting pleasure from moments of freedom is concerned, the grocer is unsurpassed by the the canine or in fact anything "on God's green earth," as an old friend of mine used to say, when he wished to be expressive. And that is why I like to be with the retail grocers of Toronto—or of any other city for that matter—when they have one of their periodical worshipping days at the shrine of pleasure. I don't think it can be for any other season, for I am neither a grocer nor the son of a grocer. True I might have inherited the peculiarity from an ancestor of the second or third generation back who did, so I've been told, dabble a little in teas. And then I must not forget that when I was a frisky seven-year-old I used to steal over to the corner grocery and make up cornucopias for lolly-pops. But then I don't think it was that made me like the company of grocers, for it was seldom that I got any reward for my industry. That specie of grocer I have found to be the exception, not the rule. If it was the opposite there would be no good times at grocers' picnics like we had Wednesday. Mean men can't enjoy themselves.

On the trip up the electric railway from Queenston to the Falls those of us who were on the first three or four cars were treated to something besides glimpses of the unsurpassing scenery with which the route abounds. We had about climbed the heights, and were almost under the shadow of Brock's monument when the power proved unequal to the task of taking us to the table land above. And there we lay with a most delightful piece of scenery stretching away toward Lake Ontario at our feet. In our car was Frank Gallow, and mounting the front platform he for a time entertained us by describing in eloquent terms the surrounding scenery. Then he requested a photographer who was on board to take a snap shot at us, but he excused himself on the ground that good pictures were not obtained from faces upon which patience was so strongly depicted. And so my hopes of being "took" were short lived. Just then somebody suggested that two brindle cows which were working their way through the undergrowth on the hill-side below be harnessed to the car. Somebody else seconded, and we all agreed. But how to get them over or through the barbed-wire fence was the query. And while we were each suggesting ways and means the bovines vanished in the shrubbery. Fortunately, however, at that moment the fellow at the power house put more grease to his elbow and we moved off, but oh, so slow. On the table land it was all right, and we went like the wind; that is as fast as a fifteen or twenty mile breeze. And we all forgot our delay in the thousand and one things that attracted our attention and our admiration. My "better half" whispered in my ear: "Quite a different expression on their faces now, isn't there?" I said "Yes." I always give the kind of answer she wants, but this time the answer she desired was the one I was pleased to give. There was a change indeed.

The Falls were looking their prettiest, and the occasional fleecy cloud that would throw its shadow over them only made them look all the more beautiful afterwards. The arrangements made by the managing committee were admirable, and the pleasures of many an excursionist were greater and their pockets heavier afterwards than they otherwise would have been but for this. The Highlanders' band, which accompanied the excursionists, was posted under the spreading branches of the park trees and dispensed a liberal supply of excellent music during the day.

Who were there? Well, really that is difficult to say. There were a good many retail grocers there that I did not expect to see, while all that I expected to see were there too. The grocers' clerks were there with their best girls, and the grocers were accompanied by their wives and families; and goodness knows some of them are pretty big. I mean the families. Then I noticed a pretty general turn out of the city travellers. Among those I came across were: Frank Gallow, president of the City Travellers' Association; Ben Dack, James Owen, Chas. Shields, J. Mortimer, T. Holman, Bob Woods and Findlay McDonald. The only wholesalers I saw were J. W. Lang and P. Larkin, although I guess about every house in the trade was represented and that well, too, in some way or other. Of wholesale commission men I saw James E. Baillie and John Hawley, Among the eight hundred were also scattered an odd butcher or so. And by-the-bye, I must not forget H. Wright, or that he said he was as pleased with the excursion as he was with the sales of Pettijohn's California breakfast foods.

About the success of the picnic there is no doubt. Everybody said so, and to these gentlemen forming the managing committee it is largely due: President Clark, Vice-President Gibson, Secretary Corrie, Treasurer McMillan, A. G. Booth, R. Mills, A. White, H. W. McCulloch, J. S. Bond, F. S. Roberts, W. J. Sykes, H. W. Marmion and A. G. Marmion. BYSTANDER.

HINTS FOR BOYS.

A gentleman advertised for a boy to assist him in his office, and nearly fifty applicants presented themselves before him. Out of the whole number he selected one and dismissed the rest. "I should like to know," said a friend, "on what ground you selected that boy without a single recommendation?" "You are mistaken," said the gentleman, "but he has a great many. He wiped his feet when he came in, and closed the door after him, showing that he was careful; gave up his seat to that lame old man, showing that he was kind and thoughtful; he took off his cap when he came in, answered my questions promptly and respectfully, showing that he was polite and gentlemanly; he picked up a book which I had purposely laid upon the floor, and replaced it on the table, while all the rest stepped over it or pushed it aside; and he waited quietly for his turn, instead of pushing or crowding, showing that he was honest and orderly. When I talked with him I noticed that his clothes were carefully brushed, his hair in nice order, and his teeth as white as milk; and when he wrote his name I noticed that his finger nails were clean, instead of being tipped with jet like that handsome little fellow's in the blue jacket. Don't you call these letters of recommendation? I do, and I would give more for what I can tell about a boy by using my eyes ten minutes than all the letters of recommendation he can give me.—Scientific American.

The Toronto Gity Travellers' Association have chartered the steamer Chippewa for a promenade concert on the night of August 21. The band of the Highland regiment has been secured for the occasion.

A despatch to the Empire says that the run of salmon in British Columbia has increased, and the pack promises to be the largest on record.

A DAY WITH LONDON GROCERS.

Whew! but we had a giddy time. Everybody that was anybody was at the annual picnic of the London Retail Grocers last week. I was there. Even now I lay awake at night thinking of it. The fun began at early morn and lasted till dewey eve. It started with a hip, hurrah, zest, spirit, and go that characterizes the London retail merchant. Nothing tended to mar the joyousness of the event. The elements smiled propitiously and the citizens lent an unstinted patronage. Business in all its branches was, to a great extent, suspended, in order that both employers and employees might take part in the general festivities. Fully 5,000 people congregated on the grounds and a more happy and good-natured assembly could not be readily imagined.

From the shady recollection which now dawns upon me I remember of landing in the market square at about ten o'clock a.m. The din, rush and bustle made by gaily decorated grocery wagons and their drivers preparing for the great procession was bewildering. All rushed around madly as if their life depended on their touching every point of the compass every two minutes. Finally, by the herculean efforts of the worthy president and vice-president, Mr. W. H. Ferguson and Mr. John Moule, the wagons and carriages formed up in procession. The Seventh band led, playing sweet music, and then came the decorated delivery wagons, with the cabs and carriages behind, in which were seated the men who made the picnic what it was. Every cab in the city was out; all were filled, and if there was a solitary grocery store unrepresented it would be difficult to recall it. The decorations of the delivery wagons were very gay and tasteful. Messrs. A. McCormick & Sons' waggon, drawn by two handsome mules, occupied the place of honor after the band. W. H. Ferguson's, the Queen's grocery, was conspicuous because of a large portrait of Her Majesty. "Sterling" soap had a big floral horse shoe over the horse's back. Sanborn's had a lot of boys and a big water-melon. Ald. John Moule had a four-in-hand that attracted much admiration. Lawrason's wonderful soap was represented by a gorgeously decked wagon in which a number of colored gentlemen made fun for the crowd. Fitzgerald's wagon was topped with "Little Billee," a pretty live figure that invited everyone to "come out and spend the day with Willum." Piper Geo. Angus occupied a prominent place in the procession. W. J. Reid & Co. had a fine display of wares from their annex store. McLeod's Branton's, T. A. Rowat, Wilson & Ranahan's C. J. Wall's, Shea's McCutcheon's, R. A. Jones, Harley's, The Bee Hive, and Shoebotham & Corrigan, all were represented with handsomely decorated wagons.

The prize for the best decorated wagon fell to A, McCormick & Sons, James Annett's second, William Ferguson's third, Frank Harley's fourth, H. Branton's fifth and McLeod's sixth. The judges were Messrs. Thomas Gillean and John Fairgrieves.

After reaching the park the first thing on the programme was the baseball match, Wholesale vs. Retail, for a prize of $20, which was won by the retailers by one run. I think I hear them arguing that ball game yet. The wholesalers say the retailers cannot play ball a little bit, and the retailers claim they can knock the tar from out the wholesalers any time. However, they both play well.

By the time the baseball match was ended the grand stand had filled up, and the games commenced. The games and races were very efficiently managed by the committee, Messrs. W. H. Ferguson, C. J. Wall, John Moule, Vanston, D. Mackenzie, John Fairgrieves, T. Gillean, Frank Barnard, Jessie Symmonds and others. A good word must be said for the prizes offered. They were valuable, and of excellent quality, running up to $5, $6, $10, and even $12 to the winner in the principal events. Here are the results of the different contests:

Young men's race, 18 years of age and under, open to grocers' sons and employees—J. Gibbons, 1; W. Munn, 2; John Connor, 3.

Fat men's race, 200 lbs. or over to qualify—J. C. Trebilcock, 1; R. Woods, 2; E. McCormick, 3.

Bicycle race, one mile—H. K. McCormick, 1; E. Ramsay, 2; Ed. Russell, 3. Time, 3.42.

200 yard flat race—A. B. Caswell, 1; C. E. Caswell, 2.

Young ladies' race, 18 years and over—Miss Carrie Grieves, 1; Miss Chantler, 2.

Horse race for grocers' horses, walk half a mile, trot half a mile, and go as you please half a mile. Annett's Lamplighter won the race by fast walking in the first half, getting so far ahead of the others that they could not come near him when they got a chance to trot. Wood's Dollie B. and Annett's Telephone Girl had a nice race for second place, which fell to Woods.

The wheelbarrow race, 100 yards and return, passenger and driver changing at the turn, was a laughable contest. Bockers and Jennings, 1; Caswell Bros., 2; Bennett and Alteman, 3.

Sack race—B. Lewis, 1; R. Gould, 2; M. Tierney, 3.

Running race, half mile heats, best 2 in 3—Murphy's colt, 11; Ranahan's Nettie, 22; Murphy's Nettie, 33. Time, 1.30, 1 28 1-2.

Trotting race, mile heats, best 2 in 3—Turville's Charley, 11; Annett's Telephone Girl, 322; B. Wood's Jack, 233. Annett's won the last heat from Wood's and second prize. Time, 3.12, 3.11, 3.14.

Leap frog race—Griffith and Lea, 1; Moore and Ranahan, 2; Lewis and McCormick, 3.

Committeemen's race—R. Woods, 1; C. J. Wall, 2; —. Ranahan, 3.

Race for drivers of delivery wagons—B. Lewis, 1; R. Maxwell, 2; James Baskerville, 3.

Sailor's hornpipe and sword dance—Hugh Galbraith, 1; Edith Patton, 2; Geo. May, 3.

Butcher boys' race, in costume, one mile dash—The first and second horses were Mitcheltree's and the third Murphy's.

Bicycle race, handicap—Glover, 1; Bennett, 2; Manville, 3.

Boot and shoe race, where the runners had to stop at 50 yards and take off their boots, and on returning put them on again—Caswell, 1; Leys, 2; Tierney, 3.

Married clerks' race—Henry Ranahan, 1; T. Hurley, 2; J. Rolston, 3.

Cigar race, in which the runners had to take off and put on their coats and vests and light a cigar—E. Alteman, 1; William Bennett, 2; A. B. Caswell, 3.

Egg and spoon race, in which the contestants had to carry a spoon in their mouths and balance an egg on it—Henry Brainton, 1; James Jupp, 2; C. E. Caswell, 3.

Obstacle race—H. Backus, 1; Allen Leys, 2; C. E. Caswell, 3.

Members' race—R. W. Rolston, 1; John Murphy, 2.

Menagerie race—Driving a chicken with a string around its leg. It was very funny. A big white rooster ran away ahead, then turned and ran back again, a slow old hen trotting in first. The race illustrated the contrariness of feathered bipeds. Branton took first, Ralston second and Leys third.

The reporters' race fell to a fleet-footed correspondent of Ayer's Almanac. A gentleman who writes shorthand with a coupling-pin came second, but he was ruled out in favor of a handpress kicker, who got second prize.

The eating match made the people shriek with laughter. Slices of bread dangling on the ends of strings were attacked by the boys with hands tied behind them, and it took some of them five minutes to get a bite. Vic. Chamberlain got through first, Frank Stenson second, and W. Burrows third.

Little 4-year-old Susie McGill gave an exhibition dance for a special prize, and did very nicely.

Thus ended the great picnic. Everybody went away happy and satisfied, myself among them. One thing I admired about the London trade is the manner in which they pull together. All seem intent upon helping each other. I have to thank the managing committee for their courtesy and attentions, particularly the president, Mr. Fergusson, who is a whole-souled, genial gentleman, proud of his Irish ancestory, and proud to proclaim Canada his home. "My boy," he says to me, "Canada is the greatest country under the sun," and I believed him.

John Moule was happy the whole day long, and tried to make everyone else so. The only thing that Mr. William Horner regretted was that he was too fat to run in the fat man's race. Mr. A. MacCormick, one of the oldest grocers in London, and past-president of the association, kept his eye open to see that everything was going right, and the secretary, E. Sutton, has a life job if he will only keep it.

THE HUSTLER.

THE REWARDS OF INDUSTRY AND ECONOMY.

Circumstances may to some extent assist or retard the progress of the individual along the road that leads to wealth and influence, but it is entirely a question of personal character as to whether success is ultimately attained or not. Luck cuts no figure in the problem, and the sooner the young aspirant for business honors disabuses his mind of the notion that success is dependent upon luck, the sooner will he rise above his present position. "If only I had So-and-So's luck," is an exclamation often uttered by young men, who lack everything perhaps that is requisite to success except ambition and good health. With the most favorable circumstances this class of young men would miss their aims, because they either do not know how to proceed, or are incapable of the sacrifice of ease or comfort, and therefore allow whatever ambition they possess to exhale itself in sighs and plaints. The instances of remarkable material success attained by men with very unpromising beginnings, are sufficiently numerous, one would suppose, to convince doubting Thomases that success in business is dependent upon one's own exertions. Perhaps a good many young men in subordinate positions are well aware of this truth, yet imagine that no special effort save economical living is demanded of them until they have succeeded in entering business on their own account. This is as gross a delusion as the notion that luck is a factor in the problem of how to achieve success. The individual who has never distinguished himself by faithful and assiduous devotion to duty, as an assistant in the store would hardly make a shining success of the business if it should ever pass into his own hands. A habit of hard work must be formed, skill acquired by close attention to the business, and sound business principles instilled, if the clerk is ever to be worth his salt as a merchant. The clerkship period is the period for the formation of character, provided the individual enters upon his duties immediately after leaving school, and is, therefore, the most critical time in the future merchant's life. Slothful or dissipated habits formed then may be impossible to ever shake off. Unfaithful conduct to one's employer may sap the integrity which should form no small item in the capital of the merchant that is to be—in fact, the injury inflicted on the interests of the employer is far less serious than that which the lazy, inefficient and faithless clerk suffers by his own acts.—Merchants' Review.

SUGAR CONSUMPTION.

It is a most remarkable fact that since 1880 sugar consumption has increased on this continent from forty-three pounds to sixty-nine pounds per capita. It is said that the amount of sugar consumed by a people is in direct ratio with their civilization. In view of this theory, it is interesting to observe that Italy, Turkey and Norway use eight pounds per capita yearly; Russia, Greece and Spain use ten pounds; Austria uses fifteen pounds; Germany and Sweden, twenty-three pounds; Holland, twenty-seven; France, twenty-nine pounds; Switzerland, twenty-three pounds; England, seventy-nine pounds.—The Sugar Bowl.

NEW PACK TOMATOES.

New pack canned tomatoes will be coming forward in moderate quantities during the next week or ten days. Some have already been received and dealt out to the retail trade at about $1.25 per dozen. After the middle of August there is likely to be a good supply from deliveries on "future" contracts made early in the season at a cost of about 90 to 95c. laid down here for standard 3-lb. goods. On Saturday some spot stock was offered at $1.15, and early future shipments at $1 in Baltimore, which would indicate that prices are gradually getting down to a normal level. That really cheap tomatoes can safely be calculated upon is, however, rather doubtful. In any event it is a well established fact that the new season opens with unprecedented light stocks in the hands of packers and jobbers, and to all accounts retailers have less than their usual quantity. Regarding the coming crops and the pack there is a great deal of uncertainty. The crop thus far is backward, but may ultimately afford sufficient supply for a good pack. Canners are inconvenienced somewhat by general financial conditions, but to what extent their operations may be restricted thereby is extremely problematical. The important fact remains, however, that not only the very heavy pack of last season, but a considerable "carryover" from previous seasons, to say nothing of stock brought from Europe, Canada, and the Pacific Coast, has been practically all used up. There is nothing to indicate that the consumption will be smaller during the next 12 months.—N.Y. Journal of Commerce.

TEMPERATURE AND CANNED FOODS.

Concerning the keeping qualities of canned foods when exposed to extremes of heat and cold, U.S. Adjutant-General Williams, in a recent army circular, published the following information:

"Apples, peaches, pears, rhubarb, green peas, green corn, onions, potatoes and tomatoes were all subject (at Lady Franklin Bay) to extreme temperatures (over 60 degrees below zero), and were solid for months at a time. The second summer they thawed, the following winter they froze solid again. All the articles named presented the same appearance as though freshly canned, and their flavor was as good when the last can was eaten as in the first month. It should be understood that these were first-class canned goods and from dealers of standing and reliability. Cranberry sauce, preserved damsons, preserved peaches, and fruit butters suffered certain changes from candying, etc., which detracted somewhat from their flavor, though not materially so. Dealers in such preserves predicted that such conditions and changes would occur. I had also canned turnips, squash, beets and carrots, as well as pineapples, cherries, grapes, clams, shrimps and crabs, which, although not subjected to such extreme temperature as the foregoing, yet froze and thawed repeatedly without injury. No can of any kind except a few, say half a dozen of fruit butters, was ever burst by action of cold or heat."

Dr. Simson Pratt of the British army says:

"Taking my experience in India and the late Nile expedition, in which the test of tinned provisions was exceptionally severe from continued exposure to the powerful direct rays of the sun, I have found that tinned provisions, meat and vegetables put up separately or combined in the form of soups, are practically undamageable by any climatic heat.

"The only class of provisions that, in my experience, suffers from great heat is that of uncooked articles, such as butter, cheese and some forms of potted meats."

A little boy once defined "salt" as the "stuff that makes potatoes taste bad when you don't put any of it on!" This delightful definition suggests that what not to do is as important a question in developing a success as the question of what to do, and suggests also that the negative qualities in a merchant's equipment may be as necessary to consider as his positive requirements, says The Keystone.

THE QUESTION OF TEA TARES.

DEAR GROCER,—When the truth is told fearlessly and abuses are exposed and brought to light sometimes it hurts persons, and makes them feel sore. I am pleased to know that my letters are not passed by unread; and there is at least one of your readers who notices them and deems it necessary to expose his ignorance in not knowing that some wholesale dealers are not infallible. He seems to lament the fact that they are found willing to acknowledge this, a virtue which your correspondent D. G. Whittaker evidently does not possess, and his views regarding journalistic etiquette must have originated somewhere in the backwoods, probably in the neighborhood of Elora or Hogshollow.

He admits that some grocers do not weigh their teas, a fact which my statements showed, and my warning to them therefore was a good one. I have much sympathy for a man or firm who may deceive and cheat his or their customers either by "dosing" a tea or in shipping a tea not according to sample shown, or in robbing a dealer of four lbs. tare on each package, or not allowing tares at all, because in so doing they are on the sure road to ruin.

I have no desire in vieing Mark Twain or his readers as a humorist, but facts are stubborn things, and if THE GROCER will promise to publish them, I will furnish enough evidence to verify my statements and the names and persons shall be vouched for, as they can be seen in business, and their names found in the city directory, and are known to be genuine and not counterfeits, unlike your correspondent's name, which cannot be found either in business nor in the city directory. I did not claim to give two pounds more tare on packages of tea than anybody else—excepting those who rob their customers—but I am proud to say that the firm which I represent gives to their customers just and proper tares at all times and in all cases, and my former statements showed this to be true.

Regarding the latter portion of your correspondent's remarks, where he tries to cover up his own baseness in altering the meaning of my remarks to suit his own iniquitous desires, let me state that I did not accuse young men of "getting ahead of their customers," but I drew attention to those persons calling themselves "tea experts" and "brokers" and those "wholesale grocers" who practice such deceptions, that they should set a better example before their employees than cheating in weights, and in giving short tares and dosing teas with foreign matter that no less an amount than $8 was demanded and had to be allowed on one package of Indian tea, it having being "dosed" to that extent.

If any errors of mine in life (for there have been many) will prove to be a warning to others in leading them from indulging in wrong doing, I shall not lament the fact on their part, but I shall feel thankful—not for my errors—but that I had courage and manhood enough to quit foolishness and turn from error and folly in learning to do good, realizing my individual responsibility for all my acts, and I am accountable to none but to Him who seeth and knoweth all things and who demandeth restitution to be made by man to man as far as in him lies. I am proud of the name which my parents gave me, and I have no desire with all its ugliness to dishonor them by changing or bartering it away for a spurious nom-de-plume. Shakespeare says, "He that steals my purse steals trash, but he that robs me of my good name enricheth not himself but maketh me poor indeed." How much poorer then, is a man when he stoops to rob himself and belies the name of his father who gave it him.

Respectfully yours,
STEPHEN HUSTWITT,
46 Front street east.

Toronto, July 22, 1893.

TARIFF CHANGES.

The Customs Department has decided that brass pumps, whether hand or stationary, are dutiable at the rate of 35 per cent. Hitherto there has been a lack of uniformity.

The attention of the Customs Department has been called to the practice which obtains at some ports in the case of goods of small value imported by express, of ignoring for the purposes of duty any parcel of a less value than fifty cents, and of charging duty on a value of one dollar upon all parcels of a value of fifty cents or over. This practice not being sanctioned by law, collectors have been instructed that for the future all parcels coming by mail or express must be entered at the exact cost to the importers for the same, and duty must be collected on such fractional parts of a dollar in each case.

WHEN TO BUY.

This question is a matter hard to determine. When in need of goods, necessity compels buying at once, but if prices are not known to be right, the quantity bought may be regulated to present needs. We have known dealers to buy goods in July for September delivery, and have awakened to the fact that a good profit had been lost by buying too soon, and again we have known times when July prices could not be duplicated in September. While considerable reliance may be placed upon the representation of an honorable salesman, as to the probable advance or decline in prices, yet, generally speaking, the best results come from the merchant's own careful consideration and conclusions. Before it is necessary for him to buy in quantity it is advisable to ask different houses for discounts, or best net prices, upon the receipt of which he will know how to intelligently handle the quotations given him by the salesman. However, better prices from the house than the salesman can quote are a rarity. He not only knows the lowest margin his house will accept, but is thoroughly posted on the prices of his competitors. As a rule, it is safe to place your order in his care, and it should be attended to at a time in advance of actual need as will admit of some little delay, without creating the annoyances and vexations incident to hurried orders when the trade is on.—L. S. Bonbrake, in Business.

HINTS FOR SAUSAGE MAKERS.

The best way to color polonies is to fill a large tub with boiling water, to every 10 gallons of which should be added 1 ounce of camwood extract. The polonies should be placed in this coloring immediately after being removed from the boiler. Half a minute will be found sufficient to color them thoroughly. They should be well stirred round with a stick during their immersion in the coloring matter, and on being removed should be spread out on clean straw to dry.

Polony Seasoning No. 1.—4 lbs. best ground white pepper, 6 ozs. ground mace, 8 ozs. ground coriander, 4 ozs. cayenne, 10 lbs. salt. To be well mixed.

No. 2.—2 lbs. ground white pepper, 3 ozs., cayenne, 8 ozs. ground Jamaica mace, 2 ozs. cinnamon, 3 ozs. ground ginger, 6 lbs. salt. To be well mixed.

No. 3.—3 lbs, ground white pepper, 3 ozs. ground mace, 3 ozs. cayenne, 7 lbs. salt. To be well mixed.

No. 4.—6 lbs. ground white pepper, 12 ozs. ground coriander, 8 ozs. ground Jamaica ginger, 2 ozs. ground cloves, 8 ozs. cayenne, 14 lbs. salt. To be well mixed.

No. 5.—2 lbs. ground white pepper, 3 ozs. ground mace, 1½ ozs. ground nutmeg, 1 oz. ground cloves, 1 oz. cayenne, 5 lbs. salt. To be well mixed.

It is to every maker's interest to use nothing but the best camwood extract for the coloring of polonies, as it keeps its color for a considerable time, whereas all substitutes invariably turn the article almost black in the course of a few hours.—National Provisioner.

S. S. Warrimoo, of the Canadian-Australian line, sailed for Sydney via Honolulu and Brisbane last night. Some hours before sailing every available inch of cargo room was filled up, and she had to refuse a quantity of lumber and other freight. She has in all over 1,000 tons aboard, the cargo for the different ports consisting of the following: For Honolulu—50 tons coal, 500 bbls lime, 600 bundles shingles, and a quantity of lumber; for Brisbane—600 bundles shingles, 4 tons dried salmon; for Sydney—4 carloads of agricultural implements, 100,000 feet of lumber, 250,000 laths, 6 tons of dried salmon, and between 50 and 60 tons of general merchandise. The cold storage chamber is filled with salmon. She will also take on at Victoria 100 cases of salmon for Australia. Besides this she has a quantity of samples on board. She took 14 sacks of mail, and had 19 saloon and 9 steerage passengers.—News-Advertiser, Vancouver.

COD LIVER OIL FOR GROCERS.

THE GROCER has more than once of late urged the trade to pay more attention to patent medicines, at the same time urging that as much care should be exercised in selecting hem as in ordering a bill of goods that are more strictly speaking groceries. One article that the grocer or general merchant can handle with safety is a good brand of cod liver oil, such, for instance, as that which is now being put up by Stewart Munn & Co., of Montreal. It is known as "Munn's Genuine Cod Liver Oil," and is recommended by the highest medical authorities and druggists. Lyman Sons & Co., for instance, write: "We have pleasure in stating that your Frozen Process Cod Liver Oil has given good satisfactior to the trade generally throughout the country, and is estimated by many equal to the Norwegian oil. There is no sediment in the lots we have had, and it stands the cold test." The trade would do well to look into the matter.

WILL JAPAN TEA GO UP?

Despite the present dullness of tea in Montreal and elsewhere there are many dealers on that market who claim that it would not be surprising if higher instead of lower prices ruled in the near future. In the first place they point to the fact that the Canadian Pacific Company has advanced their rate of freight one-half cent on tea, which is bound to have its effect on the spot prices in Montreal and elsewhere in Canada. In addition to this the rate of exchange, which has advanced 4d. in the last month, will also have to be calculated on in the case of sales at Montreal and other Canadian points. Besides these two facts, which they hold are influential enough in themselves to affect prices materially, advices from Japan do not seem to bear out the talk about low prices that has been going on. Circulars of the date of the first of July are to the effect that there has been an advance of from $1 to $2 per picul, while they add also that there has been considerable skirmishing around for tea. This fact Montreal importers hold is worthy of consideration, that is, those bullishly inclined, for, although a fair quantity of tea is coming here, the stock at present in Canada, they claim, is not anything like what it was at the same time last year. In fact, some of them place it all the way from 18,000 to 20,000 packages less than at the corresponding period last year. And, finally, owing to the peculiar monetary conditions south of the line, there has been no speculation in the U. S. at all. all the stock that has come in or is coming forward being on account of legitimate orders, which is another fact worthy of consideration in their opinion. All in all they make a pretty good case for themselves, and we outline it for what it is worth.

SAYS IT IS NOTHING NEW.

"Say, Bystander," writes a city drummer, "that city traveller you met last week who told you how disappointed and perplexed he was because a certain well to do grocer on Queen Street west did not keep his word in sampling teas as he had promised to do, but put him and others off until a more convenient season, must surely be a greenhorn or a newcomer to work the city. Why the "boys" could tell you that it was never known during the twenty years which that retailer has been in business for him to fulfil a promise which he made with travellers until he had kept them running—fore-and-aft—for about a week or more. Even then they get no satisfaction for the cause of the delay. But if sugar or fruits had advanced suddenly ¼ to ½c. per lb. quite unexpectedly, the telephone would be brought into play right off, asking the wholesale houses 'if your city traveller—Charley or Bob—was in. I want to see him about that sugar on those Valencia raisins which he was showing me yesterday.' The city is full of 'em, Bystander. Thank your lucky stars that you are not a city drummer."

PERSONAL MENTION.

Chas. Nairn, of Goderich, has returned from the World's Fair.

R. T. Macdonald, with Eby, Blain & Co., has again returned to duty after his holidays.

Captain Sloan of the Governor-General's Body Guard, has been promoted to the rank of major.

H. J. Irwin and —. Colwill, merchants, of Arthur, have started out on an extensive holiday trip.

W. Dallas, of New York, was in Toronto this week. He reports an improvement in the Japan tea-market.

Mr. Gladstone dined yesterday evening with Mr. Colman at Belgrave-mansions. —London, Eng., Daily News, July 20.

Joseph Kilgour, of Mount Forest, who has been making an extensive holiday tour, can again be found knuckling down to business.

H. P. Eckardt is enjoying the sea breezes at Ocean Grove. He will be away two weeks, and in his absence his sample room is being looked after by Charles Kyle.

J. F. Eby is again back to business after a sojourn on the upper lakes. His injured limb is much better, and Mr. Eby is now able to go about without the aid of crutches.

J. W. McCabe has bought out J. W. Fortheringham, of Palmerston. Mr. M. was burned out in Elora, then he purchased a bankrupt stock at Mitchell, which he subsequently sold out.

Alex. Colson, son of Mr. C. E. Colson, Montreal, is now visiting Ontario cities, taking for the first time the route his popular governor has gone over for the last thirty years. He has done much better than he expected. Speaking of pickles he says that notwithstanding the strong competition they have had this year, the sales of Crosse & Blackwell's goods increased fifty per cent. as compared with a year ago. This shows that Canadians are using larger quantities of imported goods each year.

J. Brownley, with Smith & Keighley, is taking his holidays. He will be away a couple of weeks, and will spend the most of his time in viewing the attractions at the "White City."

Peter Anderson, merchant, of Guelph, returned Friday last from Ottawa, where he has been attending the Oddfellows' convention. It was Mr. Anderson's first holiday for ten years, and he says he had a "high old time."

A POSTMASTER WHO TUMBLED.

It was in a far west village of about 500 people, and the postmaster was so bland and courteous when the mail came in that I felt it my duty to give him a few words of praise.

"I hev to do it, hev to do it," he whispered in reply. "Come to the door with me. D'ye see them three graves over thar?"

"Yes."

"Them's my predecessors in office—three of 'em!"

"Postmasters who hev died, eh?"

"'Postmasters who hev been killed, sir—wiped out right here because they didn't tumble to human natur' around a post office!"

"You must have a special brand of human nature in this town?" I queried.

"Exactly sir. Mebbe you noticed old Bill Wheeler? He's never got a letter in his life, and probably never will, but when he asks for mail I go over the hull grist, and do it mighty careful too. If I jest said, 'Nuthin' for you, Bill!' he'd out with a gun and blaze away. Did ye take notice of that one eyed feller—Jim Hastings? Of course I know thar ain't no letter fur him, but I hev to run 'em over and enquire about his health and keep him good natured. He shot the first postmaster here. P'raps you observed the little old woman with a bundle under her arm—John Dawson's wife? Her husband shot the second postmaster because he wouldn't open the office Sunday afternoon.

"And what was the third one shot for?"

"Got too high toned. Uncle Tom Wallace tried to get him out of bed at midnight to see if thar was a letter fur him, but he bucked. Uncle Tom kinder hated to shoot, but he felt that he orter do it fur an example."

"And do you get up nights?"

"I don't hev to. I leave the mail out here in a basket, keep a light burnin' and the door open, and if anyone wants to paw the grist over he's at liberty to do it. It's the same on Sundays, and I guess the folks are purty well satisfied with the way things is runnin'. Leastwise I hain't been shot at in the four months I-ve had the place, and I take that as a sign." M. QUAD.

The total of duties collected at the port of Toronto for the month of July, 1893, was $392,134.63. For the same month in 1892 the total was $398,830.50, showing a decrease of $6,695.81.

The cheese exhibit at the recent Winnipeg summer fair was regarded as excellent, especially in the Stilton variety. The very hot weather caused the show of butter to be rather small.

The store of Botkin & Co., at Delaware, was entered by burglars on Saturday night. Entrance was effected by means of a rear door, and the necessary tools were procured from a near-by carpenter shop. A hole was drilled in the safe, and about half a pound of powder placed therein, when it appears the burglars found the key and opened it without further trouble. About $15 in small change was all they got, and few articles were taken out of the shop.

The U. S. canned beef combine that was to be, has not materialized thus far. List prices for the various brands are unchanged, but special prices to favored customers are frequent enough to be at least suggestive.

The Carberry cheese factory has closed down for want of patronage. If Mr. Irish would move his plant in this direction we think he would not have to close his doors for want of sufficient milk.—Neepawa Register.

R. N. McDonald, H H. Banks, W. E. Bremner, Albert Lawlor, Wm. Wheatley, C. S. Lane, T. H. Francis, all merchants of Halifax, were fined the other day for obstructing the sidewalk with merchandise.

John Morrison, grocer, Bay and Main streets, Hamilton, cashed a $10 cheque signed Wm. A. Howell for a sleek-looking man last week. The cheque turned out to be a forgery, and the detectives are now looking for the sleek-looking man.

As considerable curiosity has been exhibited as to the meaning of the names of the two steamships of the Australian line, it may be stated that the Warrimoo means the Eagle and the Meowara the Emu, the two greatest and strongest Australian birds.

The Dominion Express Co., in alliance with the C. P. R. Pacific Steamship Co., has extended its connections to the Sandwich Islands and Australia. Canadians can now send express and freight over exclusively Canadian lines with the most rapid despatch to the furthest ends of the world.

An order-in-council has been passed amending order-in-council of June 26, respecting the importation of petroleum in tank cars, by adding to the list of places where petroleum may be so imported, the towns of Windsor and Gananoque in Ontario and Newcastle, N.B.

One thousand ladies and gentlemen spent Friday last at Wilson, N.Y., at the invitation of W. J. Forrestall, western agent of the Sterling Soap Co., St. John, N.B. The excursionists were taken over by the Garden City, and a pleasant day was spent. A band accompanied the party, and at Wilson both refreshments and amusements were provided in abundance. The excursion was free.

A consular report respecting the trade of the district of Antwerp states that the value of the fresh fruit alone sent to United Kingdom during the season may be put at over £100,000. The number of eggs exported to Great Britain may be calculated at over 218,000,000, of an estimated value of £680,000. It should be added that all these eggs are not laid by Antwerp hens. They are collected from a great many continental countries, and sent to this port for convenience of shipment. None the less, one cannot help thinking that these figures are a practical reproach to us for our backwardness and want of enterprise in the direction of poultry farming.

Bruce Davis, of St. Thomas, has this season shipped 80 carloads of potatoes. The total outlay has been $19,577, as follows: The potatoes cost $16,298; freight, $2,710; telegraphing, $210; railroad travel of 7,000 miles, $200; other traveling expenses, $159; total, $19,577. The lowest price paid during the season was 47½ cents per bag of 90 pounds, and the highest 95 cents per bag. The season for handling has been a remarkably good one until the last month.

There are now more than half a million almond-trees bearing in the United States; there are hundreds of thousands of bearing cocoanut trees; there are more than a quarter of a million olive-trees, producing fruit equal to the best Mediterranean varieties. There are more than half a million bearing banana-plants, 200,000 bearing lemon-trees 4,000,000 orange-trees, and 21,000,000 pine-apples. And the value of tropical and semi-tropical fruits grown under the American flag is nearly $20,000,000.

There is in the prison at Wilmington, Pa., a man called Louis Davis who is serving out a term of life imprisonment for murder; he has been seven years in jail, and has behaved himself so well that he is now permitted to sell cigars and tobacco to the rest of the prisoners, and goes down town to purchase his stores and returns alone. This is probably the most unique retailer of cigars and tobacco in the profession. He is locally recognized by the euphonious name of "stripes."—Tobacco.

Germany is the largest potato producing and consuming country in the world, with an average production of nearly 900,000,000 bushels per annum, and in years of large production exceeding 1,000,000,000 bushels, says an exchange. Russia comes next with a crop of 464,000,000 bushels, closely followed by Austria-Hungary and France. The crop of the United States is small in comparison with that of Europe, averaging only 170,000,000 bushels, which is considerably less than that of the United Kingdom.

The chief of the U. S. Bureau of Statistics in his statement of the exports and imports of gold and silver reports that the exports of gold from the United States during the twelve months ending June 30, 1893, amounted to $108,680,844, and the imports to $21,174,381; excess of exports, $87,506,463. During the corresponding period of the preceding year the exports were $50,195,327, and the imports $49,699,454; excess of exports, $495,873. The exports of silver during the twelve months ended June 30, 1893, were $40,737,319, and the imports $23,193,252; excess of exports, $17,544,067. During the corresponding period of the preceding year the exports were $32,810,359; and the imports were $19,995,086; excess of exports, $12,855,473. For the six months ended June 30, the exports of gold amounted to $73,717,938, an increase of $32,148,788 over the corresponding period of the preceding year. The imports were $11,759,043, an increase of $3,723,435.

"I have a great scheme to increase business," said the retired journalist to his new employer. "What is it?" asked the grocer, for such was the new employer's avocation. "We'll give a Jamaica ginger coupon with each watermelon."—Indianapolis Journal.

No matter how hard you try to drive it into the craniums of some business men, you can't make them believe that millions of dollars are invested annually in advertising. Here are a few facts and figures that can be easily verified: For instance, there is Harper's Magazine, which derives a yearly income of $350,000 from its advertising patrons in its twelve issues. Pears' Soap pays $9,000 a year for a single page in the Century. Enoch Morgan's Sons spend annually $300,000 to keep "Sapolio" before the public. As for John Wanamaker, it has long been known that he pays a man $10,000 a year only to write his advertisements. In 1888 no less than $110,000,000 went into newspaper advertising. Perhaps advertising does pay after all.—Ex.

We are in receipt of the following extract from letter dated June 6, 1893, from one of the largest butter shippers of Melbourne, Australia: "Our season is favorable both for supply and price prospects. To give you an idea, there is plenty of feed and the cows will not, as last year, get out of condition. There is also an increase in number. Milk in June, 1892, was 5¾d. per gallon, and butter selling at 1s. ⅛d., while to-day it is 3¾d, per gallon and butter selling at 1s.; so you can judge what it will be in September (our spring) when we begin to ship. Now according to the English 'Grocer,' the imports began early in November and ended in April. The total, 1892-3 was 246,735 boxes (56 lbs.); 1891-2, 151,761 boxes; 1890-1, 69,036 boxes; 1889-90, 51,460 boxes; so that this trade appears in its infancy, and owing to the mildness of our winter, is practically unlimited."

The British trade statistics for the first half of 1893 contain several matters of interest in the United States. The importation of wheat was almost exactly the same as in the first half of 1892, the increase being 364,393 hundredweight. The importation from the Atlantic States fell off more than a million hundredweight, and from the Pacific Coast it increased three million hundredweight, the total increase from the United States being 1,722,442 hundredweight. There was also an increase from a mere trifle to more than three million hundredweight from Russia, and an increase of nearly two million hundredweight from Argentina, and a small increase from Australasia. There was a decrease of 75 per cent. from the British East Indies, and material decreases from Chili, British North America and Turkey, Roumania and Egypt.

First Traveler—"What is your business?"

Second Traveler (haughtily)—"I am a gentleman, sir."

First Traveler—"Indeed, how long have you been out of work?"

"Have you any gretna greens?" inquired the facetious customer, with a basket on his arm. "No, sir," answered the grocer; "nearest I can come to 'em is parlor matches. Anybody waiting on you ma'am?"—Chicago Tribune.

A DEAD LETTER.

Several years ago there was formed in our city an association of "Retail Grocers" for the better protection of trade interests in the way of regulating prices and advancing their mutual concerns upon a fraternal basis. At the opening prospects were bright for concentrated action and universal sgreement; but the old story of "one black sheep" spoiling the flock is illustrative of what followed. According to the by-laws of their constitution, their meetings are called for the third Monday in each month; last month there was no meeting at all, and the month previous only about a dozen attended.

The president and secretary are both capable business men, and it must be a source of annoyance and disappointment to them to feel that their efforts are so little valued. Last week we took the chance of speaking to a member of the association in regard to his non-attendance, and he laughingly said: "Yes, I've been a member ever since the association was formed, and I've only been to one meeting."

That man should be ashamed of himself, and yet he is one of the well to do grocers of the south end. What are the grocers of the city making on sugar at present refining prices? One-half cent gross per pound. Is there any business in that? There is no excuse to offer for it selling at that margin except that every man is paddling his own canoe and does not propose to allow his competitor any chance of taking his trade by underselling him. We are satisfied that all would like better profits, and will confess that they are not making anything out of sugar at present, and still they keep weighing it out at 6 cts. when they might have 7 cts. or at least a dollar for 15 lbs.

The experience in other American cities has been that an association is among the positive necessities of the grocer. Aside from the regulation of price many valuable ideas are disseminated at these fraternal meetings, and instead of competitors on opposite corners being antagonists, they work together to their mutual benefit and advantage. We trust it will not become our duty to record the further deterioration of this very necessary fraternity, who seem to be standing in their own light and are only partially aware of it.—Maritime Grocer, St. John, N. B.

WHY IT REFUSES.

The English Postmaster-General informed merchants a couple of months ago that the importation of dutiable articles by mail was contrary to law—a violation of the regulations of the Universal Postal Union—and that while it had been tolerated for many years, the abuses under the practice had led the Government to decide on the rigid enforcement of the law. English merchants urged the extreme convenience of being allowed to receive samples by mail, and under date of July 14 the Postmaster-General announced the decision of the Government to limit to tobacco alone the prohibition previously announced against the transmission of dutiable articles to Great Britain by sample post; only bona fide trade samples, however, are to be admitted through this channel. In an earlier communication the Secretary of the General Post Office wrote: "This department is not without hope that it will hereafter be possible to arrange with the United States Post Office for the exchange of parcels, the attempt, which has several times been made, having lately been revived under more favorable auspices than formerly." Our postal authorities, says formerly." Our postal authorities, says N.Y. Journal of Commerce, have pushed the parcels post system with the West Indies and countries south of us, because it promotes the importation by those countries from us of minor merchandise; for a like reason, that it would facilitate the importation of gloves and other minor merchandise by this country from Europe, our postal authorities of both parties have declined to enter into a parcels post convention with England.

ELGIN, ILL.

MESSRS. F. D. MOULTON & CO.
New York.

DEAR SIRS,—We are going back to Ashton's salts. It has been a long road since we left it but the turn is short. Lower prices for year after year, have compelled us with other factory men to look about for cheaper supplies, and we have used at different times probably every brand of so-called dairy salt in the market, including Genessee and Michigan Salt Association. As a result of our experience, we are convinced that we were mistaken in our ideas of economy, and that only the best is the cheapest. Want of uniformity and reliability as evidenced more especially in a failure to preserve and keep butter intended to be held, have at last forced us to abandon the use of what we believe to be the best of American salts, and go back to Ashton. We want a salt that will hold up bntter, and keep and preserve it, and we know that yours will. So you may send us a car of large sacks at your earliest convenience, and make the price us low as you do to anybody.

Yours truly,
THE ELGIN BUTTER CO.

PERSIAN DATES.

The experiment of a first direct steamer with new crop Persian dates is, we understand, about to be repeated again this year, and the probable result is a subject of discussion among the trade. Though the fruit has been disposed of after a fashion during the past two years, the method adopted for finding sale has not been in accordance with strict business principles, hence considerable dissatisfaction has been expressed in the past, and the courts have been appealed to for the adjustment of differences that have arose in the trade. In previous years the new crop was permitted to reach this market through the recognized London channel. London merchants have always controlled this trade, there being no representative in this city of Bussorah houses, and in supplying the necessities of the American people the crop was loaded at the above port, thence taken to London, and from there sent forward to this country upon consignment. In the business considerable rivalry has always existed, but it was not until 1891 that the competition was pushed to the extent that prompted the idea of a direct steamer, leaving Bussorah at about the same time that other vessels were despatched to London. When this idea was conceived by a prominent London house, the experiment was regarded as rather hazardous, and considerable doubt was expressed as to the financial results, a number of the trade here, and also in London, being free to state their belief that a full cargo, especially of first fruit, could not be taken care of here upon terms that would make the venture a profitable one to the shipper. The notice of a boat with the first tide for America, served to spur other London merchants to greater effort,, and prices were freely quoted here for first shipments via London that were considerably below the open quotations made for the direct steamer for America, accompanied with the statement that the difference in time between the two deliveries would be so slight as to make the purchase of goods by the direct steamer, at a premium, a rather unprofitable venture for those who contracted. To counteract this influence it was found necessary to form a pool for the handling of the direct invoice, but those in the ring were to stand in the background and permit the cargo to go to public sale, thus giving the impression that the goods had not passed from first hands; at the same time the rightful owners were to stand by and protect the stock, seeing that the bids from outside parties were sufficiently high to yield them a profit over the contract price. With the arrival of the cargo, the invoice was put immediately under the hammer, all arrangements having been made for what was supposed would be one of the biggest things upon record for the combine, but, to cut the particulars somewhat short, the sale fell flat, many in the trade having been made aware through the columns of this paper of the feast that had been provided. A second sale was advertised and held, and poorer results were realized, therefore it was found to again stop the auction. A third attempt finally disposed of the greater portion of the fruit, much to the relief of the owners, who were then placed in a position to view what to them were not very satisfactory results. Last year the experiment of importing a first direct cargo was again tried, but an entirely new system was adopted. A canvas of the large buyers was made, and the proposed plan of sale was secretly explained. The goods were to be placed in the auction room upon arrival, and the sale to the outside public was to be conducted in the ordinary way, but those on the inside were informed that should they take blocks of three, five, or ten thousand boxes they were to be granted a rebate on the quiet of an eighth to a quarter cent. per pound, as to the quantity selected, thus giving to several of the trade a positive advantage that was not to be publicly announced at the time of the auction. This time the sale moved with lubricated wheels, but the friction came after when it leaked out that the sale was of the "fake" character, and that better terms were secured by some than were granted to others. What scheme has been engineered for this year has not thus far developed, but the trade can rest assured that if the goods are placed in the hands of the leading fruit auctioneers the entire terms of the sale will be given to the public, and that nothing will be kept back that will throw discredit upon the way that fruit is disposed of at public sale in this city. From London we are advised that another effort will be made this season to shorten the time of delivery of fruit other than sent by direct steamer. There is talk of shipping via Genoa per direct express service, and also via Southampton per the American Line, either of which propositions, if carried out, would land the fruit in this market in much shorter time, thus lessening materially the time between the direct steamer and the shipments via other ports. The shipment from Bussorah this year will be a trifle later than usual, the first tide in September, when the goods are sent out, not occuring until the 25th. Prices are now being cabled from London for first shipments, but the same are not given serious consideration, they being accepted here in the light of speculative offers. Of old goods there is yet a considerable quantity remaining upon the market, a portion of which is said to consist of remnants from the first cargo last year. —N.Y. Journal of Commerce.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, Aug. 3, 1893.

GROCERIES.

No strikingly new features have developed during the week. Trade continues much about the same—fairly good. There is nothing approaching activity in any one line, and what is doing is of a hand to mouth character, but a steady stream of orders are being received and in this way the aggregate volume of business is of a good average character. Some complaints are heard regarding the movement of sugars not being as large as we anticipated. But there are a good many small orders being filled at last week's reduction. Coffees continues much as before. In fruits the market is quiet and unchanged. Teas are a little steadier and a fair business is reported in some kinds. The demand for canned goods is light. Payments are fair.

COFFEE.

The market is a little better in Rio, owing, it is said, to trouble being expected on account of the crop being marketed in too green a condition. In New York the market for Rio has been a little off, but there is now an improvement. On the local market the demand continues limited and prices unchanged. We quote as before: Rio, 19½ to 21½c.; East Indian, 27 to 30c.; South American, 21 to 23c.; Santos, 21 to 22c.; Java, 30 to 32c.; Mocha, 26 to 27c.; Maracaibo, 21 to 23c.

DRIED FRUIT.

Nothing new has developed in this line. Valencia raisins are quiet, and the little that is doing is principally in selected,on account of the better quality; off-stalk range in price from 3½c. up, layers at 6 to 6½c., and selected fruit at 6½ to 7½c. Compared with last year there is likely to be a scarcity of large and layer raisins. Advices state that scalding is likely to begin a week earlier than last year, as the grapes are already ripening. Sultana raisins are in light demand only, but the market is steady at 6 to 6¾c. for good, 7¼ to 7¾c. for fine, 8 to 8¾c. for choice The market has advanced about ¼c per lb. in New York, where some large round lots have been sold. Stocks there are light. The crop is likely to be a week or two later than last year owing to the late spring, and C. Whittall & Co. of Smyrna look for an abundant crop and lower prices. The same firm also advise that the yield of Malaga raisins will turn out smaller than expected owing to the intense heat prevailing, which is causing damage. So far the injury can be appreciated to the extent of 20 per cent The better class of currants are steady, while for the weaker grades the market is rather easier. Later reports indicate that the currant crop will after all be a good one, the peronosporos having only attacked the leaves. Some authorities estimate the new crop in Greece at 170,000 tons. The idea here as to price is still 5½ to 6c for provincials, 7½ to 8½c. for Patras, 8 to 9c. for Vostizzas. Prunes dull and unchanged, with 7 to 7½c. still the ruling figures. There are good prospects for the crop in this line. There is a little demand for cooking figs at 4½ to 5½c., but of other kinds there are none in stock here. The crop of Eleme figs will be from 15 to 20. per cent. smaller than last year, but advices state that the quality will be better and that prices will rule about the same as last year or lower. Dates dull and unchanged at 5 to 5½c.

NUTS.

Trade in this line remains quiet and prices unchanged. Advices report that crop of Jordan and Valencia almonds is larger than last year and that shipments will begin about the end of August.

RICE AND SPICES.

There is nothing new in rice. Demand continues fair and prices unchanged at 5½ to 6c for finest brands, and 3⅝ to 5¾c. for B. quality Japan rice. There is the usual quiet seasonable trade doing in spices at previous prices. Whole ginger is quoted at 20 to 25c, pure white pepper at 20 to 28c. and pure black at 14 to 16c.

SUGAR.

The Toronto market is fairly steady at the decline, and a moderate business, particularly in granulated, is being done. There is a scarcity of bright sugars, and demand is running a good deal on this article, although mediums are also receiving considerable attention. The feeling is that there will be no further decline in prices till after the usual big demand of August and September is satisfied. The ruling price for granulated is 5⅝c., with 5½ to 5⅝c. as the range, but the inside figure is for the Nova Scotia article. Yellows run from 4½ to 5¼c. for dark to bright. Raws are dull with 4 to 4⅜c. as the range of prices. Raws are a little better outside within the last few days, both in New York and in London, and some are reported to be storing raws rather than accept present prices, expecting to get more money the latter part of August or in September. The Trust is reported to have been a buyer at the lower prices.

Willett & Gray, New York, in their Statistical, say: The week—Raws declined 7-16½c. Refined declined ¼c. Receipts, 19,180 tons. Meltings, 25,000 tons. Total stock in all the principal countries, 839,859 tons, against 1,066,816 tons at same dates last year. Afloats to the United States from all countries estimated, 50,000 tons, against 70,000 tons last year.

Raws—This has been a week of panic in the sugar markets in Europe and a week of serious depreciation of values at home. The "inevitable collapse," to which we called attention in our Statistical of June 8, came somewhat earlier than generally anticipated. Beet sugar rapidly declined from 17s. per cwt. f.o.b. to 15s. 10½d. rallied to 16s. 3d. and declined again to 15s. 6d. rallying at the close to 15s. 7½d. The lowest point in Europe brought the parity of Centrifugals to 3¾c. per lb. and a few parties, rather than store their sugar, accepted this price, which is a remarkable decline of 7-16c. per lb. and ⅜c. per lb. between sales; one or two cargoes sold early in the week, having been fixed at 4⅛c. Muscovados made even greater decline, having been placed at 3¼c. for 89° test, and molasses sugar at 3c. per lb. for basis of 89° test. The financial panic has grown much more widespread and severe in the United States, and until it runs its course neither sugar nor stocks, nor merchandise of any kind, can help participating. When it is over, the course of the sugar market should again be upwards to some extent on a legitimate healthy basis, but it is probably too late in the season, and holders have become too much disheartened to warrant expectations of a large recovery of the lost ground. The money stringency is also so violent that demand for refined is curtailed and requirements for raws lessened, still August should prove a more favorable month in which to sell raws. The decline in raws is favorable to refiners' interests, inasmuch as they changed on July 1 to a hand-to-mouth basis policy, as stated by us at the time, and now are in fine position to take advantage of the decline. This they have done to-day by very considerable purchases on the low basis of 3¾c. for Centrifugals and 3¼c. for Muscovados.

Refined—Two declines of ⅛c. each have been made in refined during the week, in harmony with the raw market, and there is not likely to be another decline unless the raw market recedes again from its present level. The demand is only for imperative needs on the hand-to-mouth basis, but as the invisible stocks are mostly disposed of, the meltings are increased again to such basis.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Demand for syrups is almost nil, and 2½ to 3c. are the ruling prices. Molasses dull, with 32½c. the idea for half-barrels and 30c. for barrels.

TEAS.

The feeling in steadier in regard to teas, and the fair trade doing, as announced last week, has been maintained. Demand is principally for Japans, Monings and Ceylons. A large number of samples of new Japan tea ex S.S. Empress of India are arriving this week, and the bulk of the tea is expected in a few days. Medium Japan teas at 18 to 20c. are showing excellent value. Some excellent value is being offered in old seasons Japans, holders being anxious to clean up their stocks. Low grade Ceylons continue to advance.

Latest advices from London report that the market continues firm for all descriptions of low grade teas, and at present shows no signs of easing down. Last season's Pekoe Congous show excellent value. New season's Kaisows have been sold on that market and show good quality, but have only arrived in small quantities as yet. Last mail advices from Hankow report a continued strong market for common Monings, of which supplies have been coming forward

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

Taken on the whole trade is quiet, and increasingly so. The over production of canned fruits of past years seem to have taught packers a lesson, for this season they are reputed to be putting up less fruit in the way of strawberries, raspberries and cherries. In fact in regard to the last named a scarcity is threatened. There is less disposition to sell futures than a week ago, and no one seems anxious to buy. There is nothing new to report in tomatoes, although there seems to be more lying around at 80c. The ruling prices are 80 to 85c. Much the same applies to peas and corn. Peaches are dull and stocks light, with prices unchanged at $2.10 to $2.35 for 2's and $3 to $3 25 for 3's. Apples are getting pretty well cleaned, and prices are as before at $2 to $2.25 for gallons and 85c. to $1 for B's. There is a plentiful supply of plums, but there is not much demand and prices are unchanged at $1.45 to $1.55. Pumpkins are slow at 80 to 85c. Salmon continues in good demand for the better brands. Stocks are light; $1.52½ is the idea for talls and $1.70 to $1 80 for flats. These prices are for first-class goods, while salmon can be got as low as $1.20, but the quality is undesirable. Lobsters are still selling well at $1.85 to $2 for talls and $2.25 to $2.50 for flats. Meats continue in seasonable demand at unchanged prices. Sardines are in moderate demand only. The fishing season in France opened well, but it is not turning out so well as expected, but it will not be till September that anything at all definite regarding the pack can be known.

slowly. It is now evident that the crop will be considerably short of last year's. Exchange on London, four months' credit, £3 11s.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

Receipts are more liberal, but as all offering is wanted prices are firm and rather higher than a week ago. Views of dealers here and holders outside are somewhat apart. The export demand is not so free as it was. Dairy tubs are quoted at 17 to 18c. for good to selected and pails at 16 to 17c. Fine dairy crocks are worth as much as tubs. Good store-packed tub, sweet and uniform in color, would fetch 16c., and bakers' butter is worth 14c. and is scarce at that price. There is not a large supply of creamery tubs on this market and demand is limited. Jobbers are paying 20 to 21c. for creamery tubs, and selling at 21 to 22c. There is fair enquiry from retailers for creamery pound prints at 18 to 19c.

On the cheese market buyers and sellers are apart, and prices are somewhat unsettled. Bids of 9¼c. were refused at some factories, while in other instances sellers at 9c. do not seem to have found buyers. The price is held to be below the export basis, and a good deal of cheese is being stored. In a jobbing way 9¾ to 10c. is the idea as to price.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—No change ; Jobbers are paying $1.25 to $1.35 for hand-picked and selling at $1.40 to $1.50 ; medium are selling at $1.10 to $1.20.

DRIED APPLES — No material change. Sales of job lots of 20 barrels are reported at 4c., but 4½ to 4¾c. is quoted ordinarily. Jobbers are offering 3½ to 4c.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Dull and unchanged at 8¾ to 9c., with quarters selling at 7c.

EGGS—Are plentiful at 11½ to 12c., but there is not much doing.

POULTRY—Dull. We quote chickens at 50 to 60c. and ducks at 40 to 60c.

POTATOES—The market is easier. On track $1.75 per barrel is quoted by the carlot, but otherwise $2.25 per barrel is the idea; bags $1.40 to $1.50.

HONEY—Unchanged at 5 to 8c. for extracted ; new season's section, 20c.

ONIONS—Unchanged at $2 to $2.25 for Egyptians.

HOPS—Quiet and unchanged at 16 to 17c. for small lots and 15 to 16c. otherwise.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

There are no dressed hogs of any account on the market and they are not wanted; prices nominally $7.50 to $8. Demand continues good for hogs products particularly smoked meats. Barrel pork is scarce. There are no changes in prices.

BACON—Long clear, 10½ to 11c. Smoked backs 12½c., bellies, 13½ to 14c. rolls 10½ to 10¾c.

HAMS—In good demand and firm at 13 to 13½c. for smoked.

LARD—Pure Canadian is 13c. in tubs, 13¼c. in pails and 12¾c. in tierces. Compound 10 to 10½c.

BARREL PORK—Canadian heavy mess $21, Canadian short cut $22, shoulder mess $19.50.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef fores are 5 to 5½c., hindquarters 9½ to 10c., mutton 7 to 9c., lamb 15 to 17c.

GREEN FRUIT.

Trade continues seasonably good. Demand for oranges is slow, but lemons are going out well at steady prices. Watermelons are scarce and prices higher. Peaches of common early Canadian varieties are coming in and they are selling at 75 to 85c. per basket. Demand for bananas is brisk. Small fruits are selling freely, but in California fruits there is not much doing. We quote : Oranges—Messinas, ½ boxes of 80's, $2.50; ½ boxes of 100's, $2.50 to $2.75; lemons, $4.50 to $5.50; bananas, $1.25 to $1.75; raspberries, 5c to 7c.; cherries 90 to $1.25 per basket ; red currants 65 to 75c. per basket ; black

currants, $1.30 to $1.40; peaches, 75 to 85c. per basket; Canadian tomatoes 75c. per basket; huckleberries, 75c. to $1; cucumbers, 75c. per basket; beans, 35c. per basket; gooseberries, 75c. per basket; cabbage, $1.50 to $2 per bbl. for Canadian; watermelons, 25 to 30c.; California fruit—Apricots, $2.25; peaches, $2 to $2.25; pears, $3 to $3.50; plums, $2.50 to $3

FISH.

The market is a little quieter, although the demand is still fair. Supply is not equal to the demand. We quote as follows: Fresh sea salmon, 15c.; skinned and boned codfish, 6½c.; Labrador herring, $3 per half barrel; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 11 to 12½c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; blue back herring, $1 to $1.50 per hundred; blue pickerel, 4 to 5c. a lb.; yellow ditto, 7 to 8c. a lb.; salmon trout and white fish, 7c.; eels, 6 to 8c. a lb.

HIDES, SKINS, TALLOW, WOOL.

HIDES—There is not much change since our last report. There continues a small demand for short hair fresh hides, for which 4¾c. is being asked; in long-haired winter hides there appears to be no sale at any price.

SKINS—In calf skins there is nothing doing. There is a moderate supply coming into the market, and dealers are taking them at fair quotations. Lamb skins have advanced 5c. during the week. They are now standing at 45c., at which price they are likely to continue for some time, as, for the first time in many years, there is a suitable quantity coming into this market from the United States, where just now, owing to the financial disturbance, markets are dull. Sheep skins are away down in prices.

TALLOW—Tallow is a little weak; as poor grades are not wanted at any price sales are slow. Many of the soap factories are closing down, and as they are the principal consumers, the demand is slacking off.

WOOL—In fleece wool there are few or no transactions reported. Dealers are not anxious to buy, and market holders of wool are still asking figures far beyond value. In foreign wools there is very little doing.

MARKET NOTES.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. are offering special value in corn at low figures.

Sloan & Crowther are offering some extra good value in pure spice, whole and ground.

Eby, Blain & Co. are offering excellent value in new season's Japan tea at 16c. a pound.

Sloan & Crowther are in receipt of samples of shipment of Japan tea ex-Empress of India.

T. Kinnear & Co. are offering 1-lb. block cod fish at reasonable figures. This market is somewhat bare of this commodity.

Sloan & Crowther have just received a shipment of extra fine, dried cured Gaspe cod fish in quintals.

Perkins, Ince & Co. are in receipt of the first samples of new season's green teas. The bulk is expected to arrive in a few days.

The Plymouth Rock now gelatine, being offered by Lucas, Steele & Bristol, will prepare a delicious lemon or other jelly by simply using sugar, water and essence. No lemon juice is required. It can be made over gas, lamp or flame.

Eby, Blain & Co. report large sales of Sterling soap, and they anticipate, from present indications, a big business in these goods.

The Delhi Canning Co. are reported to be making good sales of strawberries, raspberries and black currants jam in glass; also of the epicure brand of catsup.

Custard Powder, an egg saver, and Fruit Saline, are finding ready sale with Lucas, Steele & Bristol. They are seasonable goods for the grocer to handle.

Would the Knight of the Grip who wrote from Owen Sound branch of the C. P. R. mind calling on the editor of THE GROCER. He would confer a favor by so doing.

Mr. Ellis is thus advised by Robert Ward & Co.: Just now the salmon run is somewhat slack. Still we expect that in a few days they will be coming in the usual quantities. The lateness of the season is, in our opinion, a fair sign.

Attention is called to the special arrangements made by Gowans, Kent & Co. for the quick receiving and shipping of fruit jar orders, as stated in their advertisement on the back page cover. Through having agents in London and Hamilton orders can be sent through very promptly from these points, and customers be in receipt of their goods in the shortest space of time after ordering, which is the one thing necessary in an article like fruit jars at a season of the year when it is an impossibility to say just what the demand will be.

Williams, Brown & Co., of San Francisco, thus report regarding salmon: The situation is strong. Columbia River will soon cease packing, and it is now possitively assured that there will be a shortage on that river of possibly 150,000 to 200,000 cases. The run has not yet commenced on the Fraser River to any extent. There has been a slight spurt, but during the last two days the run has virtually ceased. It is now time for the run to commence in earnest in that locality, and the next ten days or two weeks will tell the tale as far as the pack in that locality is concerned.

FLOUR AND FEED.

TORONTO.

Dullness continues to be the predominating feature of the flour market. Both buyers and sellers are holding off, and quotations are largely nominal. Feed is in good demand and oats are steady.

FLOUR.—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitoba patents, $4.20 to $4.25; strong bakers' $3.75 to $3.90; white wheat patents, $3 50 to $3.90; straight roller, $3.15 to $3.20, low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.25; Ontario family $3.15 to $3.40.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.00 to $4.05; Manitoba strong bakers', $3.65 to $3.70; Ontario patents, $3.50 to $3.60; straight roller, $2.85 to $3.10; extra, $2.70 to $2.80; low grades, per bag, 90c. to $1.00.

HAY—Baled timothy quiet and unchanged. We quote $10 to $10.50.

STRAW—Demand poor and prices unchanged at $5.50 to $6.

MONTREAL.

The flour market is very dull at present. There is a small local movement reported at easy prices, but there is practically nothing doing on export account. We quote:—Winter wheat, $3.90 to $4.10; Manitoba patents; best brands, $4.10; straight rollers, $3.15 to $3.25; extra, $2.90 to $3.05; superfine, $2.60 to $2.90; Manitoba strong bakers', $3.65 to $3.80; Manitoba strong bakers', best brand, $3.75 to $3.80.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, Aug. 3, 1893.

GROCERIES.

The grocery trade has undergone no particular change during the week and business in the whole has ruled moderate. Sugar is not quiet so active as it was before the decline, but it still furnishes the bulk of the business. Advices on raws continue easy, owing to the improved position of crop affairs in Europe. Syrups and molasses are about as last quoted, coffees being a little easier and spices about steady. In dried fruit business has been fair and offers of new crop Valencias have been made on a pretty low basis.

SUGAR.

The sugar market has not developed any new feature since our report of a week ago. Advices from primary points continue easy, but no further declines are noted. The local demand is slower since the reduction in price which has given buyers the impression that values are going lower and they are holding off for more concession as a rule. Still despite this, sugar is the article which has furnished most of the movement in groceries during the week. We quote as before, granulated 5⅜c. and yellows unchanged at 4⅜c. and upward according to grade.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The demand for syrup is slow at unchanged prices, and only a fair movement is noted in molasses. Considering the large receipts Barbadoes here during the spring and summer, stocks have been worked off very well, and while the demand is not brisk prices hold steady. The combine is still asking 33 to 34c. for Barbadoes, while outsiders are moving round lots at 30 to 31c. Canadian syrup has sold at 1⅞ to 2⅛c. in the wood.

TEA.

The tea market is dull at the moment, and present low prices seem to be no inducement to buyers, although, as will be seen elsewhere in the course of a special article, there are some who take a different view of the situation. Japans are quoted as follows: Common, 11 to 13c.; medium, 15 to 17c.; fine, 18to 21c., and choicest 23 to 30c.

COFFEES AND SPICES.

A fair demand exists for coffee and a moderate business has been put through. We quote: Jamaica, 17 to 19c.; Maracaibo, 19 to 22c.; Rio, 19 to 20c.; Java, 24 to 28c.; and Mocha, 25 to 28c.

In spices business is quiet and prices as follows: Jamaica ginger, 16 to 18c. for common and 20 to 23c. for fine; black pepper, 8 to 9c.; pimento, 6½c.; nutmegs, 50 to 52½c. and $1.

DRIED FRUIT.

Valencia raisins off-stalk are in fair demand, with sales reported at 3 to 3¼c. for good common stock. New crop is offered laid down in Montreal at 16s. 6d. In currants the market is quiet at 4¾ to 5¾c.

RICE.

There is a fair demand for rice at unchanged prices.

GREEN FRUIT.

In green fruit the week has furnished a fair business with nothing very special. Lemons are easier at $2.75 to $3.50 for choice and $1.25 to $2.50 for common to good. Oranges are quiet, as follows: Boxes $2.50 to $4 and half boxes $1.50 to $1 85. Receipts of raspberries have been liberal and sales fair at 7 to 9¼c. per box, while pails bring 75c. Peaches are scarce and firm at $1.75 to $2. Pears meet, with a fair sale at $1 95 to $2 per box. Bananas are plentiful at 50c. to $1.25 per bunch. Melons sell at 25 to 35c., and blueberries 70 to 75c. per pail.

BEANS.

The market is steady and we quote prices as before, hand picked $1.40 to $1.50, ordinary $1.25 to $1.30, and inferior 90c. to $1.10.

HOPS.

The market retains the steadier tone noted in our last, and prices are more firmly held at 18 to 20c. for good to choice yearlings, and 6 to 10c. for old.

POTATOES.

Old potatoes are about finished. New potatoes are coming in freely and sell at $1.75 to $2.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market is dull and neglected. Pork is moving slowly at unchanged prices, and smoked meats are only in fair enquiry. Whether the disturbance in Chicago will have any appreciable effect on this market remains to be proved. We quote:—Canadian short cut, per brl., $21 to $21.50; mess pork, western, new, per brl., $22.50 to $23; hams, city cured, per lb., 12 to 13½c.; lard, Canadian, in pails, 11 to 12c.; bacon, per lb., 11½ to 12¼c.; lard, com., refined, per lb., 9½ to 10c.

EGGS.

There is no change in the position of the egg market, which rules steady. Receipts are moderate and the demand fair. We quote prices steady at 11 to 11½c.

CHEESE AND BUTTER.

The cheese market rules steady. There is not much to note. Some 4,000 French country cheese sold at a range of 9 to 9 1-16c. Finest Ontario colored, 9⅜ to 9½c.; finest Ontario white, 9⅛ to 9¼c.; finest Townships, 8⅞ to 9c.; finest French colored, 8⅞ to 9c.; finest French white, 8¾ to 8⅞c.; under grades, 8½ to 8⅝c.; cable, white, 45s. 6d.; cable, colored, 46s. 6d.

Butter remains much the same. Creamery is held pretty firm on the whole at quotations. Dairy stock is steady also. We quote:—Creamery, 21 to 21½c.; Townships, 19 to 20c.; Western dairy, 17 to 17½c.

THOSE SMALL ACCOUNTS.

It would be impossible to so disturb credit and confidence as to bring on conditions of stagnation and panic if every man and woman owing small bills to the grocer, the doctor, the milliner, the baker, the butcher, the carpenter, and the hundreds of persons in other callings who minister to our daily wants, should make prompt payment, says Philadelphia Record. If the ten dollar debt owing to the grocer should be paid to him he could settle his debt due to the doctor, and the doctor's wife could pay her milliner, the milliner the baker, and so on. The ten dollars once started on its errand of liquidation might satisfy hundreds of dollars of indebtedness as fast as it could be passed from debtor to creditor. The man who thrusts it in his pocket, and lets his creditor wait, contributes his share towards augmenting business distress. When thousands of men, actuated by fear or careless disregard of obvious duty, begin to hoard money instead of paying their debts, distress must result. When millions lose confidence, and only pay as they are forced to do it, further business is impossible. All the wealth of the millionaires thrust into the breach could not make good popular default. As this is the season of the year when it is the practice of tradesmen and professional persons to send bills to those who are indebted to them for goods or services, we trust some heed will be given to our advice to promptly pay up. Two or three large houses in this city have adopted the Record's advice by settlement with all small creditors. If the small indebtedness of every household should be paid when due the ups and downs of large speculative ventures would be comparatively harmless. It is when everybody's pocket-book is turned into a bank of deposit, every sixpence going in and nothing coming out, that financiers are at their wits' ends and despair of finding a remedy.

A NEW SUBSTITUTE FOR SUGAR.

Paschkis has recently given some attention to the properties of this new sweetening agent, and comes to the conclusion with reference to its relative value as compared with sugar that it cannot be denied that sucrol fully accomplishes one object for which sugar is used, viz., that of sweetening food and drinks. It has a pure sweet taste, has no disagreeable taste accompanying or following its use, and does not spoil the food to which it is added. Coffee, tea, and lemonade that are sweetened with sucrol taste very good; their sweet taste never becomes disgusting or sickening. Sucrol is best used for sweetening liquids that have a comparatively high specific gravity. Those that are lighter and bitter will not have this taste covered by sucrol, on account of their want of viscosity and the small quantity of sucrol necessary for sweetening. Something similar is known to be a fact with sugar; a purely bitter taste will not even be neutralized by much sugar (viz., quinine); it is only combined with the sweet. How much sweeter sucrol tastes than sugar cannot be stated exactly; according to his gustatory experience with aqueous solutions and with various foods and drinks, he believes it is about 200 times as sweet as sugar, maybe more. At all events, the quantity of sucrol necessary to sweeten a liquid is much too small to give it the same density as it possesses when sugar is employed. This shows very markedly in tea or coffee.—American Druggist.

GOOD RETAILING.

The successful business man is he who is willing to commence at the bottom and work his way up, by steady, unremitting attention to every detail of his business, and to be able to do that he must, before he thinks of engaging in business for himself, have a thorough knowledge of the grocery trade.

In selecting your location, be sure and have it the best you can afford. You will have to pay more rent, but that will cut a very small figure in comparison to the extra trade you will attract. When you have secured your place of business, the next thing to do is to place yourself right, before the public, financially and morally. First, go to one of the prominent mercantile agencies and make a fair, square and honest statement of the business you intend to engage in, the amount of cash capital you have to invest, what your position has been and what you anticipate doing. Then you make a resolution, and stick to it, that you will be strictly temperate, and never "play the races," or any other chance game.

When you get ready to purchase your stock, have a memorandum made out, and allow so much money for each stock, or each class of goods, and keep as near the limit as you can. Don't overload yourself with first purchases; get the very best cash discounts; you will find there is considerable money saved during the year by discounting your bills.

When business begins to slack up, do not sit down and wait for the return of fall or spring trade, but get up some good scheme that will bring you more prominently before the people, and at the same time bring you profit.

The arrangement of fixtures is something that would be considered as much as anything. Make everything as convenient as possible, and you will find your clerks will wait on more customers, make more sales, and cause much less trouble to themselves and less annoyance to those whom they are serving.

Stocks should be so arranged that customers purchasing one thing will have something else suggested to them by its being convenient, and the clerk will then have no trouble in introducing and selling it.

Employers should show an interest in their employees, from head clerk down to errand boys, as a kind word and a pleasant suggestion from the proprietor will do a great deal more good than an hour's scolding would do.

About salaries, you should never cut a man's wages. If he is not worth what you engaged him for, let him go, for if he was worth little before you "dock" him, he will be worth less than nothing afterwards, as nine men out of ten will then try to injure you.

Then, on the other hand, if you have a good man, and you see he has your interest at heart, do not wait for him to come and tell you he has an offer from the house across the street. Just surprise him by putting an extra dollar or two in his envelop on Saturday night, and take my word for it, you will find you have made a good investment.

As you get people you can depend on, keep them, for you can rest assured that the better you treat your assistants, the harder they will work for you.

The saying is: "Goods well bought are half sold," but if they are only half sold, that will not help to discount your bills Therefore, you must keep pushing all the time to keep your stock moving. You will pick up some "stickers" no matter how careful you are. As soon as you discover them, put them on the counter, cut the price in two, and get rid of them. You will then try and get something in their place that will sell and that you can make money on.

Advertising, in smaller cities and towns, is what makes the business today. No man can expect to be fairly successful without it.

I have watched every kind of an ad, and find the best results come to the man who makes a statement in a plain, straightforward manner, not crowding in too much reading matter in too small a space, but giving room for display lines.

No beginner, or even a man who has an established business, should be without a good trade journal.—Excelsior in Commercial Enquirer.

OIL OF PEPPERMINT.

More than one half of all the oil of peppermint, spearmint and tansy used in the world is said to be procured and distilled in Michigan. The centre of the industry is St. Joseph County. Peppermint plants to the weight of 15,000 tons when dried are cultivated every year in the state. From these essential oils are distilled. Early in spring the roots are planted in furrows from two to three feet apart. In a day a good workman will plant an acre with them. A few weeks later the rows meet and cover the entire ground. In September the plants mature. They are then covered with fragrant purple blossoms and the time has arrived for mowing. After laying in the sun to dry they are raked into heaps and taken to the distilleries, of which there are about 150 in the State. It is estimated that 250 pounds of dried peppermint plants produce one pound of oil. The yield per acre is 15 pounds of oil. Distilled peppermint brings from $1.25 to $5 per pound in the home market. The industry was originally established in Mitcham, Eng., about 150 years ago. Early in the present century a beginning was made in this country in Wayne County, New York, and in St. Joseph, Mich. To-day nine-tenths of the entire product of the world is made in the United States. The rich, alluvial soil so abundant in Michigan, together with its desirable climate, has enabled the State to take precedence over any State or country in this industry.—New York Post.

DRY GOODS.

MONTREAL MARKET.

Business in dry goods has been quiet, but most of the houses report the receipt of fair orders on fall account and sorting orders for summer goods as well.

Nothing further has been done in the matter of the cutting on Canadian staples by Toronto firms, but according to a member of a leading firm here the matter is remedying itself. This, it is said, is largely due to the action of a Toronto house, not one of the offending firms, which got real mad, and to meet the actions of its competitors instructed its travelers to sell at cost right and left. They did so for a few days with effective results.

Mr. A. F. Gault, of Gault Bros., has not yet returned from Europe.

Caverhill, Kissock & Co. have received and are still receiving an extensive line of ladies' fall cloakings in German woollens.

S. Greenshields, Son & Co. have put into stock a heavy line of domestic fine grey wool flannels which they have been working on.

Jas. Johnston & Co. received last week a fine assortment of velvet shawls. It is anticipated that the most popular shade will be "ombre."

The two little stuffed kids which figured so prominently in the St. Jean Baptiste celebration were loaned by Thouret, Fitzgibbon & Co. They represent the well known trade mark of "Jammet" gloves.

Jas. Johnston & Co. opened up an extensive line in velvets last week, and have already shipped several good orders from the lot.

Gault Bros'. travellers report an encouraging demand for general fall supplies, tweeds, overcoatings and cloakings, and their conclusion is that the stocks in country dealers' hands is small.

Wm. Agnew & Co. received last week an extensive line of black and colored henriettas in all shades, also a large line of China silks in all the popular colors, in 22 and 30 inch. They expect a good demand for sealettes and black and grey curl cloth also again this fall for jackets.

Thouret, Fitzgibbon & Co. are now carrying full stocks of the now well known brand of "Jammet" French kid gloves, the agency for which is under their control, the late firm of Jammet, Frere & Pewny having dissolved and the original Jammet make being handed over to Thouret, Fitzgibbon & Co. In the latter firms hands the goods have this season doubled in sale, evidently they are becoming known and appreciated.

TORONTO MARKET.

The past week has been a very quiet one with the jobbers. Very few lines have been active for present delivery and sorting orders have totalled but a meagre volume. Still this volume has been fully equal to that of former corresponding seasons, and every person concerned is cheerful. What little sorting trade is being done is chiefly through letter orders, as the house trade is almost a non-entity. City retailers order daily sorting parcels, and pick up many clearances.

July closed with a big total of fall shipments, but only the men who are considered safe beyond a doubt, have been thus favored. At present wholesalers are holding back any heavy shipments of fall goods until the 4th of August is past and its lessons revealed. Brisk shipping of fall goods will recommence about the tenth and will be continued at an accelerated pace until all fall orders are filled. Reports from travellers show that the trade is buying cheerfully but not heavily. The tone of the buyers is hopeful, although not speculative.

John Macdonald & Co. have just opened up ten cases of plain silk surahs including all the new scarce colors. A shipment of shot surahs in two qualities is also to hand.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. offer in their staple department English sheetings (plain and twill) at prices that they claim are much under market value.

Alexander & Anderson show a large range of fancy flannels in floral designs. These goods are especially adapted as material for house gowns.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence are opening up a large shipment of velveteens comprising staple shades, navys, browns, greys and fawns, etc., also the newer and novel shades, such as Humboldt, Eveque, Emeraude, Moss, and Tabac.

W. R. Brock & Co. are showing a great display of large buttons suitable for mantles, ulsters, and overcoats in pearl, pearlettas, buffalo horn, vegetable ivory, and composition. They are the newest and most fashionable goods in the market. Their travellers carry a full range of the samples.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have opened another shipment of their famous 796 black venetian finish worsted. Their sales on this cloth must have reached very respectable figures.

Evening wraps and boating shawls have not been in such demand for many years as they are this season. Anticipating this fact W. R. Brock & Co. make unusually large purchases, and are thus enabled to offer unprecedented value at popular prices; their No. 53 Honeycomb to retail at 75 cents, and their "Dollar" to retail at that price have been so much in demand that already they have been compelled to place several cable repeats. They have all colors in stock in various lines of honeycombs and fancy knitted.

John Macdonald & Co. are showing in their silk and dress room the largest assortment of silks, ribbons, hosiery, gloves, dress goods, veilings, ladies' underwear and knitted and fancy shawls that they have ever offered to the Canadian trade.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling have just received a shipment of horsecloths for fly nets. This is double width, extra value, and quite seasonable. Some very fine lines of white quilts of American and English manufacture in very nice designs and at popular prices.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have made a special effort this season on stylish dress fabrics, and report most gratifying results. In many ranges repeat orders were found necessary to keep their assortment unbroken.

John Macdonald & Co. have some special lines of ladies' metal belts. These are the rage at present and this lot will be offered at much below regular prices. A full stock of "Safety" hooks and eyes is to hand in their haberdashery department. Dress shields in stockinettes, sateens, satins and silks are again in full range.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling, in their men's furnishing department, are busy filling fall orders, and their stock of general furnishings is now about complete Their specialty in neckwear is neat patrons and quiet colorings, which, they claim, pleases a larger proportion of their patterns than the louder and bolder designs. They have had an unusual run on melton and flannel shirts for the fall trade, both in men's and boys' sizes.

Military and hercules braids in wide numbers are in great demand at present. Gordon, Mackay & Co. are in receipt of a shipment of these scarce goods which made their range of widths complete. Their "special" unlaundried shirt at $7.20, which has made a name for itself the country over, they can now do in all sizes from 14 to 17 inch.

Alexander & Anderson are opening up their fall dress goods. They show great range in hopsackings, plain checks and shot effects; whipcords in plain, shot and broche effects; serges in all colors, and hopsack tartans in silk and wool especially for blouses and trimmings. They have also a large range of high-class tweed effect suitings. Plain cloth suitings are shown in all colors. Shot velvets and shot velvet cords are something new and special as a trimming for the fall trade.

CONSUMMATE MEN OF BUSINESS.

The following paper from the pen of a practical grocer was recently published in the Michigan Tradesman:

Consummate business men or consummate men of business—either seems to answer the text.

Owen Feltham said that man is but the lower part of the world that is not brought up to business affairs.

Hazlett represents the man of business as a mean sort of a person, yoked to a trade or profession, keeping in a beaten track, and letting his affairs take their own course. With this sentiment we disagree. We know there are narrow-minded men of business, as there are narrow-minded literary men and legislators; but there are also business men of large and comprehensive minds, capable of action on the very largest scale. Burke once said that he knew statesmen who were peddlers and merchants who acted in the spirit of statesmen. We should take into account the qualities necessary for the conduct of a successful business. It requires special aptitude, promptitude of action in emergencies, capacity for organizing, great tact, knowledge of human nature, constant self-culture and growing experience in the practical affairs of life. The school of business is by no means as narrow as some would have us believe.

The truth is well spoken when we say that consummate business men are rare—almost as rare as veritable saints and martyrs. The path of success in business is invariably the path of common sense. A good deal is said about lucky hits, but the best kind of success in every man's life is not that which comes by accident. Every youth should be early made to feel that if he would get through the world usefully and happily he must rely upon himself and his own energies. Teach him to understand that he has his own way to make, and that it depends solely upon his own exertions whether he starve or not.

An eminent judge once said, when asked what contributed most to success at the bar: "Some succeed by great talent, some by high connections, some by miracle, but the majority by commencing without a shilling." It seems to be a fact that the men who are most successful in business are those who begin the world in their shirt sleeves, whereas those who begin with fortunes frequently lose them.

Business is employment; serious engagement; something to be transacted; something required to be done. Every human being has his duties to be performed, and therefore has need of cultivating the capacity for doing them. Attention, application, accuracy, method, punctuality, and dispatch are the principal qualities required for the efficient conduct of business of any kind. These may be thought to be small matters, yet they are essential; and when men have broken down in business it will almost invariably be found that it was due to the neglect of little things. It is the result of everyday experience that steady attention to matters of detail lies in the root of human progress, and that diligence, above all, is the mother of good luck. Accuracy is also of much importance and a mark of good business training, accuracy in observation, accuracy in speech, accuracy in the transaction of affairs—what is done in business should be well done. It is much better to accomplish perfectly a small amount of work than to do much more imperfectly. Method is essential, and enables a larger amount of work to be got through with satisfaction; method is like packing things in a box—a good packer will get in as much again as a poor one.

Be prompt; do instantly whatever is to be done, and take the hours of recreation after business—never before it. If that which is first in hand is not instantly, steadily and readily despatched, other things accumulate behind it until affairs begin to press all at once, and no human brain can stand the confusion.

Economy of time is another essential for the perfect business man. Men often say, "Time is money," but it is much more the proper improvement of it in self-culture, self-improvement, and in growth of character. Fifteen minutes a day devoted to self-improvement will be felt at the end of the year. An economical use of time is the true mode of securing leisure. It enables us to get through business and carry it forward, instead of being driven by it. A great man once said: "I owe all my success in life to having been always a quarter of an hour before my time." Punctuality is the duty of gentlemen and the necessity of business men. Nothing begets confidence in a man sooner than the practice of this virtue, and nothing shakes confidence sooner than the want of it. He who keeps his appointments and does not keep you waiting, shows that he has regard for your time as well as his own. The person who is careless about time will be careless about business, and is not to be trusted with matters of importance. It will generaly be found that the men who are habitually behind time are habitually behind success.

"Honesty is the best policy" is an axiom which is upheld by the daily experience of life, integrity being found as successful in business as anywhere else. Integrity of word and deed ought to be the corner stone of all business transactions to the tradesman, the merchant, and manufacturer. It should be what honor is to the soldier and charity to the Christian. We may succeed for a time by fraud, by surprise, by violence, but we can succeed permanently only by means directly opposite. Trade tries character more severely than any other pursuit in life. It puts to severe tests honesty, justice and truthfulness; and men of business who pass through such trials unstained are worthy of great honor. It is possible that the scrupulously honest man may not grow rich so fast as the unscrupulous and dishonest one, but the success will be of a truer kind, earned without fraud or injustice; and, even though a man should be for a time unsuccessful, still he must be honest. Better lose all and save character, for character is itself a fortune.

HINTS FOR CREDIT GIVERS.

Is he married or single?

Does he gamble or speculate?

Satisfy yourself in regard to the habits of his private life.

Is he extravagant or disposed to live up to or beyond his means?

Is he prompt in settlement, and how does he stand in his own trade?

Record and standing as man and merchant should also be considered and thoroughly investigated.

Ascertain if there is anything which would lead him to spend more money than his business can afford.

Has he ever failed? And if he has, under what circumstances and what was the character of the settlement made, if any?

Banks are excellent references. They won't tell you what a man's balance is, but they will tell you, as a rule, in plain English, what they think of him.

If you can give a hint or clue to your commercial agency don't fail to do it. It often opens up new developments which the creditor may be seeking to hide.

The amount of credit given should be governed primarily by the amount of capital invested in the business for which the credit is sought and by the outside resources of the person or persons conducting the same, providing, of course, that such outside resources are in the name or names of the party or parties in interest.—Ex.

PROUD OF HIS CLEAN SHOP.

The Chicago Helper publishes a letter from one of its subscribers, this extract from which is worth more than a passing notice:

"I found this shop just as 'rocky' as many others where I have been, but now I keep it open for inspection to anyone caring to come in. I am proud of my clean shop. In my spare time, instead of playing cards and reading novels, I clean up; and, if I do say it myself, it is always clean, and the boss has a good trade."

In replying to this letter the Helper says that there are those who will see no connection whatever between the features just alluded to ("always clean" and "open for inspection"), and the significant remark with which the extract closes, "The boss has a good trade." Possibly in this case there may be no connection; it may be simply a coincidence. But there are some craftsmen who will see in the clean shop a good trade, a very close and direct connection; some will even go so far as to think of them and speak of them as direct cause and effect, and these latter have very good reasoning and dead loads of experience to substantiate their claim. Another point worth noting in the words of our friend is the encouragement this incident gives to men whose change of situation brings them into badly arranged and unclean shops, and sometimes into contact with bosses who don't care a cent whether the shop is clean or not. It suggests possibilities within the reach of a determined man that means a great deal. This man's boss, unless he be a freak, cannot help seeing the difference in his shop, and if he has any sense will see how much more valuable to him is a clean workman than a slouch.

"Build to-day then, strong and sure,
With a firm and ample base."
—Longfellow.

PUBLIC TASTE AND INDIAN TEA.

The arrival of the Moyune on Tuesday with three and a half million pounds of new season's Congou on board gives the trade an opportunity of judging what the first shipment of the new crop is like. Among the cargo were some very superior Ningchows that fetched 1s. 10d. at the first day's sale, though the demand was very slow. Kintucks and Oanfas showed nothing special, and Monings might be included in the same statement. The Coromandel's cargo of scented Capers showed very good quality, and though not in great demand, yet a fourth of the 14,000 boxes found buyers at an average of about 11d. The fact is the public taste has now been so thoroughly educated to Indians and Ceylons that there is not much demand for Chinese sorts, and what there is is steadily declining. Too late John Chinaman has learned the folly of abusing a good market, and though there will always be those who prefer the delicate flavor of high-class Chinese teas, and commoner sorts will be in request for blending purposes, yet the tea of the million will be supplied from our British possessions. Every patriot will be pleased with that fact.—Grocers' Chronicle, London.

Treat properly the children that from time to time enter your store. From the rule first come first served do not exclude the little ones. They are as sensitive on this this point as their parents, and, while they may not have the courage to resent it, they will whisper their complaint in ears that will. And then look out for squalls. You will then discover that the resentment would probably have been less severe had it been the parent instead of the child that you had slighted. To tease a child is even more to be avoided than to slight him. In a good many stores they have neither the inclination nor time for such foolish pastimes. But there are stores nevertheless where such practices are carried on. Children's hats are pulled over their eyes, their ears pulled, salt given them for sugar, and many other practical jokes are played upon them. Every merchant should insist that his clerks discontinue such habits. Extreme familiarity and joke-playing encourage a few children to be saucy and impudent and to take liberties in the store which they should not, but it will be found that the great majority will be offended, and when they are, that they will not return to your store again if they can help it; and when the average child can show cause why he would rather go to Brown's than to Smith's he, as a rule, carries his point. It doesn't pay either to insult or to play practical jokes upon children.

He who is the successful merchant looks after the "littles" as well as the "muckles." In other words, he cultivates the custom of the small buyer as well as of the large buyer. Philip D. Armour, the Chicago millionaire, is an instance of this. His trade is a world-wide one, but notwithstanding this he is ever drumming up new trade. In a town in Western Ontario is a small factory. Among the raw material it uses is glue, and not a great deal either. But the trade of this factory was none too small for Armour to cultivate. More than once has he sent a representative all the way from the "Windy City" to try and secure it; and while the desideratum was not secured at the first attempt the persistency of the firm has at length been rewarded. It is such perseverance and industry as this that has made the name of Phil. D. Armour known the civilized world over. Every merchant or manufacturer may not be able to achieve a reputation as extensive as that of the great Chicagoan or accumulate as many millions of money, but he can, by taking a leaf out of his book, achieve success. And what more than that does a man really need anyhow?

The first cargo and the second consignment of the new crop of Amoy teas arrived in New York Thursday of last week, and the steamer that brought it beat the record by 4 days, 3 hours and 10 minutes. Her name is the Glenogle. She came by way of the Suez Canal, and reached Gibraltar in a little more than 42 days from Amoy. The distance from Gibraltar to New York was accomplished in about 11¼ days. Another steamer, the Ping Suey, left Amoy the same day as the Glenogle with another cargo of tea, but is a few days behind the latter. The Glenogle's cargo consisted of 6,000 tons, and was worth $1,500,000 when she left Amoy, but is worth more than that in New York. About 50 per cent. of the tea brought to the United States is carried by the Pacific Mail steamships, via Panama, and 25 per cent. is received at San Francisco and shipped direct by rail to all eastern points.

After all it is not unlikely that the coming currant crop will be a large one. With damage by earthquakes and the re-appearance of the peronosporos it certainly did look bad for the growers a few months ago. But later investigations have demonstrated that the attacks of the insects were practically confined to the leaves. All authorities seem to agree upon this, and some estimate the yield at 170,000 tons, or about 30 or 40 thousand tons larger than last year.

The Merchants' Review complains that we reproduced from its columns, without crediting, an article on "Facts About Coffee," and it ventures the opinion that it was an oversight. It was, and we presume it was owing to the same cause that Merchant's Review published recently an editoral from THE GROCER on "What Makes a Good Clerk" and omitting to give us credit.

TACT IN BUSINESS.

Business is a game, and a pretty hard one at that as a rule. To play it successfully needs tact. Experience, capital and industry are scarcely as essential.

An officer in the time of war may be as brave as a lion, but unless he is a tactician he will lead himself and his men to destruction. So it is with the merchant who fails to exercise tact. But the difference between the two is this: One has enemies to capture or destroy and the other has friends to capture and preserve as customers.

If the need for this qualification of tact leans more to one than to the other it is towards the merchant. His is a perpetual warfare, and the competition is not only as a rule excessive but not infrequently unfair. Whether it is buying or selling, he needs to be ever planning and scheming. If he cannot buy right he cannot sell right. In the matter of credit it is necessary to determine who shall or who shall not be accorded it; and to do this the exercise of much diplomacy is often demanded.

There are probably some people whose custom the merchant may still desire to retain while, at the same time, he will allow them only a limited credit or no credit at all. The care that needs to be exercised in steering such a course is obvious. Under such circumstances a merchant requires to stop and think well before acting, for an injudicious turn, no matter how slight, may be the means of losing more than one customer, everybody having more or less friends. A customer can be refused credit just as well politely—in fact better than in an unpolite tone. To make an enemy every merchant should studiously avoid, for the more friends he has the better. Even if a person's custom is a matter of unconcern it is just as well to have his good opinion anyhow. And through tact is the only way it can be got.

A good field upon which there is ample room for the exercise of tact, is the varied peculiarities of customers. One likes this and another doesn't like that. Mrs. Brown thinks herself a lady of high degree and wants to be treated as such, while Mrs. Smith is modest and abhors a superfluity of attention. Mr. Jones wants nothing more or less than what he asks for. Press upon him anything in addition and he would be annoyed. With Mr. Robinson the opposite is the case. To suggest that something nice in this or that article is in stock is not infrequently to secure an additional order. Still another custemer is somewhat distant and dislikes familiarity on the merchant's part, while the characteristics of the next that arrives in the store may be the opposite. It is the ability to fathom all these and the tact to handle them that every merchant should acquire. And he can acquire it if he will.

SUGAR REFINERIES AMALGAMATE.

The Nova Scotia, Halifax and Moncton sugar refineries have at last amalgamated. This was decided at a meeting held in Moncton, N. B., last week.

It will be remembered that the necessary power to do so was denied the promoters of the scheme by both the Dominion Parliament and the Nova Scotia Legislature. But what they were denied in Canada they were accorded in England, where incorporation was recently secured under the name of the Acadia Sugar Company with a capital of £600,000.

As incorporated the company takes over the three refineries mentioned, and these are the conditions under which each agrees to lose its identity: The shareholders of the Nova Scotia refinery receive $1,200,000 in stock of the new company, although the Nova Scotia present stock is only $300,000. The Halifax refinery gets $1,000,000 in the new stock and the Moncton $600,000. Besides, it is announced that the new company will issue 6 per cent. mortgage bonds to the amount of half a million dollars to add to the working capital of the combine. John F. Stairs is president. T. E. Kenny, Wily Smith, James Thompson, J. L. Harris and J. A. Humphrey (Moncton), and Messrs Gills, Brand and Cox (Scotland) are the directors. The head office of the company will be in Halifax. T. M. Cutler will be secretary. Under the act of incorporation there must also be an office with a resident secretary in the old country; but Halifax will be the working centre. It is understood that the election for the office of president was a close one, Mr. Stairs being elected by a majority of one over Mr. T. E. Kenny. The reason advanced for amalgamating is that the respective refineries, having more capital, will be able to improve their machinery and thus be placed in a better position to compete with other Canadian companies.

The amalgamation has created a good deal of comment in the country, not so much probably from the fact that an association has been formed as from the fact that it has been accomplished in the face of the negative action of the Parliament of Canada and the Legislature of Nova Scotia. The people are adverse to anything having the least approach to a combine, and more will likely be heard of the matter.

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

"I tell you what it is," said a traveler to me the other day in all seriousness as he laid down a sample of tea, "a few of us outside travelers have got to make up for the losses the house makes in the city. You may laugh if you like, but by jove it's true. If this house here were to leave city trade alone—that is I mean stop trying to get new business here and make a pick of the good men—it would be a good deal off at the end of the year, while now the firm is ever telling us that we're losing money.

A traveler thus sized up the situation to me: "The farmers had not got through with their hay when their fall wheat was upon them, and now they have got their peas and oats in addition to look after. As a consequence the farmers are extremely busy and scarcely one of them is to be seen in the towns. In such sections business is at a standstill. On the other hand, where the crops have not matured so fast, business is better."

"Yes," said a starch man to me Saturday, "a good business has been doing this season in starch. Compared with last year I think it is equally as good, and then I fancy that merchants stocked themselves up pretty well while the low prices prevailed"

* * *

"Do you know the grocers in this town don't dress their windows with dairy products enough," said an Englishman to me recently. "In the Old Country we pay a good deal of attention to this matter, and I don't see why it can't be done here. You give a good, tasty man a supply of butter, eggs and cheese, with a few cans of canned goods and other things thrown in, and he'll make a nice window, I can tell you. Of course it would have to be changed soon, but all the merchants are telling us business is quiet, and this would only be a little extra employment for them."

"I hear some kicking now and then from country merchants because of the injury they receive from the sale of bankrupt stocks in their towns," said a wholesaler the other day. "Now I really think that they have themselves to blame in a good many instances. For instance, there was So and So's stock in Blankville. It sold at 65c. on the dollar to an outsider, who, ten chances to one, will sell it in the same town to the injury of other merchants. Now this is what I want to get at: Couldn't the merchants up there have got their heads together and bought up that stock. It would have been worth more to them than to the fellow that bought it. But supposing that they had lost $10 apiece, that would not be so much as they probably will now if the stock is sold off as bankrupt stocks usually are by the itinerant merchants."

LET US HAVE CLEAN STORES.

DEAR GROCER,—It is computed by excellent authorities that the Grocers' Association cleared about two hundred dollars by their recent enjoyable excursion, and as I have no doubt that the excellent officers and managers are at a loss as to how to dispose of this surplus, I wish to hereby suggest a method of disposal both useful and to the point.

We have too long put off a certain duty of stimulation to higher ideals among us. There is a higher plane to which each and all can rise with profit and pleasure; and it is to this point that all associations should direct their attention. In the grocery trade there are several points of vantage, not yet occupied by the average trader; notably, that of complete and captivating cleanliness. Of all the things necessary to be cleanly handled, surely edibles are first and foremost, and to this point I venture to say least attention is paid. Having thus cleared the way, allow me to suggest the following method of encouraging clean stores in this city.

The Grocers' Association shall offer a series of three prizes of the value respectively of one hundred, seventy-five and twenty-five dollars, to be known as the "Premiums for Neatness, 1893-94," and to be awarded as follows: The Grocers' Executive Committee shall empower the president of the Association to appoint a secretly named committee of three, one a grocer, one a clerk, and one an outsider not in the business, and none of the three to be interested in the competition; and this jury thus appointed shall constitute the final jury of award from whose decision there shall be no appeal. This committee shall visit at any time, any store within city limits, at such times as they may find convenient, without, however, giving any hint, or causing the same to be given, to the proprietor, of such visit.

Upon such visitation, I would suggest that a standard of 100 be agreed upon divided as follows:

1.—General effect of store front and doorway with goods, arrangement, clean windows, doors, etc., 10.

2.—General arrangement, inside, having no regard to quality of fixtures, but rather to cleanliness of counters, drawers, scoops, scales, refrigerators, and so forth; especially the liability of goods selling quickly with such arrangements, 10.

3.—State of back warehouse, freedom from empty barrels, boxes, and rubbish to be duly considered; also, convenience of stock when wanted, protection of open barrels from flies, dust, etc., and general handiness of reception and disposal of goods on arrival, 10.

4.—State of cellar, cleanliness of all measures, convenience of access to open barrels, racks for jars, water sinks for hasty washing of same, regularity of arrangement of stock (after open), state of fruit cleaners and receptacles for holding same before and after cleaning, method of ventilation, etc., 10.

5.—Delivery department, cleanliness of stable, wagons, harness, men and horses; convenience of system in vogue, wagon books, slips and order forms, 10.

6.—General appearance of counter full of orders before checking off, neatness of parcels, method of completion of orders requiring special items not in stock, order of piling orders and general make-up when loaded on wagon truck, 10.

7.—State of store after business is through and store is about to be locked up, 10.

8. State of store Saturday at or about noon, 10.

9.—Any personally arranged novelty for facilitating business, 10.

10.—Make-up of clerks and manager, taking into account bearing towards customers, methods of work and quickness of same, also neatness, 10.

This makes 100 marks in all, and while in such a crude form many will easily suggest changes which will be no doubt advisable, I am sure that I have indicated enough to ensure at least a good discussion and at least a sound, practical plan. Of course, it is quite possible that a little better plan for selecting a jury could be evolved, as I think of a half dozen other ways myself, but the only thing to guard against is lack of time for the jury to visit and compare. This, I think, could be met by taking at least six months for consideration. That complete fairness would reign I have no doubt, for we have many worthy grocers who would not be interested, many clerks who are splendid judges of all of these things, and many customers who would be glad to act, providing, of course, that plenty of time were given in order not to unduly encroach upon valuable time.

In regard to the awards, cash might be given if thought desirable, but this is after all a matter of detail. None of our grocers would object to a "cleanliness" trophy, and I am sure all of us would be the better for a vivid fear of secret inspection by unknown judges, for goodness knows, our premises in certain well-known cases defy description.

I am serious in suggesting this affair, Mr. Editor, and earnestly hope that a good discussion will ensue, and that our Association will awake to some of its possibilities as a useful factor in trade and its stimulation. Yours, etc.,

STRAIGHT MOYUNE.

REMEDY FOR THE TELEPHONE EVIL.

DEAR GROCER,—"The Grocer's Telephone," is a great nuisance to him sometimes, as your correspondent, "C.T.," so well described in your issue of July 28. Permit me to offer a remedy for such growing evils. Of course, a grocer is in business to do business, and he never should forget that fact. And he should seize hold of every opportunity to push his business whenever he sees the chance. Now, when Mr. A. rings up on the telephone asking the grocer if he will deliver a message for him, he can politely say "Yes, most happy," and so on, taking down the particulars carefully, and promising to fulfil the instructions promptly, but before allowing Mr. A. to leave the 'phone, the grocer should not forget his own business, and that he has had the phone placed there to help him sell his goods, so he should gently remind Mr .A. of this fact, commencing something after this fashion: "Oh, by-the-bye, Mr. A., just while you are at the phone, excuse me. Your wife was speaking about tea the last time she was here; I have the new season's tea in stock now. I had better send you a pound of our choicest Japans. They are much finer drawing teas than last year; and that Mocha coffee which you were so pleased with, I have another excellent roasting of the same coffee. Shall I send just a pound over with this order? Thank you. And your wife was saying that she was not quite pleased with the last butter which was sent. It has been very trying, I can assure you, to get good butter to please my customers, but I have now some of that choice creamery which you like so much. I had better send you, say two pounds, I suppose, and you can tell Mrs. A. that I will reserve her a few pounds until she comes over. You were asking for some perfectly fresh eggs which you could rely upon, to be eaten for breakfast. These which I have just received from an old reliable farmer I can recommend as being perfectly fresh. Shall I say 3 or 6 dozen? You had better secure them now. And I want you to try a sample package of the new breakfast food which is so highly spoken of, and so particularly recommended for dyspeptics and invalids. I shall send you a package, free of charge, with this order, and you will oblige me very much by letting me know how you and Mrs. A. like it. Oh, Mr. A., I was just writing you this evening asking if it would be convenient for you, without putting yourself about at all, to oblige me with a cheque, as it will help me to meet my engagements, which are very heavy this coming week. I am sure you will pardon me for thus reminding you, but as you expressed some time ago I was never to feel backward in asking you for a cheque at any time. I am now about compelled to do so, as money is so dreadfully hard to get. Oh, yes, I will send the boy right away with your message. Is there anything else I can do for you? Oh, thank you. It's very warm, isn't it? Good-day."

Now, Mr. A., after a conversation of this character will be led to think and meditate and perhaps come to the conclusion that you keep a telephone for business, and that you wait upon your customers for the purpose of doing business, and so he will be impressed with this fact, that if he does not want to buy anything over the telephone at your store he had better try someone who doesn't sell groceries.

Now, regarding the other cases, they are a little more difficult to choke off so politely, but I would suggest two things as remedies: First, have a printed card with plain letters stating the charge for using the' phone, say, "10c. for the privilege of using this 'phone, and if kept in use ten minutes or longer 25c. will be charged." Hang the card near the 'phone or tack it upon it. Of course you will know your customers, and they will not be slow in asking you if you intend demanding the charge, but on no account would I break the rule to strangers, without it was something very important, such as an accident happening, or a fire breaking out, or someone requiring a doctor, etc. If you think that plan a little too severe, then try this one: After giving permission to use the 'phone don't forget they are strangers and have to buy groceries from some one, and as you are in business to catch strangers for trade as well as supplying your customers, keep your eye upon them until they finish with the 'phone, then tackle them at once politely, either by presenting your card, asking for a share of their patronage, and that you deliver goods to any part of the city or town, showing them something attractive which you have for sale, and endeavoring, in a business-like way to impress them with the fact that you are obliging, and that you keep store to do business, as well as a telephone to oblige strangers without charge. I was in Buffalo last week, and stayed at the Tift house for dinner. I wanted to use the telephone to save me a journey, which it did. I asked leave to use it, and I was shown into the visitors' box, and there I saw the terms for using the 'phone, which was 10 cents. I paid it cheerfully, with a feeling that I had got the worth of my money, and that I was perfectly independent and free from any obligation to the Tift house, although I was pleased and thankful for the convenience. The sooner we understand these things aright the better it will be for all parties concerned.

Yours, etc.,

STEPHEN HUSTWITT.

EDUCATION OF CLERKS.

One objection to the sell-everything plan, as applied to the retail grocery trade, is that any material increase of the number of outside articles handled by grocers would make it very difficult for them to acquire an intimate knowledge of the properties and qualities of the goods in their stocks. There is something to be said for this objection, but it would have more weight if a general knowledge of groceries were possessed by every member of the trade. The fact is, the assortment of goods in the average grocer's stock has grown so rapidly in recent years that it has become very difficult for a busy dealer to inform himself regarding the merits of the various brands of proprietary goods in the market. It is not an easy matter even to post one's self on staples. How many grocers are good judges of teas? There are dealers, successful dealers, too, that do not know the difference between oolong and congou tea; have never felt the need of familiarizing themselves with teas, but rely upon salesmen in purchasing the goods.

When a dealer is not well posted in staple groceries, yet manages to make money, the above-noted objection to the handling of goods out of the regular line certainly loses much of its force. And yet, in selling as in buying goods, there is no information so valuable to grocers as knowledge of the grades and properties of his goods. He can not only buy to better advantage when he knows the goods thoroughly, but can speak more confidently of their merits to consumers, and therefore produce more impression upon the latter than if he repeats the usual parrot-like talk of some dealers and their assistants, when the merits of an article are questioned. To produce thoroughly posted grocers it is necessary to thoroughly educate the clerks, as it is from the army of store assistants that the ranks of the storekeepers, constantly being depleted by the perils of a business career, are day by day recruited. It will pay retail grocers to encourage their employees to acquire, in their leisure hours, as much information as possible regarding the goods in stock. If not able themselves to teach the clerks what we may call the higher branches of a trade education, they can at least, put them in the road to obtain it, by allowing them to test samples of goods that are submitted by salesmen, and by furnishing them with an opportunity to read a good trade paper, as well as permitting the clerks to experiment with samples of the goods in stock when trade is less active than usual. The better posted the clerks, the better value they will be to the employer, besides being better equipped for future careers of usefulness as proprietors. A system of apprenticeship by which boys could be bound for a term of years to employing grocers of long practical experience would undoubtedly yield better results than the present system, or rather, lack of system, under which boys are admitted to the grocery business, by affording the sucking grocery clerk a sufficient period of time in which to acquire a trade education, and at the same time enable an employer to obtain a more substantial reward than at present for the time and trouble that it has cost him in teaching boys the rudiments of the business. Notwithstanding the tendency of young clerks to take their newly acquired information to a better market, and leave their instructors in the lurch, we believe that for the reason given above it will pay dealers to push their assistants forward on the road to knowledge. Even if the clerk takes a position with a competitor of the employer, the efforts of the latter will not have been entirely wasted. In the meantime some benefit must have been derived from the instruction afforded the beginner; he has become a more valuable employe, and his earning power is greater. The employer, also, has the option of retaining his services, by meeting the clerk's views on the question of salary, and thus securing for himself the fruits of his wise and far-sighted policy. A point worth remembering is, that in the education of subordinates, useful information that otherwise would not be gained is often acquired by the instructor.—Merchants' Review.

CONGESTED STORES.

The grocer's store of the future—how will it differ from that of the present day? As much, probably, as the present stores differ from those of a generation ago, but in regard to one point we can speak confidently. If the increase of the number of special brands continues in the same ratio during the next two decades, the grocery of twenty years hence will cover a much greater superficial area than the average store of to-day covers. Already the congestion of many city grocers' stores has become an evil which loudly calls for a remedy, yet it is proposed that the sidewalk displays of vegetables and fruit be dispensed with and these goods be stored inside the establishments. There is much to be said in behalf of the proposal, but where find room for the green stuff? To add to the storage capacity of grocers' establishments in the cities would require a heavier expense than the dealers perhaps could afford owing to the high rentals of eligible property still, extra room may be essential to give customers space to move about in, and protect ladies' dresses from injury. The reduction in price of many articles, if purchased in certain specified quantities, has a tendency to produce store congestion, yet dealers cannot afford to sacrifice the saving through ordering in large lots. Perhaps a purchasing department of the local associations would furnish relief to the dealers, by buying goods in large lots and distributing them weekly to subscribing members. A small fee could be charged for the storage of the goods and for the agent's time.—Merchants' Review.

THE NEW RICE CROP.

The first of the new rice crop of 1893 has put in an appearance, and although the initial receipts consisted of the insignificant quantity of six sacks of rough rice, which, when cleaned at the mill, yielded less than two barrels of clean product, still the first arrival served to call attention to the fact that the new crop is now near at hand, and that it has from this on to be dealt with as an active factor in determining the supply and demand.

"The present crop," says the New Orleans "Picayune," "will probably not be as large by a considerable amount as its predecessor. There has been a considerable abandonment of rice culture along the river and its tributaries. This, of itself, will make some reduction in the yield. While it is probable that the acreage devoted to rice in the Calcasieu district has not been diminished, the growing season has not been as propitious as was that of last year.

A FEMALE DRUMMER.

We note with interest that a young woman who undertakes to sell groceries on the road is subject to many of the same vicissitudes and trials that her brothers of the grip encounter. Miss M. M. Dyer, who travelled in southeast and central Missouri for the Greeley-Burnham Grocer Co., is now representing the J. M. Houston Grocer Co. in that section. She called at this office just previous to making the change and announced her intention to do so because, when that house was succeeded by the Scudder-Gale Grocer Co., her territory had been intruded upon by a traveller who had somewhat the advantage of her in the fact of his ability to smoke cigars to prove that they were fine smokers and to "cuss" the shipping and bill clerks when anything came in wrong. This traveller had been with the firm for a long time and in the new assignment of territory fell heir to some of her best customers. She had therefore concluded to "change houses," not because of any unsatisfactory treatment, but because she wanted to keep her old customers and the same route.

Miss Dyer has now been travelling in the grocery line about two years and says she likes it. She makes headquarters at Sedalia and Marshall, Mo, and travels in the central and southeastern part of the state.

She states that she likes the outdoor exercise, the constant change and, though competition is strong, that the business agrees with her and that she has gained greatly in strength and health since undertaking the work.

She states that all competitors treat her with the greatest courtesy, as do the merchants.

A few travellers appear to object to the employment of a woman in such a capacity, she says, and have influenced a few merchants to think that way, but that commercial travellers generally are liberal and tolerant and disposed to live and let live.

She states that she rides on freight trains, takes buggy trips and undergoes all the vicissitudes attached to the occupation, and that she has established such an acquaintanceship that many of her customers invite her to their homes.

She states that she solicits patronage on a strictly business-like basis, that at first she received many complimentary orders because of the novelty of her advent on the road, but that she has given the trade to understand that unless prices and goods offered by her are satisfactory she expects no favors. Miss Dyer is a handsome young lady about 22 years of age, of neat and stylish appearance, good education and refined manners. —Interstate Grocer.

SPECULATION IN PEANUTS.

The history of the peanut market this year has been one unsatisfactory to growers and dealers alike. The crop was not large; in fact, less than in the previous year; but the market has all along lacked the support of an active, vigorous trade, and in spite of the energetic attempts of Southern cleaners to force up prices and maintain them, the feeling has grown steadily easier. Along in the spring peanuts had a remarkable boom, advancing several times successively in the short space of a week, and at one time nearly every day; but this boom soon subsided, and since then the market has ruled very dull and uninteresting. The advance was caused almost entirely by the action of the great Southern houses in sending out bullish reports, refusing to sell but in every limited quantities, and advancing their prices sharply to dealers. Stocks of old peanuts were reported as very light in the large markets of the country, and the growing crop as exceedingly small. The World's Fair was also talked about, and estimates of the large number of peanuts to be used there sent out to the trade. The result in this city was that a perfect fever of speculation sprung up, and dealers bought even on an advancing market in anticipation of reaping a harvest as the season advanced. The price was pushed up from 4c. to 8c. in a short time, and every one seemed to regret that he carried such a light supply; but soon it was discovered that this advance was due more to manipulation than to sound causes, and, unsupported by a good demand, the market declined to 5 to 5¼c., the figures ruling for fancy hand-picked to-day. Dealers who thought they were carrying very light supplies at the time the market was advancing, found them heavy on the decline, and while those who had purchased when the market was low were able to get out whole, those who purchased on the advance were obliged to pocket more or less loss. Since the decline the demand has been very quiet, showing but little improvement from month to month, and at the time of writing the Southern dealers are endeavoring to steady prices by combination, with what result remains to be seen.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

SPECIALTIES VS. STAPLES.

Considering the comparatively small demand for any single article in the shape of luxuries, or what are known in the trade as fancy groceries, it may appear ridiculous to advocate the pushing of such goods and the relaxation of efforts for the sale of the staples, says Merchants' Review. What is the good of pushing the sale of French vegetables, we imagine some one asking, when the total annual imports of these goods amount to only a million dollars or so? There are not enough to go around, it would seem. Well, in the first place, there is little to be gained by pushing staples. Take sugar, and you will find that the full limit of the demand is nearly reached each season. That is to say, only a certain quantity of sugar will be eaten each year whether you sell it cheaply or dearly. You may take some trade from your neighbor, but what does it profit you to do so at the present margin of profit on the article? With high class food products—the luxuries—the case is very different, the per capita consumption depending chiefly upon the manner in which such goods are pressed for sale by the distributers. It is certain that the per capita consumption of, say, fine jams could be enormously increased, with benefit to the consumer's health and without perceptible injury to his pocket.

Now, when one or two articles in the fancy grocery line are pushed for sale in any locality, and become popular, the tendency is for the demand for other high class food products to increase. The hog and hominy feeder remains satisfied with his pork and corn diet as long as his palate is not allowed to come in contact with a more civilized diet. But extend his menu by adding to it some delicacy, and the pork and hominy loses its savor; he then is ready to appreciate the merits of other delicacies, and his daily fare grows more diversified. Thus the sale of one luxury paves the way for a general demand for that class of goods, and as the consumption increases so does the production. No dealer need fear that the supply will run short. The fact that the specialties pay a better profit than the staples is, of course, a point of prime importance.

OLD STORY IN THREE CHAPTERS.

1. Farmer Barker, of Barker's Corners, mortgages his farm for $1,800, and tells his neighbors that he proposes to stock the place with blooded cattle.

2. Farmer Baker, with the $1,800 in his pocket, arrives in New York and negotiates with an affable gentleman, who assures him that the stock in question was printed on plates stolen from the Government and cannot be distinguished from the genuine.

3. Farmer Barker is now hoeing corn at $1 a day for neighbor Smart, who recently purchased the Barker farm at a foreclosure sale.—Boston Journal.

The crowd of happy faces on booard shpoke well for the efforts of the committee in selling tickets, an' Frid Roberts of Yonge shtreet an' Honesht Martin McMillan were shmilin' happy, loike Biddy Doolan's new baby wid a tin rattle, an' Mishter Gibson's face was lookin' loike a new plowed fallow field, so full of wrinkles o' joy wus it. Mishter Gibson was handsomely drissed this day, he wore an iligant broight rid badge (which the sosiety paid fur, av coorse). Did yez iver see Mishter Gibson rale happy like, Moike? He wur sittin' in the bow o' the boat shmokin' wan of thim Mungrel cigars and lookin' up into the Captain's box wid a complate sinse of proprietorship painted all over his ixprissive Anglo-Saxon head. Mishter White, the College sthreet grosher, also wore a beautiful rid badge of autority and loike the dacent Christian man he is, he tuk along the whole blissid family, closhed the shtore intoirely, frunt door an' back. Oi thought Oi had seen all the rid badges on boord, but when I wus goin' down to the lunch counter fur a bit o' atins Oi run up agin the two Marmions, both on em wid rid badges an' lookin' purty loike. Mishter A. G. Oi musht congratulate the management of the electric railway on the very rapid toime they made from Queenshton to the Falls, they covered the entoire dishtance almost 12 moiles in two minutes liss than three hours. All the mimbers of the association were duly grateful fur the iligant shlape we had on booard the cars, but if they don't put on shlapin cars nixt year Oi will not patronoise them any more.

Win we got to the Falls we wandered about the place an enjoyed oursilves imminsely dodgin' the hack droivirs and the fallin' shpray. Some o' the groshers put on rubber shuits and wint benathe the fallin' waters of the Horse Shoe Falls. It musht have been a surprise fur some o' the mimbers to git a cold water bath. Other mimbers o' the association shpint money lavishly, buyin' green apples at foive cents fur six, some who hed been savin' up their Yankee quarters were gettin' even wid Uncle Sam an' his Orish Indians buyin' bead shlippers and Buffalo lager, an' gettin' done up on both.

Oi wint wid a party o' silict gintlemen to see young Misther McDonell, of Owen Sound, walk across the gorge at the Suspension Bridge, an' Moike, Oi will niver do it agin. Oi filt all the toime like an accessory before the fact in a murther thrial; an' me payin' tin cints to see a lad make a fool of himself!

Lots more of the groshers an' their frinds wandhered ahout through the great Oliver Mowat Queen Victoria Niagara Falls Park, an' all who vishited the park enjoyed thimselves complately, excipt wan young man who was arreshted by the polace fur trying to shteal part of the name of the Park. The judge foined him—not fur tryin' to shtale the name, but for his clumsiness in not gettin' away wid it.

Afther wanderin' around fur about three hours and continually shtumblin' in the way of the cab droivers, an' botherin' these gintlemen, no doubt, we took the fasht electric service at 3 o'clock back to Queenston, maning to catch the Chippewa at 6 o'clock (this wus purty close toime, Moike, but yez know Oi always run close). We would have caught the boat all roight, but as the managemint of the railway was out playin' tennis, we shtopped at ivery switch to pick grane paches in the orchards until the boy we had sint along the road ahead had come back to tell us that the track was clear. At wan place where we shtopped Oi notished Mr. Corrie, the secretary, tryin' to shtale grane paches in an orchard, but the owld lady owner shtopped him an' made him pay tin cints a pace for his takins. Misther Corrie had on a badge, too, an' was the manes of our makin' such fasht toime back to the boat. At lasht whin we caught the boat she was in the middle of the river, wid her nose pointin' to Toronto, so we had to wait for the nixt boat, the Chicora. Oi belave we would hev caught the boat afther all but our car was heavily handicapped—we had a rid-headed girl, a cross-eyed man, an owld man wid a white plug hat, and Mr. Corrie on booard, and no self-respectin' car can make toime wid so many freaks on booard to wanst.

Afther gettin' on booard the Chicora an' shpindin' about wan hour at Lewishton gettin' on coal (oi suppose they coal up there to save the duty) we sailed away down the beautiful river an' across the loveliest bit o' wather on earth (barrin', af coorse, Killarney). Oi moight mention we had mushik on booard, at least a gintleman towld me it wus musick, but oi couldn't undershtand it at all, the iligant, picturesque, short-clothed band of the Highland Regiment was playin'. Oi didn't see the grate Col. John I. Davidson there, but he is a canny man, he knew the band was on booard. It was a blessin', Moike, they didn't take along wan af the pipers, Oi honeshtly belave three-quarters of the people would have committed suicide Oi am extramely fond of the bagpipes, an' the further they are away from me the shwater they sound—about fourteen moiles off is an enjoyable dishtance for me.

Well, Moike, take it all in all, the excursion was a grate success, an' iverybody enjoyed thimselves immensely, an' a grate deal of money musht have been made by the Association, more power to their elbow. The committee wus viry attintive (when wan could foind thim) and pointed out all the intereshting points on the road as we walked along on the throlley. Oi inquired of Mishter McCullough when pashin' Gineral Brock's monumint, what killed the Giniral, he towld me he fell off the top of the monument on to a shtone close by—he towld me he had seen the shtone too. Oi forgot to mintion your ould frind Stephen Hustwitt, the grate tea reformer, was not wid the byes, he was home writin' letters to the News on the Sunday shtrat car question, an' publickly confessin his sins an' thankin' God that he wus not loike "yonder Pharisees." Oi would loike to hear Father McCarthy's opinion of such a confission. Well, Moike, as it is gettin' late, an' Oi have to git up early to-morrow to bye me raspberries at the fruit market, Oi will close wid kindest regards an' hopes for a shpeedy reploy.

Yure frind,

DINNY CALLAHAN.

(The bandmaster of the 48th Highlanders states that not only could his men not find room on board to play, but what was worse they were located in a part of the boat devoid of light, and consequently all the playing they did was without music. Furthermore, he claims that at the Falls no provision was made by the committee for the band, and the same was the case in regard to supper. In fact, practically no attention was paid to the band. This naturally nettled the members, and in consequence they were not in a humor to play on board the Chicora on the return trip.—Ed. GROCER.)

The Moncton sugar refinery has suspended operations, pending the amalgamation with the Halifax refineries.

A total of 7,228,650 bushels of wheat were inspected at Winnipeg for the year ending July 31. Scarcely half graded No. 1 and No. 2 hard.

Macdonald's store at Marden was broken into Sunday night. The burglars effected an entrance by a cellar window, then through two doors opening into the store above. Once in the store they made themselves comfortable, ate some crackers and cheese, took off their old shoes and stockings and put on new ones.

A numerously attended meeting of the Hop Growers' Association was held at Picton the other day. The business before the meeting was the adoption of a standard hop box for measuring hops in. The Dominion Government was requested to pass an act of parliament legalizing the box at present most generally in use.

The Nelson members of the South Kootenay Board of Trade have now elected their officers for the ensuing year with a view to active work. The Board strongly urges the building of a trunk road from Nelson to New Denver, and the creation of an independent Customs district for Kootenay Lake, reporting directly to Ottawa and not through New Westminster.

A cheese board has been established at Shelburne for the purpose of centralizing the cheese trade of the district. Nine factories were represented at their last meeting. Three buyers were present. The representatives of the factories sold at prices ranging from 8¾ to 9¼c. At this meeting 1,222 boxes were boarded and all were sold.

For small dealers it is well to remember that celery can be kept a week or longer by first rolling it in dark brown paper, then pinning it in a towel and laying away in a cool, dark place Before preparing it for the table place it in a pan of cold water and let it remain for an hour. Thus kept, the celery will bleach to a considerable extent and be finer than when first purchased.—Ex.

Coal was advanced to $5.75 in Toronto Friday. The miners are now said to be insisting rigidly upon cash, and cash only, refusing to take the very safest paper ; and the necessity thus imposed has kept the trade very quiet and restricted the number of orders. The depression, however, by lessening the demand for coal, will in all likelihood keep down the price.

Mr. Wm. Hood, collector for the McLean Publishing Co., Toronto, who publish five trade papers, came in on the noon train last Saturday to collect $40 due the firm in the usual small sums made up of subscriptions and in half an hour had the whole amount in his pocket. He says that in no other city, town or village on the continent had he a similarly satisfactory experience, and he went away with an exceedingly high opinion of Orillia tradesmen.—Packet, Orillia.

An important joint circular will shortly be issued to London, Ont., merchants and manufacturers by the C. P. R. and G. T. R. The circular gives notice that, commencing with the first of next month, all credits will be withdrawn. The meaning of this is that shopmen will have to be paid on delivery in place of allowing accounts to run to a settling day. Much inconvenience will be the result, but the railroads claim that the privilege has been abused, and that the new step was rendered necessary in consequence.

From present appearances it would pay to put another vessel on the Canadian-Australian line immediately, as almost a full cargo has already been obtained for the SS. Miowera on her return trip, although she does not sail until August 16th. Besides the 25 cars of machinery coming from Chicago, two cars are now en route from the Massey-Harris Co.'s factory at Toronto, and three more are coming from San Francisco, so that freight is being taken away from the San Francisco line. There are also 1,000 cases of salmon waiting shipment, while there will be further shipments of lime and shingles. All the available room in the cold storage chamber has already been taken. Twenty passengers by this vessel have also been booked.—News, Vancouver.

CURATIVE GROCERIES.

If this thing keeps on the grocers will have to add to their signs "and druggists," remarks a contemporary. The curative qualities of the articles sold as groceries are developing so rapidly that it now takes an article a month to describe them. A dispensatory for groceries, as well as druggists, will next be in order.

It is now clear that we have long been taking medicine without knowing it. Even when we eat nuts we are unconsciously curing some disease. The oleaginous seeds or nuts are a class of foods containing in general no starch, but are rich in fat and nitrogenous elements in the form of vegetable albumen and casein. In composition the nuts rank high in nutrative value, but owing the oily matter which they contain are difficult of digestion unless reduced to a very minutely divided state before or during mastication. The fat of nuts is similar in character to cream, and needs to be reduced to the consistency of cream to be easily digested. Nuts should be used at the regular meal time, and not partaken of as a tidbit between meals. It is likewise well to eat them in connection with some hard food to insure thorough mastication.

Nuts, as well as most other seeds, contain a large proportion of nitrogenous matter, even more than most grains. The pea-nut, for example, contains 28.3 per cent. of this element, which is more than any other food substance, either animal or vegetable Some nuts are more digestible when cooked than when served raw, and, owing to the large proportion of fat which nuts contain, they, may be utilized in a variety of ways in connection with other food materials, to make pleasing and palatable dishes.

Walnut, pecan and hickory nut meats may be easily reduced to a meal by chopping quite fine and afterwards pressing with a potato masher through a wire sieve or a very fine colander. Such nut meals may be served as a dressing on grains, or may be utilized in the preparation of numerous breads, soups, purees, etc.

Cinnamon is the most effective antiseptic —so it is said at least—that is known. "No living germs of disease can resist the antiseptic power of essence of cinnamon for more than a few hours," is the conclusion announced by M. Chamberland as the result of prolonged research and experiment in Pasteur's laboratory. It is said to destroy microbes, and M. Chamberlain says a decoction of cinnamon should be taken by persons living in places affected by typhoid or cholera.

In view of the possibility of a cholera epidemic there may be the saving of many lives in these facts about cinnamon. At lsast, they should be kept in mind.

THE QUESTION OF SUGAR.

An absolute forecast of the future course of sugar values cannot be given with any degree of certainty at the moment. This at least is the general opinion among traders in Montreal expressed to our correspondent in the course of his preambulations. Advices from across the water state that although the general rains on the Continent have broken the drought they are rather late to offset its influences, and the anticipation is that the beet crop will fall short of 1892. According to another authority the shortage in the visible supply of raw stock in Europe and America is some 200,000 tons odd. On the other hand consumption does not appear to have been much checked so far by the higher prices which have ruled. The British trade returns for the first six months of the year give 695,220 tons, against 696,356 tons for the same period last year, and deliveries from four leading ports in the United Kingdom were 404,536 tons, against 408,563 tons for last year, while stocks remaining at the same ports were only 102,806 tons against 131,563 tons in 1892. Neither does the American consumption appear to have fallen off, as the imports to the 1st of June totalled 776,818 tons against 774,868 tons last year, whilst the stock now on hand is only estimated at 120,000 tons against 150,000 tons at the same date in 1892.

In this connection it is worthy of remark that when prices of raw sugar have materially advanced it has been collected from all quarters of the globe and brought into the great commercial centres. This year appears to be an exception, no doubt because large stocks do not exist in the East, which generally furnishes the most (at least to European consumers); and secondly, because the advance paid on the low brown's produced there has not been sufficiently remunerative to induce merchants there to divert supplies from those Eastern markets. The advance on these low grades has been only half that paid on other descriptions, no doubt because refiners have a decided objection to turn out this sugar in any large quantity for fear of being caught with too big a load of it. Therefore the higher prices ruling during the present summer have not attracted larger arrivals either on this continent or in Europe. In fact in connection with the latter the British Board of Trade returns give a falling off in the imports of sugar into the United Kingdom for June alone of 26,000 tons. Sugar men in Montreal argue from this—and say that outside authorities back them up—that consumption is beginning to tell on the smaller stocks, which has not been appreciable up to the present because holders have been freely taking advantage of the augmented values ruling, and that the fact will become more apparent.

The latest estimate of the visible supply of raw sugar in Europe and America would seem to bear them out. It is placed at 830,936 tons against 1,055,981 tons in 1892 and 1,036,081 tons in 1891. The problem that is keeping people guessing is how the situation will develope in the near future and where the supplies are to be had to make up this big shortage. In fact the greatest puzzle of all to the optimistically disposed is the fact that since the dimunition in stock became most noticeable prices have begun to go back. They can only attribute it to the check caused by the recent Australian bank failures and the influence they had on Mincing-lane causing sharp realization, and the general financial depression and peculiar position of money matters south of the line. They are afraid also of the industrial position and the fact of so many workers being out of employment. No one feels disposed to make any predictions therefore so that GROCER'S readers will have to draw their own conclusions from the facts mentioned.

THE TRAVELERS GETTING READY.

The members of the City Travelers' Association are making elaborate arrangements for their promenade concert on the steamer Chippewa on Monday night, Aug. 21. Glionna's string band of 30 musicians has been engaged for the occasion. The committee have arranged that the promenade conert shall be held in one part of the boat, dancing in another and card playing and smoking in still another, while each will have its band of musicians in attendance. The following are the members of the committee: Messrs. J. Owens, chairman; W. F. Daniels, 360 Givens street, secretary; A M. Piper, treasurer; W. Bremner, R. Maxwell, Ben Dack, S. H. Moore, W. Soper, F. Gallow, J. A. Dickson, J. A. McGuane, W. H. Steele, S. G. Martin, J. Mortimer. Tickets will be given out by all these gentlemen.

CANNED GOODS GOSSIP.

The steamer Cariboo and Fly has returned from Skeena with 2,000 cases of salmon from the Royal Canadian Packing Company and 37,000 feet of lumber from the same company's mills for the Sound. The salmon run on the Skeena is very poor, and it is likely that several canneries will close.—News, Vancouver, July 26.

The Fraser River canneries are thinking seriously, so it is said, of replacing the disgracefully poor B. C. salmon exhibit at the World's Fair by a really adequate set of specimens.

The fishing record of the Fraser River, says a British Columbia paper, was beaten recently by two men in the employ of the Phœnix Cannery, who landed 727 salmon from one day's fishing for two men and one net. The canners are catching up with the supply, the catches not having made as big an average yesterday as the two days before. There was a big catch all along the river yesterday, and the fishermen say the run has only just fairly begun, and that it will keep on increasing until about August 10th. There is little doubt now that the pack of this season will more than top the record of B. C. salmon fishing and that of the Fraser River.

The hauls have not totalled more than an average of 20 fish to the boat per day, except out on the sand heads, where several of the boats have brought in over 100 each. The main run does not seem to have reached far up the river, and the theory is that a big shoal is playing in the warm water of the sand heads, where all big catches are made, and may come in at any time. A carload will be sent east on Sunday morning to New York, of the first sockeyes, and after that as often as that weight of salmon is ready in the storage.—News, Vancouver.

EFFECTIVE FLY POISONS.

The following story is told by a German satirist in relation to the adulterating propensities of the day: "There were four flies, and as it happened they were hungry one morning. The first settled upon a sausage of singularly appetizing appearance, and made a hearty meal, but he speedily died of intestinal inflammation, for the sausage was adulterated with analine. The second fly breakfasted upon flour, and forthwith succumbed to contraction of the stomach, owing to the inordinate quantity of alum with which the flour had been adulterated. The third fly was slacking his thirst with the contents of the milk jug, when violent cramps suddenly convulsed his form and he soon gave up the ghost, the victim of chalk adulteration. Seeing this, the fourth fly, muttering to himself, 'the sooner it is over, the sooner to sleep,' alighted upon a moistened sheet of paper exhibiting the counterfeit presentment of death's head and the inscription 'Fly Poison,' and firmly applying the tip of his proboscis to this device, the fourth fly drank to his heart's content, growing more vigorous and cheerful at every mouthful, although expectant of his end. But he did not die. On the contrary, he throve and waxed fat. You see even the fly poison was adulterated."—Ex.

Eggs are worth more than silver, annual output and values being considered, but the hen doesn't ask Uncle Samuel for free coinage.—Ex.

VINEGAR.

Condiments are such important accessories of food and feeding that the table without its cruet stand is somewhat suggestive of the play of Hamlet minus the Prince of Denmark. And in a journal like the Caterer, which deals so largely with the twin sciences of cookery and gastronomy, it will not be out of place to consider briefly the production, nature and dietetic value of the articles which collectively form the cruet. We commence with vinegar, which is the staple manufacture of the eminent firm of Slee, Slee & Co., of Horselydown.

Pure vinegar, from its nature and the material from which it is derived, is a sort of first-cousin to beer, since malt is the chief basis of all the best and purest kinds, so that it contains all the virtues of barley, transmuted from its natural alcoholic form into a "cloyless sauce" that sharpens the appetite and aids the digestion. Vinegar, forming as it does the basis of nearly all the piquant and pleasant sauces, and most of the condiments, is not only good itself, but the cause of goodness in others. Of course it must be understood that we are only speaking of malt vinegar, which is the best and purest that can be produced. There are vinegars and vinegars. Bad wine can be and is transformed into vinegar, but the best kind can only be obtained from the blood of Sir John Barleycorn.

The French name vinaigre itself points to wine as being the original source of supply—vin, wine; and aigre, sour. Cider and a variety of other peculiar products have also been turned into vinegar of a certain kind; and years ago some putrefactive fungoid growth, yclept the vinegar plant, was in great request among a certain class of housekeepers, who preferred a cheap and nasty acid which they called vinegar. Another so-called variety is concocted by unscrupulous manufacturers from nitric or crude acetic acid diluted and flavored. Such vile compounds resemble vinegar as much as poisonous chemical "fizz" resembles champagne, or as the "Champagne Charley" of the music-halls a gentleman.

The name of the first benefactor of his kind, who evolved malt vinegar, like the name of the man who ate the first oyster, has become lost in the mist of ages. Possibly the germ of the discovery was due to a happy accident—a thunderstorm, which will turn small beer, and the eyes of ducks upwards, may have stimulated or given the cue to some inventive genius. Vinegar is essentially an artificial, and not, like other acids, a natural product, and differs from the latter in this respect, that, whereas the distillation of all other acids only yields pure water as the distillate, that of vinegar yields a strong pungent acid, generally known as white wine vinegar. The processes of vinegar making are essentially scientific, and the art and mystery has been well preserved from generation to generation by the leading makers. Chambers, writing in 1783, states that "The method of making vinegar has long been kept a secret among the people of that profession, who bind themselves to each other by oath not to reveal it." In our account of the process of making it must be understood that we do not intend to be exhaustive; this would, to a certain extent, be betraying the secrets of the prison-house which Messrs. Slee confided to our keeping.

The production of malt vinegar is of a far more scientific and delicate nature than that of brewing, for, though the first process is precisely the same as far as the mashing, fermenting, and production of sweet wort is concerned, the conversion of the wort into acetous acid is far more costly and lengthy, inasmuch as it takes many months to complete the process and produce a sound, full-bodied, and delicate flavored vinegar. The operation of nature will not be hurried, though during the whole of those months the liquid has to be carefully watched and tended to insure perfection in the results. It will be seen, therefore, that the capital of a maker is locked up for a very considerable time, especially when, as in this case, cash has to be paid for the raw material, and credit given on the manufactured article.

Next to malt, of course, the most essential component of vinegar is water, on the purity and peculiar qualities of which the chief success of brewing either beer or vinegar depends. In the latter respect, Messrs. Slee, Slee & Co. are peculiarly fortunate in the possession of an artesian well, cased of course, and sunk 210 feet through the surface and 100 feet beyond into the lower chalk formation; this taps an inexhaustible supply of the best quality of water, which possesses all the attributes of that of Burton, being charged with a proportion of sulphate of lime and chlorides. Now the same qualities in the water which produce the high excellence of Burton ale are precisely those which rendered Southwark so famous for its ale long before Burton was thought of. Shaucer constantly sang its praises: "The nappy ale of Southwerk keeps many a gallant from the kirk." A description, therefore, of the Burton water by an eminent medical authority will apply to that from Messrs. Slee's artesian well to a nicety, since the same properties of water that produce the best beer will produce the finest vinegar:

The chemical constitution of these waters explains the fact that these ales speedily become bright and clear, and are fit for use almost as soon as brewed (and that without any artificial fining). The peculiar waters also have the power of extracting a far larger amount of saccharine from the malt."

The elder Darwin made similar remarks at a very much earlier period.

It will readily be inferred that lift and force pumps for the water, wort, and vinegar form an important element in the machinery of the firm under notice. The motive power is supplied by two large boilers, the larger, a tubular one, by Messrs. Cater & Walker, of 50 horse-power, and the smaller, a Cornish one, of 40 horse-power, which drives an engine of 30 horse-power, capable of working higher if required. In addition there is ample reserve of engine power in the event of a break-down, or repairing being required at any time; these supplementary engines are in different parts of the works. One reserve of 8 horse-power is about to be utilized in driving dynamo machines which the firm are erecting for the purpose of adopting the electric lighting system. This innovation, by the way, shows that although Messrs. Slee are a very old firm, they keep moving well in advance of the times.

A well appointed engineers' shop is attached to the premises, as are also the carpenters' shop, cooperage, and bottling departments. The latter two are as important adjuncts to vinegar as to beer brewing. The coal stores are capable of holding over 150 tons, the Welsh smokeless variety being used. The entire works are self-contained and compact in every way. The well-lighted and well-ventilated stables have accommodation for fifteen horses, all in excellent condition, and there are three comfortable houses for the use of the chief clerk, foreman and engineer. The entire works, houses, sheds, workshops and dwelling-houses cover an area of two acres.

What is specially noticeable is the thorough cleanliness that pervades every department, even to the most out-of-the-way part of the works, whilst the vinegar in its crude and finished state gives off an aroma as pleasant and refreshing as it is healthful. Though the works are so extensive, there is comparatively but a small amount of manual labor employed on account of the extensive and almost automatic character of the machinery; this works the hoisting tackle (capable of raising 500 quarters in a few hours), unloads the malt, and eventually delivers it to the bins by a series of elevators known as Jacob's ladders. The malt stores will contain over 1,000 quarters. Machinery is employed, of course, in the mashing and "sparging" operations, as in the pumping, so that in no case do the human hands come into contact with the vinegar in any stage whatever. This is an important feature. The wort is cooled by means of Brotherhood's refrigerators.

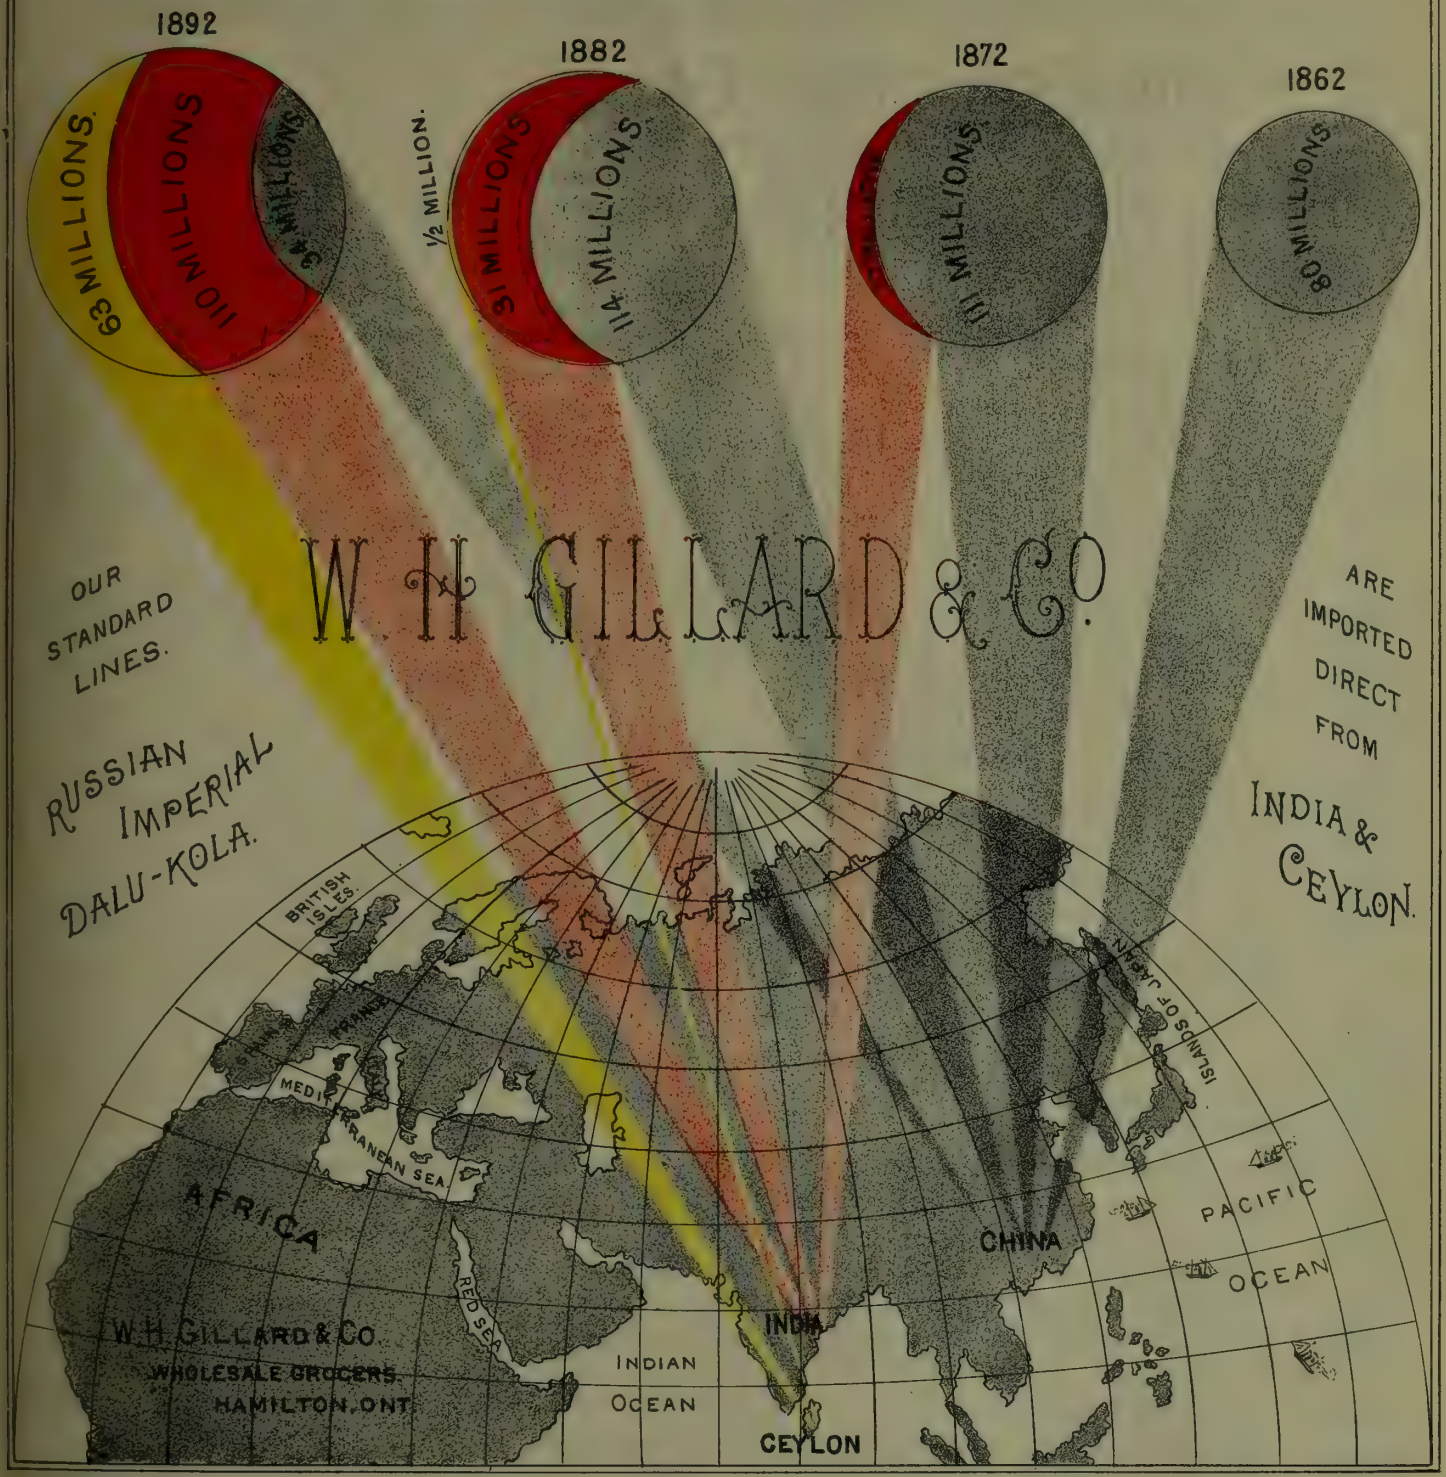
One of the last rooms which we visited was fitted up as a distillery for the production of white, or distilled, vinegar, the worm of the still and all the piping in connection therewith being of silver to avoid all chance of metallic corrosion. We may add that the pumps employed in lifting wort or vinegar have glass tubes and linings. It is needless to say that these works are under the supervision of the excise authorities. Notwithstanding the large extent of ground on which the works stand, the greatest economy exists in the utilization of space. The sixty Brobdignagian vats in which the process of fermentation is developed or the matured production stored, are placed close together. The aggregate capacity of these vats is considerably over half a million gallons. The mash tub is similarly of gigantic capacity. Strength in the construction of the building therefore is of vital importance to enable it to bear the enormous weight of the monster vats. These are supported on arches with inverts specially constructed not only to bear an immense strain but to resist the destructive effects of constant vibration, which is unavoidable where machinery is run night and day throughout the week. The arches, moreover, afford ample ventilation, and secure that coolness and equable temperature which is so essential in all chemical processes.

Notwithstanding all their care, Messrs. Slee had one vat burst some years ago, when the sewers were flushed and disinfected by vinegar. To show the excellence of the cooperage, however, the large vat, which contains 36,581 gallons, was erected in the good old days when George III. was King, temp. 1817. On this occasion a large dinner party was held inside the vat, which was afterwards converted into a ball-room. Ever since then the vat has been used for its legitimate purpose, and, considering the enormous pressure of fluid which these receptacles have to resist, it is remarkable that the firm have only had one accident from bursting to record during a period of over seventy years. We need not go into details, since some of the processes by which acetous fermentation is perfected are peculiar to the firm, and partly because it would necessitate a great deal of scientific detail to explain the operations thoroughly.

A few words as to the personnel of the proprietors may not be out of place. The firm was originally established in 1812 by the father of the present head of the concern, whowas brought up in that good old school which taught that the man of business should be essentially a gentleman, a combination which we regret is unhappily getting very rare indeed. With Mr. Slee, sr., is associated his nephew, Mr. Herbert Slee; a great grandson of the founder is also engaged in the works, which makes the complement of four generations. The younger member, in accordance with the fitness of things, was, at the time of our visit, busily engaged in arranging the latest scientific development of electric lighting, and is watching closely for any new discoveries which may be utilized under such a regime. A manufacturing house thus happily circumstanced, is not likely to fall behind in the race, as it retains all the advantages of older inventions in combination with discoveries adapted to modern requirements. It is, in fact, the combination of old and new talent and appliances that has made the name of Slee synonymous with high excellence, as far as their productions are concerned, in all parts of the world. It is scarcely necessary to add that the staff is well officered and well cared for.

Now as to the finished production. The firm manufacture five or six varieties of vinegar, or rather as many grades or degrees of strength, each of which is indicated by a number, the significance of which is well-known to the trade, and each grade is peculiarly suited to one or other purpose to which vinegar is applied. The sample which we took at random (for we always insist upon taking our own samples) was of the highest degree of strength, of full body, delicate flavor, choice aroma, and of a deep rich color, like choice Burgundy, or rich red wine. On this peculiar subject, however, we would prefer quoting from the exhaustive report of Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall, M.D., the special commissioner appointed by the Lancet to enquire and report on foods and drinks. "The whole of the samples were submitted to a full and careful analysis. I found the vinegars to be clear and bright, and in a sound state of preservation; they are sharp and pungent, aromatic to the smell and taste, giving off all the characteristic odor of good vinegar, due mainly to the presence of acetic ether.



"It should be known that the manufacture of good vinegar requires as much skill and care as does the brewing of good beer, and that those who make it on the largest scale possess great advantages over small manufacturers; further, that notwithstanding all the care which may be taken in its preparation, it is liable to undergo many well-known changes and alterations affecting greatly its quality.

"Of the water of the deep well used in making the vinegar, it must be stated that it is remarkably pure and well adapted for use in the making of either beer or vinegar, since it resembles the water used in the preparation of the celebrated Burton ales, and like it contains much sulphate of lime and chloride of sodium."

The foregoing report was made in 1873. The accuracy of Dr. Hassall has been more recently confirmed by Professor Redwood, of the Pharmaceutical Society, and also by one of the leading authorities of the Somerset House Laboratory. To come to the practical application of all this science we may mention that for half a century past Messrs. Slee, Slee & Co. have supplied the vinegar used by Messrs. Batty & Co. in the production of their widely reputed pickles and sauces, and it goes without saying that good pickles and sauces cannot be manufactured with indifferent vinegar.

Should any of our catering friends wish to make an independent test of "Slee's vinegar," they can easily do so, as it is retailed by all the leading grocers and oilmen in the United Kingdom, as well as in most markets of the world.—The Caterer.

THE RISE OF INDIAN AND CEYLON TEA, AND THE ECLIPSE OF CHINA TEA.

THE AREA IN EACH CIRCLE REPRESENTS THE QUANTITY OF TEA CONSUMED IN GREAT BRITAIN IN THE YEAR NAMED.

RED represents the quantity of Indian Tea used.

YELLOW represents the quantity of Ceylon Tea used.

BLACK represents the quantity of China Tea used.

SEE OTHER SIDE

"The Cups that Cheer but Not Inebriate."

We direct the attention of the Retail Trade to the Tea chart presented on the foregoing page of the Grocer.

THIS Chart exhibits in a striking manner the extraordinary development in the production of India and Ceylon Teas, and the rapid increase in their consumption in Great Britain.

The hold that these TEAS have taken upon the public taste in Great Britain is due to their superior intrinsic merit in parity with China growths. In Canada they are slowly and surely winning their way into popular favor, warranting the prediction, that it is only a question of time when they will as fully supersede China grown Teas in Canada as they have done in the United Kingdom.

To meet the growing demand we have been giving special attention to the importation of India and Ceylon Teas, and we will be pleased to supply samples of the following standard lines:

DALU KOLA, - -	Price 35 Cents.
IMPERIAL, - - -	" 33 Cents.
RUSSIAN, - - -	" 30 Cents.

These Teas are packed in 50, 80 and 100 lb. air-tight, metal-lined cases, with hinged lids, and incased in wood. This is far ahead of the lead-lined packages. The Tea keeps better, and especially in retailing, as it is never exposed when not in use. The character and flavor are always maintained, so that buyers can depend on having precisely similar Tea when re-ordering, and save the time and trouble of matching. They are RICH, HEAVY LIQUOR, FULL-BODIED TEAS, and just such lines as thousands of consumers are looking for. The "IMPERIAL" is particularly adapted for alkaline water.

Wherever sold these Teas have given unusual satisfaction, resulting in a steadily increasing trade. We would be pleased if every reader of the Grocer not handling them would write us for samples.

PACKAGE TEAS, are claiming a good deal of attention, but, for the reason that there is an extra expense in putting up in ½ and 1 pound lead packages the profit to the merchant is necessarily less provided the same quality of Tea is sold. To meet the popular demand, however, we have secured control for Western Ontario, of the MALLAWALLA; a blend of pure Indian and Ceylon Teas, rich and delicious in the cup, and a trial with other advertised brands will convince you of its superiority over all package Teas. The MALLAWALLA is packed in ½ and 1 pound lead foil packages, 50 pounds in a case, or in assorted cases of 50 pounds, containing equal weight of ½ and 1 pound. This Tea is sold largly in the United Kingdom and Australia, and is the only package Tea offered to Canadian consumers which has stood the critical test of English tea drinkers for upwards of 12 years.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, Aug. 10, 1893.

GROCERIES.

There has been no marked change in trade during the week. If anything the volume of business is not so large as a week ago, but this is only to be expected, a decreased movement being usual during August. Business during July was larger than usual, and that of this month so far compares favorably with that of the same month last year. The farmers are busier than is even usual at this time owing to the different crops maturing so fast and so close together. Naturally business with country merchants is quiet, and a good many are disposed to hold off until after harvest. All this of course reacts upon the wholesaler. Prospects however are good, both wholesaler and retailer anticipating a good fall trade. Sugars are only moving in small lots, but the market is steady and unchanged. Coffees, on the other hand, are in a little better demand. In dried fruits the movement is still light. In teas, Japans are the most sought after, while Ceylons and Indian teas are firmer in England. Canned goods are still attracting but little attention. Payments are fairly good.

COFFEE.

There was a little better demand for Rio coffee on the local market at prices ranging from 20 to 21c. Options have been a little off in New York, but advices received here from Brazil state that prices are a little higher there, and that the market is about cleaned out of good old coffee. Nothing under 20c. seems to be obtainable here in Rio coffees. We quote: Rio, 20 to 21½c.; East Indian, 27 to 30c.; South American, 21 to 23c.; Santos, 21 to 22c.; Java, 30 to 32c.; Mocha, 26 to 27c.; Maracaibo, 21 to 23c.

DRIED FRUIT.

Not much change. Valencia raisins continue quiet, and the little that is doing is all prices ranging from 4 to 5c. for off-stalk. Cable advices received here this week announce that the first shipment of the new crop of Valencia raisins has been made. This is about two weeks earlier than usual, and the fruit will arrive here about Sept. 1. Opening quotations are lower than usual. The recent advance abroad in Sultana raisins has stimulated the demand, it being fully expected that the new crop will be short. The idea here as to price is 6 to 6½c., with choice quoted at 7½c. Currants are slow of sale at from 5½c. up. Fine Patros fruit is about cleaned out again. A few cooking figs are still selling at 4½ to 5½c., but there is nothing doing in other kinds. Dates continue quiet at 5 to 5½c. Prunes dull and unchanged, 7 to 7½c. still being the idea as to price. Quotations received here this week by cable indicate considerably lower prices on prunes compared with last year.

NUTS.

The demand continues small, and prices unchanged. We quote:—Brazil nuts 11 to 11½c. a pound; Sicily shelled almonds, 32 to 35c. a pound; unshelled, 16 to 17c.; peanuts, 13 to 14c for roasted and 11 to 12½c. for green; cocoa nuts, $5 to $5.50 per sack; Marbot walnuts 11½ to 12c.; pecans 13½ to 16c.

RICE AND SPICES.

There is not much doing in rice, and prices are unchanged at 3½c. up. Spices remain much as before. Whole ginger is quoted at 20 to 25c., pure white pepper at 20 to 28c., and pure black at 14 to 16c.

SUGAR.

Nothing particularly new has developed in the sugar market during the week. Demand is light and generally speaking of a hand to mouth character. Prices are steady and unchanged. For granulated 5⅝c. is still the idea, although there have been some sales at 5½c. It costs more than the latter figure however to lay the sugar down here. Yellows run from 4½ to 5¼c., and raws are held at from 4 to 4½c. The refineries hold that present prices will be maintained till after the fruit season, and their representatives report a better demand from jobbers.

Willetts & Gray, New York, in their weekly statistical, say: The week—Raws and refined firmer. Receipts, 13,151 tons. Meltings, 25,000 tons. Total stock in all the principal countries, 822,110 tons, against 1,065,477 tons at same dates last year. Afloats to the United States from all countries, estimated, 50,000 tons, against 70,000 tons last year.

Raws—There has been rather free selling of sugar during the week at the low basis of values made last week. This was owing mainly to the desperate state into which the finances of the country came to be. Towards the close of the week the extreme measures taken to check the financial panic met with some success, and immediately gave new strength to the sugar holders, so much so that at the close there is a general disposition to hold for higher prices for both Centrifugals and Muscovados, with the expectation of getting an advance soon. Buyers, on the other hand, have made quite large purchases in Europe during the panic, for which freight engagements are now arranged, and the sugar will be available for August. The consumption of refined in July, moreover, has been so small that refiners have some accumulations on their hands, although the invisible stocks of grocers were probably never so small as now. Europe during the week has been gradually strengthening, and beet sugars have gradually risen from 15s. 7½d. f.o.b. to 16s. 1½d., or say ⅛c. per lb., and has a good advancing tendency still. The receipts at four ports this week were quite small (13,151 tons), and stocks are reduced 12,000 tons for the week. Receipts at the six ports in Cuba continue to some extent, and necessitate a continued small advance in the crop estimate. Few sugars appear to be left for shipment in the West Indies outside of Cuba. Barbados has but about 3,000 tons remaining. Demerara steamers are leaving in ballast for lack of sugar. Trinidad supplies have mostly given out. The statistical position of sugar warrants some advance in prices before sugars are available.

Refined—from what we have said regarding raws it will be seen that the quotations for refined are likely to be fully maintained, and, as soon as the country realizes this fact, the demand for sugar will increase very considerably as a season of good and large demand is now at hand, and the easing up of financial affairs is already apparent to some extent. The eastern peach crop is now coming to market and promises to be very large.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The syrup market continues dull, with 2½ to 3c. the ruling prices. Molasses is neglected, and 30 to 35c. is the idea as to price.

TEA.

As far as the local market is concerned, the situation remains much as before. New Japan teas, which retail at about 25, 40, and 50c., are receiving the most attention and the demand for them is fair. Low grade Japan teas are not coming in at the moment and it is not expected that they will for some time, or at least until local stocks of last year's teas are exhausted, these old teas being sold at less money than the new can be imported at. A fair trade is doing in blacks, and Ceylon and Indian teas are getting more into favor all the time. The week has been a rather busy one with the brokers. They report a good many transactions, principally in low China Congous and old season's Japans, in both of which some excellent value has been shown. We quote: Japans (1892-3)—Low grade and common, 15 to 18c.; medium, 18 to 20c.; fine, 20 to 25c.; new Japans, 30 to 32c. for medium and 32 to 35c. for fine. Blacks—Low grades Congous, 14½ to 16½c.; medium, 18 to 23c.; fine, 30 to 45c.; fancy, 60 to 70c.

Latest mail advices from London say: "The market continues firm for Indian and Ceylon teas, Ceylons, showing fully ½d. per lb. advance upon prices ruling three weeks ago. Common Congous are also firm and it now seems certain that this season we shall not see such excellent values in teas of this description as were obtainable at this time last year. Medium and fine sorts of China teas are rather cheaper. Some grades of Indian teas, particularly broken pekoes, have advanced ½ to 1d. per pound." Advices from Hancow under date of June 19 say: "Supplies of first crop teas are now nearly all received and second crop of Ningchows are now coming forward. A few teas from this district show rather good quality, but unfortunately the majority are rain-damaged. Second crop of Hancow teas have not yet arrived in any quantity. The quality of the few so far received is disappointing. Exchange on London, 4 months' crop, 3s. 11⅜d.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

The position remains much as before, although, if anything, the movement is smaller than a week ago. Futures are being offered as low as 75c. for tomatoes, corn and peas, but there does not seem to be any confidence in the market, for there is nothing of any extent doing. Tomatoes are in light demand at 80 to 85c. The dry weather, it is said, is beginning to injuriously affect the growing plants, but it is of course too early to say what the result of the crop will be. The trade seems to be all pretty well supplied at the moment with new pack of peas, and either old or new is obtainable at 80 to 85c. Demand for peas is light. The same may be said of corn, which sells ordinarily at 80 to 85c. Peaches dull and unchanged at $2.10 to $2.35 for 2's and $3 to $3.25 for 3's. Apples are inactive and prices unchanged at $2 to $2.25 for gallons and 85c. to $1 for B's. Plums are in light demand at $1.45 to $1.55. Pumpkins continue slow at 80 to 85c. There is little or no good red salmon left on this market. The lowest obtainable is $1.40, while for really first-class and well-known brands $1.52½ is the lowest figure in talls and $1.70 and $1.80 in flats. White salmon can be got at $1.10 to $1.25. First-class stock would sell well if obtainable, but generally speaking there is not much inclination to do business in view of the anticipated big pack and low prices. Business in lobsters is confined to a light sorting-up demand at, for the best brands, $1 85 to $2 for talls and $2.25 to $2.50 for flats. Meats are quiet and unchanged in price.

MARKETS—Continued.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The butter market is not so strong as it was a week ago on account of the falling off in the shipping demand. Prices however remain much as before, the local demand still being brisk, while there are is accumulation of stocks. For fine dairy tubs 16 to 17c. is the idea and store-packed tubs, crocks and pails are worth 14 to 16c., with bakers' butter quoted at 14 to 15c. The few large rolls that are on the market are selling at 17 to 18c. A good many farmers' pound rolls are coming in, but they are all taken at 17 to 19c. Creamery butter is in fair demand and there is not much offering Tubs range from 20 to 22c. Demand is fair for pound prints at 22 to 23c., but dairy rolls have the preference. Three car-loads of creamery butter were offered the early part of the week at equal to 21c. in tubs and 20½c. was bid.

The cheese market remains much as before, quiet and unchanged. Jobbers are getting 9½ to 10c. and the factories are asking 9 to 9½c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—A little more enquiry is reported. Good hand picked beans are still selling at $1.40 to $1.50; $1.10 to $1 20 is still the idea for medium.

DRIED APPLES—The feeling is a little firmer. Jobbers are paying 3½ to 4c. and selling at 4¼ to 4¾c. There have been some sales made on Northwest account at 4¼c.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Are dull and featureless, with prices nominal at 8¾ to 9c.; quarters sell at 7c.

EGGS—The demand is only for small lots, and prices are easy at 11 to 11½c.

POULTRY—Receipts are light and prices much as before. We quote chickens at 50 to 60c. and ducks at 40 to 60c.

POTATOES—The tendency of the market is still downward; $1.75 per barrel is the idea for American and $2 per barrel for Canadian; wagon load lots are being taken from the farmers at $1.40 to $1.50; single bags are quoted at $1.

HONEY—Unchanged at 5 to 8c. for extracted ; new season's section, 20c.,

ONIONS—Unchanged at $2 to $2.25 for Egyptians.

MAPLE SYRUP—There is a large supply on hand and dealers would gladly take 50 to 60c.

HOPS - Business is merely of a hand to mouth character. Prices are easy at 12 to 14c. for '92's. The crops in England and California are reported to be good, but in Germany they are not satisfactory.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

Packers are feeling easy about dressed hogs and there is no demand for them, the tendency being to await results in the American market. The few coming in sell at $8 per cwt. Hog products are still selling well, with stocks keeping in small compass. Barrel pork and lard are the only products materially affected in Chicago by the recent drop in prices, but the Toronto market does not seem as yet affected in the least.

BACON—Long clear, 10½ to 11c. Smoked backs 12½c., bellies, 13½ to 14c. rolls 10½ to 10¾c.

HAMS—In good demand and firm at 13 to 13½c. for smoked.

LARD—Pure Canadian is 13c. in tubs, 13¼c. in pails and 12¾c. in tierces. Compound 10 to 10½c.

BARREL PORK—Canadian heavy mess $21, Canadian short cut $22, shoulder mess $19.50.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef fores are 5 to 5½c., hindquarters 9½ to 10c., mutton 7 to 9c., lamb 15 to 17c.

GREEN FRUIT.

A good trade continues to be done, and there is a plentiful supply of fresh fruits. Peaches of the earlier and commoner varieties are coming in freely. Demand for them is good. Oranges are slow of sale. California Mediterranean's are arriving and they sell at $4.50 to $5 per box. Demand for lemons is good at firm prices. There has been a little scarcity of water melons and prices are steady. We quote as follows: Oranges—Messinas, ½ boxes of 80's, $2.50; ½ boxes of 100's, $2.50 to $2.75; California Mediterranean's, $4 50 to $5 per box; lemons, $4.50 to $5.50; bananas, $1.25 to $1.75; raspberries, 4c to 6c.; Lawton berries 9 to 10c.; cherries 90 to $1.25 per basket; red currants 65 to 75c. per basket; black currants, $1.25 to $1.30; peaches, 40 to 80c. per basket; Canadian tomatoes 75c. per basket; huckleberries, 75c. to $1; cucumbers, 40 to 50c. per basket; beans, 35c. per basket; gooseberries, 75c. per basket; cabbage, $1.50 to $1.75 per bbl. for Canadian; watermelons, 25 to 30c.; California fruit—Peaches, $2 to $2.25; pears, $3 to $3.50; plums, $2.50 to $3

SALT.

The salt trade continues fair; no car lots have been asked for although numerous sales of barrel salt have been made to farmers. Prices are unchanged. Barrel salt, $1 to $1.15; coarse, small lots, 85 to 90c. for sacks; dairy car lots, $1; Liverpool rock, $10 a ton.

FISH.

Fish trade continues brisk with supply still insufficient for the demand. We quote as follows: Fresh sea salmon, 16 to 18c.; skinned and boned codfish, 6½c.; Labrador herring, $3 per half barrel; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 11 to 12½c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; blue back herring, $2.00 per hundred; blue pickerel, 4 to 5c. a lb.; yellow ditto, 7 to 8c. a lb.; salmon trout and white fish, 7c.; eels, 6 to 8c. a lb.

HIDES, SKINS, TALLOW, WOOL.

HIDES—Are quiet. A few car lots are being held at 4¾c. for short-hair fresh hides. No sales at all are reported for long-haired winter hides.

SKINS—Nothing new since our last reports in skins. Prices continue the same. Lambskins, 45 to 50c.; for calf skins dealers are paying 7c.; pelts are standing at 25 to 30c.

TALLOW—Tallow continues slow of sale. At this time of the year good tallow is hard to get, and the factories will not take poor tallow at any figure. Prices are the same, dealers paying 5c. and selling from 5½ to 6c.

WOOL—Wool remains about the same, nothing much doing. Present holders are asking more than dealers are prepared to give. A few lots have changed hands at a basis of 17c. for selected combing.

PETROLEUM.

The Petrolia Advertiser in in its weekly report says: The same state of monotonous inaction that has characterized the dealings on 'Change the past couple of months is still apparent, although the price of crude remains firm at at $1.05 without any sellers; $1.07 is freely offered for August delivery. This state of affairs must soon change. With the stock in hand at least 10,000 bbls. less than at this date last year, the consumption quite ten per cent. greater, and the drill practically at a standstill, it does not require any great profit to tell us that prices must soon take a jump. Speculators might do much worse than acquire all the crude obtainable at the present market price for "futures." Refined remains unchanged and may be quoted at 10c. f.o.b. here in car lots.

Business on the Toronto market continues to show some improvement, particularly in burning oils, and present prices are steady. We quote, 5 to 10 bbl. lots, imperial gallons, Toronto: Canadian, 12½ to 13c.; carbon safety, 16½ to 17c.; Canadian water white, 17c.; American water white, 18½ to 19c.; photogene, 22c.

MARKET NOTES.

Balfour & Co. are in receipt of a carload of B. A. sock-eye red salmon.

It is expected that there will be a good yield of both peaches and plums.

Four-crown currants are being offered by T. Kinnear & Co. at reasonable prices.

J. W. Lang & Co. are in receipt of their shipment of new season's pack of peas.

T. Kinnear & Co. are offering "Clover Leaf" brand lobster at reasonable prices.

Smith & Keighley are selling out the balance of their London layers at low prices.

James Turner & Co., Hamilton, report a great demand for Batty's pickles, sauces, etc.

Carraway seeds have advanced about 5s. per cwt. in England during the past couple of weeks.

A letter received from Denia under date of July 21, says that grocers complain of small yield due to excessive heat.

Sloan & Crowther are in receipt of a fine line of selected Valencia raisins, which they are offering at current prices.

"Retailers who are fairly good judges of teas," said a jobber, "are picking up a good many of the early-shipped teas."

Cable quotations on "Sphinx" prunes are already on this market and indicate considerable lower prices than a year ago.

Samples of new season's pack of "Swan" brand canned salmon are being shown on the Toronto market. The quality is good.

Edward Adams & Co. have just received a shipment of Pettijohn California breakfast food. They are now in a position to fill all orders.

A large lot of syrup, which is showing good value, has been received by Davidson & Hay, and the present seems opportune to buy.

The fine hard cured codfish in quintals and the boneless "Star" herrings offering by Lucas, Steele & Bristol are meeting with ready sale.

Musson & Co. have just received shipments of Pingsuey and Foochow Congou teas. The quality is fair and about the same as last year.

Davidson & Hay this week received two cars of "Red Star" brand salmon. This has been a relief to a bare market, but they are going out rapidly.

Lucas, Steele & Bristol report their selected Valencias are taking the place of ordinary fruit altogether. They are said to be cheaper to the consumer in the long run.

"White salmon," said a well known Front street man with some emphasis, "are good sound fish, and it is largely a matter of pre-

FLOUR AND FEED.

TORONTO.

The flour market still lacks life and quotations are nominal. Mill feed is scarce and firm, and some of the mills are closed down.

FLOUR.—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitoba patents, $4.20 to $4.25; strong bakers' $3.75 to $3.90; white wheat patents, $3 50 to $3.90; straight roller, $3.15 to $3.20, low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.25; Ontario family $3.15 to $3.40.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.00 to $4.05; Manitoba strong bakers', $3.65 to $3.70; Ontario patents, $3.50 to $3.60; straight roller, $2.85 to $3.10; extra, $2.70 to $2.80; low grades, per bag, 90c. to $1.00.

MEAL—Oatmeal is $4.20. to $4.40 Cornmeal is $3.25 to $3.50.

FEED—Bran (ton lots) $12.00, do (on track) $10.50 to $11.00, shorts (ton lots) $16, ditto (on track) $00.00 to $14; mixed feed $20 to $22, feeding corn 57 to 58c., oats 40 to 41c. on track.

HAY—Baled timothy quiet and unchanged. We quote $10 to $10.50.

STRAW—Demand poor and prices unchanged at $5.50 to $6.

MONTREAL.

The flour market remains dull, but some consider it a more hopeful sign that there are more enquiries from the country regarding stocks, etc. In fact a disposition is shown to enlarge orders, for whereas a fortnight ago it would be a twelve-barrel lot now it is a twenty-five, which evidently indicates that buyers think prices down about as low as they will go. We quote:—Winter wheat, $3.90 to $4.10; Manitoba patents, best brands, $4; straight rollers, $3.15 to $3.25; extra, $2.90 to $3.05; superfine, $2.60 to $2.90; Manitoba strong bakers', $3.65 to $3.80; Manitoba strong bakers', best brand, $3.75 to $3.80.

The oatmeal market is quiet. Business is purely local in character, and under small supplies prices hold steady. Standard, bags, $2.10 to $2.15, do., brls., $2.30 to $2.35; granulated, bags, $2.15; do., brls., $2.35; rolled oats, bags, $2.15; do., brls., $2.25.

Bran and shorts are very scarce and dearer, the former being now quoted firm at $14 to $15. The demand is good. Bran, $14 to $15; shorts, $17 to $20; Mouillie, $20 to $23.

judice that more of it is not used. One thing is certain, considering the difference in price —some 50c.—between red and white salmon, the consumer really gets better values out of the white than out of the red."

Five hundred and sixty half-chests of June picked Japan tea has just been received by Davidson & Hay, and are in store. The value is claimed to be unusually good.

A shipment of new season's canned raspberries has been received this week by Sloan & Crowther. The fruit was packed by the Delhi Canning Co. and the quality is nice.

Advices received by J. L. Watt & Scott report a considerable advance in soap-making oils in France. It is expected, should the advance be maintained, that castile soap will go up about 10 per cent. in price.

"Canned salmon similar to 'Horse Shoe" brand, which is the standard brand," said a wholesaler Tuesday, "would be taken by the retail trade at $1.60, but the trouble is that they are not on the market.

Balfour & Co., of Hamilton, are this week in receipt of shipment of their own brands of Japan teas, "St. Olaf" and "Viking" Chops. Lovejoy's breakfast flakes, Lazenby's pickles, sauces, soups and jellies, which they are offering to the trade at close prices.

S. Kabiglio, packer of the "Atlas" brand prunes, writing from Trieste under date of July 20, says: "Reports of new crop continue to be satisfactory, and to-day October shipment could be secured at much lower prices than last year's opening figures."

Dawson & Co. received four cars of watermelons inside of as many days. They came on a bare market and sold rapidly. Two cars were unloaded and disposed of in less than three hours. The same firm is also in receipt of a carload of California peaches and pears.

P. L. Mason & Co. have cable advices announcing the shipment of their early Valencia raisin orders. This breaks the record, the crop being about two weeks earlier than usual. Opening quotations for offstalk, fine offstalk, selected and selected layers are much lower than usual. The fruit will arrive here about Sept. 1.

A reference to the advertisement of W. H. Gillard & Co., of Hamilton, with regard to the enormous increase in the sale of India and Ceylon teas in Great Britain will prove interesting. The chart is accurate and conveys in a striking manner the enormous stride made in the past ten years in India and Ceylon teas.

On another page will be found the advertisement of the W. J. Gage Co. (Limited), wholesale booksellers and stationers. They are also manufacturers of blank books, envelopes and writing tablets. Their line of school blanks, such as composition exercises, scribbling and note books, they claim is the finest produced by any house in America. One great feature in connection with their business is the careful attention which they give to the execution of orders sent them by mail. Dealers who sell any of the lines of goods which they handle will find it to their advantage to put themselves in communication with this firm.

W. H. Gillard & Co. of Hamilton, are meeting with an immense sale of Gillard's new pickle and Gillard's new sauce. The goods are giving the greatest of satisfaction wherever introduced and a trial will convince the most conservative of their excellent quality.

One of the most enterprising of country mercantile firms is that of Wiley & Co. of Gravenhurst. They know both how to buy and how to sell, and in consequence they are doing a good and profitable trade. They make a specialty of canned goods, and have one of the largest stocks in this particular line north of Toronto, which is saying a good deal.

W. A. Bradshaw & Co., the soap manufacturers, Toronto, have made large purchases of pictures from an English house. They range in size from 17 x 20 inches, and among them are likenesses of Lord Salisbury, Mr. Gladstone, etc., and copies of well known English views and pictures. Any one of the pictures enumerated in their list will be sent free to every patron on receipt of 25 Ammonia and 10 Puritan soap wrappers and 3 cent stamp for return postage.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

GROCERIES

MONTREAL, Aug. 10, 1893.

The trade that has transpired in groceries this week calls for no special comment, almost everything, except perhaps sugar, being characterized by the usual quietness which rules at this season. There has been no change in the value of that article, but, whereas a week or so ago it was the lower grades which were most in demand, at present it is the brighter grades which are meeting the best enquiry. Granulated is very quiet. In other lines, as we have said, there is very little to note. Actual business in Japan tea is small, but the feeling shown by holders is rather more confident. Blacks and greens are featureless. Molasses and syrups are steady and no low prices are anticipated on the former this fall, while some round lots of syrup have been moving during the week. Coffee is unchanged, but the tone is rather easier. Spices rule quiet. Dried fruit does not furnish anything new, and although offers have been made on Valencia stock to arrive they are not reliable criterions. In canned goods there have been offers of new pack salmon for delivery this week, but up to the time of writing none have been received, although several firms are expecting car load lots.

SUGAR.

The market for refined sugar is quiet, and business on the whole is not extensive. It is worthy of note that the higher grades of bright yellows are receiving most attention now, whereas a week or so ago the demand all ran to cheap low grade stock. We quote as before at the refineries: Granulated, 5 3-8c., and yellows, 4 3-8 to 5c.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

A somewhat better enquiry for syrups was noted during the week, sales of Canadian transpiring at 1 7-8 to 2 1-8c per lb., while American changed hands on Western account at 18 to 20c. Barbadoes molasses rules about the same, jobbing lots changing hands at 33 to 34c. Two cargoes came in during the week, and changed hands on contract, it is reported at 30 to 30 1-2c. Advices from Barbadoes recently tend to give the market a somewhat firmer tone.

TEA.

The tea market, as far as actual business in Japan tea is concerned, is quiet, and in the face of the factors specially referred to by us last week, viz., an advance in the rate of freight and the rate of exchange buyers will not anticipate wants any length ahead. Brokers, however, are confident of an extension of business as the fall season approaches. Black and green teas are quiet and steady. We quote Japans: common, 11 to 13c.; medium to good, 15 to 17c.; fine, 18 to 21c., and finest, 23 to 30c.

COFFEES.

There is no change in the coffee market, but the easy feeling already noted is a little more apparent. Lots of Maracaibo have changed hands down to 19c., and fine stock in 50-bag lots has been sold at 20 1-2c. We quote: Jamaica, 17 to 19c.; Maracaibo, 19 to 22c.; Rio, 19 to 20c.; Java, 24 to 28c., and Mocha, 25 to 28c., in wholesale lots, smaller quantities calling for an advance on these figures.

DRIED FRUIT.

There is very little old stock Valencias now on this market, and what business has transpired in them has been on the basis of 2 3-4 to 3 1-4c. as to quality. Advices from Denia with regard to new crop report prospects good, and moderate prices are looked for. Speculative offers of 16s. 6d. to 19s. 6d. C.I.F. Montreal, are reported here. In currants the market remains dull at 4 3-4 to 5 3-4c. as to quality and quantity.

RICE.

The rice market rules quiet, and there is no particular change to note.

SPICES.

There has been no change in spices, and we quote Jamaica ginger at 16 to 18c. for common and 20 to 23c. for fine, black pepper, 8 to 8c., pimento, 6 1-2c., nutmegs, 50 to 52 1-2c. to $1.

GREEN FRUIT.

Green fruit does not show very much change, business ruling quiet. Lemons are somewhat dull and easier, but prices remain at $1.25 to $3.50, according to quality. Oranges have been in fair demand, and we quote: California, $3.25 to $3.50. There is a fair enquiry for peaches, which sell at $2.25 to $2.50 per box, with baskets, $1 to $1.25. Pears are in fair demand at $2.25 to $2.50 per box, and plumbs are selling from $2.50 to $3 per box. Bananas rule scarce, and we quote $1 to $1.50 as to size and quality. There is a free sale for all brands of currants at 50 to 65c. per pail. Melons are in good demand at 20 to 25c. for watermelons, and musk $1.40 to $1.50 per crate.

BEANS.

The market is moderately active and steady. Good hand-picked stock has changed hands at $1.40 to $1.50, while ordinary is quoted at $1.25 to $1.30, with inferior at 90c. to $1.

HOPS.

The market keeps quiet and steady. We quote 18 to 20c. for good choice yearlings, and 6 to 10c. for old.

ONIONS.

The only stock offering is Egyptian, which sells at 2 1-2 to 3c. per lb.

POTATOES.

Potatoes are meeting a fairly good demand, all the receipts so far being taken readily on the basis of $1.50 to $2 per barrel.

HONEY.

Honey rules much the same. We quote extracted, 6 1-2 to 8c, and new comb, 12 to 13 1-2c., with several sales at the outside price.

PROVISIONS.

There is only a small movement in provisions, and prices remain the same. Canadian short cut, per bbl., $21 to $21.50; mess pork, Western, new, per bbl., $22; hams, city cured, per lb., 12 to 13 1-2c.; lard, Canadian, in pails, 11 to 12c.; bacon, per lb., 11 1-2 to 12 1-4c.; lard, common refined, per lb., 9 1-4 to 9 3-4c.

EGGS.

The movement in eggs is rather slower than it was a week ago, but prices remain unchanged at 11 to 11 1-2c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The cheese market remains about the same, although there is less doing than usual, but as far as the speculative element is concerned this does not matter much, as they are, and have been, paying more than the position of the British market seems to warrant. Finest Ontario colored, 9 1-2c.; finest Ontario white, 9 1-4c.; finest Townships, 9 1-8c.; finest French colored, 9 1-8c.; finest white, 9c.; under grades, 8 1-2 to 8 5-8c.; cable, white, 46s.; cable, colored, 47s. The butter market rules quiet and easy in tone. Exporters talk still lower prices on creamery, which holders are naturally disinclined to concede, and business is slack in consequence. The very extreme price is 21c., and it is more a case of 20c. if business in a general way is to be done; in fact, lower than our inside figure is spoken. For Western 16 to 17c. is the idea. Creamery, 20 to 21c.; Townships, 19 to 20c.; Western dairy, 16 to 17c.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

Mr. Hughes, of Caverhill, Hughes & Co., is away enjoying a holiday at present.

Hudon, Hebert & Co. note fairly encouraging returns from the Eastern districts.

Recent cables to refiners here state that the European beet crop is bound to be short.

L. Chaput & Son have a large shipment of the leading brands of new pack canned salmon near at hand.

Offers on new crop off-stalk Valencia raisins have been made here at 16s. 6d. to 19s. 6d. C.I.F., but they are not considered to be a reliable criterion. Reports regarding crop prospects are favorable.

Geo. Gillespie, of Gillespie & Co., the big grocery importers, is away from town on a business trip.

Geo. Childs & Sons' travellers report business quiet in most of the Eastern Ontario and Township districts.

Kinloch, Lindsay & Co. say that their experience lately has been that business in Quebec Province was better than it was in Ontario.

N. Quintal & Sons are offering new pack B. A. brand of canned salmon at $1.35, delivery this week, a carload being near at hand.

There is an impression that the supply of Barbadoes molasses this fall in Montreal is not going to be as ample as anticipated earlier in the summer.

Advices from British Columbia state that the run of salmon on the Fraser is excessive, but that the canneries are likely to experience some difficulty in handling it.

Fraser, Viger & Co. are going to move from their present premises on St. James street down to the premises at present occupied by Walker, the jeweler, near Victoria square. The move will be made in May next, and Mr. Fraser says that the cellars in his new premises will give him the largest space of any "Italian warehouse" in the country.

A despatch received last week by a firm here said: "Salmon run in Fraser river highest on record. Some boats to-day caught a thousand fish in twelve hours. Canneries cannot handle fish offered, and fish is selling five cents each. If the run lasts ten days longer it is said that the Fraser river pack will be close on half a million cases."

STRUCK DOWN BY A CHICKEN.

While a Front street broker was wending his way through Leader lane a few days ago he was struck on the head with a dead chicken thrown from a restaurant window. His white plug hat was crushed and knocked down over his eyes, but personally he escaped unhurt. An iron in the hands of a hatter put the hat back into shape, but the ruffles in the aforesaid broker's usually genial disposition are not yet all smoothed out.

D. Gunn, of Gunn, Flavelle & Co., Toronto, left on Tuesday for Chicago and the West. He will be away about three weeks.

SICILY FILBERTS.

In anticipation of an American demand that was expected to materialize during the spring months, speculative operators in Sicily started in during last winter to concentrate the stocks of filberts in Messina, and, having succeeded, tacked on an advance in the price, and settled themselves down to await the call for goods that was behind must develop from this side of the water. At the time the speculation was enjoined the outlook was indeed most favorable for the operators, and our importers really expected to be obliged to draw on the primary market for aditional supplies, as the available stock here was comparatively small. The goods here were taken in under closer control and an improved value was established to compare with the then import cost. Speculative operations, however, have not proved healthy investments during the past six months, and as with many other articles of merchandise, the one in Sicily filberts has not resulted in the success so confidently predicted at the outset. It is a comparatively easy matter to concentrate the stock of any food staple, all that is necessary being an abundant supply of cash, and the requisite amount of business courage, or, more properly speaking, nerve; but when it comes down to a matter of governing consumption, parties interested in a deal frequently find they have "ivoryized" considerably more than they can conveniently masticate, and their scheme falls flat, and without a particle of sympathy extended by the general public. Such has proved the experience during the past four or five months. Instead of an active and lively market, the demand has been of a tame and unsatisfactory character, consumers and the trade generally declining to absorb the proffered stocks upon the terms exacted by those who had the goods under their control. From 8 1-4 to 8 3-8c. to import, the price abroad has generally receded until to-day 7 3-4c. is considered a good value; but the trade are now being interviewed upon the subject of new crop, and naturally there is more indifference than ever to the handling of old stock. In the Messina market to-day it is estimated that fully seven thousand bags are being carried. This is considered a liberal quantity for this period of the year, but to offset this the statement is being circulated to the effect that owing to drought and other unfavorable weather conditions the coming crop will not be over 50 per cent. of that harvested last year, and upon this some little encouragement is derived by the speculators who expect to work this point for all it is worth. The new crop, however, is now offering from the other side for September shipment at the equivalent of 7 3-8 to 7 1-2c., or say three-eighths of a cent below the value set upon the old goods now being carried. The supply here to-day is light and closely concentrated, but in view of the lower quotations cabled for new crop rather more endeavor is making to influence buyers' attention, hence the market may be regarded as soft in tone. The asking price for spot stock is 8c., but we are informed that bids of 7 7-8c. are solicited. Upon this, as well as all other lines, the trade are cautious, hence the intimations of easier values do not serve to promote the slightest increase in the demand. Until some idea can be formed as to the prospects for fall and winter trade, there is not likely to be any any special interest extended. The coming crop may prove a small one, and higher prices may be established, but importers claim that something in the shape of actual consumption must first show itself before they will venture upon this or any other line of foreign nuts or fruit.—N.Y. Journal of Commerce.

AN IDEA.

The man who is always thinking up new ways of securing trade and holding it will be sure to find what he is after. An instance of this is related by Humanity and Health:

Having a large garden on the outskirts of the city, and being a good gardener, a grocer and his children slipped hundreds of geraniums. They grew all summer in his hot-beds, were put into thumb pots in early fall, and fertilizers brought out a large bud on each plant. They were of every rich hue imaginable, and placed in ranks in his store among the bright tin cans, and potatoes, turnips and carrots, they made a grand display. Then a short advertisement appeared in an evening paper that the next day would be "Geranium Day," and that every woman buying 50 cents' worth of groceries would be presented with a budded pot-plant. It took. It was something new, and the women flocked to his store like doves. Those coming met a long procession, each with a pretty geranium in flower, and long before the day was out he had to buy several hundred more of the florist. It paid.

The Durham merchants are noted for their efforts in advancing business that will meet the wants of their customers and result in profit to all concerned. They always keep on hand good goods of the best quality at extreme low prices, for instance 17 pounds of granulated sugar for $1.00 and offer to farmers the highest price for their produce in exchange for the same. They are now paying 18 cents per pound for butter and 11 cents per dozen for eggs. No other town within 40 miles can boast of business men who extend the same encouragement to farmers as the business men of Durham do. In this they deserve the support of the citizens of both town and country for the enterprising way in which they study and secure the interest of their customers.—Review, Durham.

DRY GOODS.

MONTREAL MARKET.

The past week has been a quiet one in the dry goods trade, and the jobbing houses have very little to report. The actual movement is small, but several of the houses state that their travellers have been placing fair orders on fall account, which stands for so much business when the time for delivery comes. Some of these orders are being sent forward already, but mainly to the A1 customers, as the trade are wisely disposed to exercise a due amount of caution before accepting and disposing of all the orders sent in for consideration. The cheap excursions on account of millinery purchases which commence the third week in August will very likely bring an influx of a certain percentage of buyers from the district east of Kingston, and this will no doubt lead to incidental business in other lines, as customers in their visits are sure to see something which besides striking the fancy will be wanted.

Messrs. J. G. Mackenzie & Co. have had a remarkably good call for challies this summer. They have turned over several large lines since the first of June.

Messrs. Gault Bros. & Co. are receiving some extensive lines of whipcords in plain and tartan effects, also plain and shot diagonals.

Matthews, Tower & Co.'s travellers report fairly good encouragement in the matter of placing fall orders for shirts, fine woollen underwear, and half-hose.

Jas. Johnston & Co. note orders from the city trade for velvets and velveteens from the lines which they opened up the other week, as noted by us.

Wm. Agnew & Co. are forwarding west of Toronto this week quite a few lots of cashmeres, meltons, and hopsackings on fall account.

TORONTO MARKETS.

The financial story of the passt week can be told in few words. In the first place the amount of paper falling due on that date was not so large as in previous years, due in great part to the selling of some classes of goods at closer prices and on shorter terms. But even with the smaller amount of paper to be met, there has been a poorer showing made than in the same period last year. Those who have paid have paid promptly, but the renewals are above the average in number. Yet this was expected, and as no very weak spots have been discovered no serious asssignments are reported. With the exception of two or three cases the past month's failures have been of little importance, despite the fact that they have been numerous. A few weak men have gone to the wall, but the best men are stronger than ever, and the average dealer has held his own. Money is slightly stringent, and it will remain so until October. The best month in the year is generally November. A few years ago when the people of Ontario sold large quantities of barley in the United States the collections for September were generally good. August and September this year promise to find collections slow. No improvement is noted for the North-west.

Trade has been almost featureless during the past week. A few more buyers are dropping into the city, but buying is proceeding very cautiously. A prominent wholesaler remarked, "We rejoice thereat," and this is the sentiment of all the jobbers. Shipping on fall account is again in full blast. Travellers are mostly on the road and sending in numerous but not voluminous orders.

The report in the Montreal Gazette that cutting in Canadian staples was stopping because one house was selling at cost is regarded as guff and foolishness.

Two special lines of Scotch tartan flannels are shown by John Macdonald & Co. A shipment of check apron linens is to hand. Both lines extra value.

Alexander & Anderson have opened two lines of fine Ceylon flannelettes in patterns suitable for present trade.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have opened some high-class novelties in dress goods, confined to them for Canada; the latest styles and colorings are shown.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling are showing natural wool night-shirts in various qualities. These garments are specially suitable for travelling and are more in demand each season.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence have opened a line of cream and white silk tulles. These goods are very active at present. They are opening a large shipment of ribbons which will sort up their stock of failles, double satins, black failles and baby ribbons. Black velvets are also stocked and promise well.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have secured another lot of ladies' ribbed summer vests and are jobbing them at 75 cents per dozen.

Alexander & Anderson have opened up a large assortment of military braids and dress trimmings in fur and gimp effects. They are also opening up a large range of ladies' fall Cashmere, Suede and Electra Fleecing gloves and gauntlets.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence will open in a few days a shipment of black and cream silk laces. These goods are increasing in demand and buyers will do well to secure stocks from this shipment. They are at present opening up their mantlings, and are shipping out at once all their placed orders.

John Macdonald & Co. are showing the largest stock of ribbons they have ever offered to the trade in plain silk, faille, double-faced satins, moires, and baby ribbons. They have an extensive range of colorings and of blacks. They are opening up another shipment of colored velveteens in their well-known Sapphire Brand. Cashmere hosiery is also to hand in large quantities. Cashmere and Ringwood gloves in ladies' and children's sizes have been received to the extent of twenty cases.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling have passed into stock a large range of men's waterproof coats, both in black paramatta and desirable tweed patterns. They are made with 26-inch capes, fly fronts, sewed seams, two large pockets, and ventilated under the arms.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence report their shipments of domestic hosiery and underwear much earlier than last season, and they have already made large shipments in these lines. Their imported hosiery and underwear will be passed into stock in large quantities during the next ten days, and the bulk will be immediately re-shipped. They are shipping their Japanese handkerchiefs this month. Orders for these goods were secured by their travellers some time ago.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have opened a grand stock of men's half-hose in worsted ribbed, and cashmere ribbed and plain. Their $2.25 line of plain cashmere is of marked value.

W. R. Brock & Co. have some beautiful effects in German hopsack dresss goods. One line with an invisible check in a shot effect, another line without the check but possessing the other features, and another line with a handsome mixed effect, are striking leaders. Numerous other lines of this class of goods are shown, and also of all the various lines of dress goods which promise to run for fall

Wyld, Grasett & Darling have opened this week a number of cases of linen stuffs, including table linens, glass cloths, and towellings, which will be sold at old prices, despite the advance of 10 to 15 per cent. now asked by British manufacturers. A range of beautiful patterns in fine Ceylon flannels in three qualities is one of their most taking things at present.

Gordon, Mackay & Co., in their button department, show an extensive range of novelties in ivory goods from 24 to 50 line, and in pearlettas from 22 to 60 line. These lines are selling freely.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling have now in stock their full range of fall neckwear, which, for value, neatness of patterns, and excellency of finish surpasses any they have heretofore shown. While they find considerable demand for knots, bows and puff shapes, the Derbys are decidedly the favorites, and, although they show a full range of more expensive and very handsome goods their leading prices are $2.00, $2.52, and $4.00. The most desirable width is 2 3-4 inches, with wide American turning, which prevents the lining from showing when the scarf is tied. They have made this finish a specialty, and even their lowest priced Derbys are made in this way. Their stock is composed almost entirely of neat, quiet patterns, which are always safe and more saleable than the splashy designs so often shown.

THE CHARTER OF THE GROCERS' COMPANY.

In view of the remarks reported in our last issue, as to the duties of the Worshipful Company of Grocers of London, says London Grocers' Review, the following free translation from the Latin of the Patent Roll of the 26th year of the Reign of King Henry VI., granting to the Grocers' Company the Privilege of Garbling and Examining Drugs, Spices, etc., A.D. 1447, will, we believe, prove interesting to our readers:

The King, to all whom, etc., greeting. Know ye that we, considering how much it will be for the general good and advantage of all subjects of our Kingdom of England that all sorts of spices and merchandises, annis, cummin, wornfeed, wax, alum, kermes—as pepper, ginger, cloves, mace, cinnamon, rheubarb, scammony, spikenard, turpentine, senna, almonds, dates, rosin, treacle, electuaries, syrups, waters, oils, ointments, plasters, powders, and conserves and confections—as gum, ginger, succades, cardamons, and all sorts of merchandises, spices and drugs in any wise belonging to medicines, and whatsoever shall be sufficient officers skilled in the premises of this kind, whom we are pleased to depute and appoint duly and justly to supervise, garble, search, examine, and prove, to the purpose and intent that none of our subjects aforesaid may in future be deprived of benefit in buying any of the aforesaid merchandises, spices and drugs, nor by the buying of these kind to be in anywise hurt in their bodily health; whereas it so appears, as is alleged, that merchandises, spices and drugs of the sort above mentioned, for defect of officers of this kind are not duly supervised, garbled, searched, examined, and duly proved, but are daily sold to our said subjects not at all cleansed, garbled and searched, to the manifest deceit and hurt of our subjects. In this behalf, therefore, for a due and just remedy to be thereupon had. We of our special favor, have ordained, constituted and appointed our beloved William Wetnale, Richard Hakedy, and Thomas Gibbs, Wardens of the Mystery of Grocers of our City of London, to garble all these spices and merchandise above specified and mentioned, in whosesoever hands they can find them, as well as in the towns of Southampton and Sandwich as in all other places within our said Kingdom, as well within liberties as without (our City aforesaid only excepted) have and occupy the aforesaid business forever by themselves and their successors, Wardens of the Mystery aforesaid, or by their sufficient deputies by them, with the general consent of their mystery from time to time to be appointed for that purpose; and to receive and take in the said business such fees, profits and advantages as in our said city heretofore were used to be had and taken for such garbling; and further, of our abundant favor, we have made or ordained, constituted and appointed the aforesaid William, Richard and Thomas to supervise, search, examine and prove all the spices, drugs, and merchandise above specified and mentioned whatsoever belongs to medicines in whosoever hands they can find them within the city, towns and places aforesaid, as well within liberties as without, to have and exercise the above business forever by themselves and their successors, Wardens of the Mystery aforesaid, or by their deputies, or thereto by the same Wardens with the general consent of the said Mystery from time to time shall be chosen; giving and granting to the said Wardens and their successors forever full license, power, and authority to garble, supervise, search, examine and prove all sorts of merchandises, spices and drugs in manner and form aforesaid above recited; and, furthermore, of our more abundant grace, we have granted that if any merchant, person, native and foreigner, within our Kingdom aforesaid, shall in future expose for sale any of the merchandises, spices and drugs aforesaid, by the aforesaid Wardens, or their successors, or their deputies in manner aforesaid not supervised, garbled, searched, examined and proved, that then the said merchandises, spices and drugs, so by the said Wardens and their successors, or their deputies, not garbled, searched, examined or proved, shall immediately become forfeited to us, or our successors, and that the aforesaid Wardens and their successors, or their deputies, and each of them, shall have full power and authority to seize the said forfeitures to the use of us, our heirs and successors, annually, in our exchequer at Westminster, concerning all these kinds of forfeitures to us, for the causes aforesaid belongings which shall become due, and that the said Wardens and their successors for their care and diligence in this behalf shall have and receive, to the use of the Mystery aforesaid, one-half of all the forfeitures belonging to us, our heirs and successors, for the causes aforesaid, as often as they shall happen; and that for the said half-part they shall have an allowance in their annual account at our said Exchequer, provided always that none of our subjects by this our present grant, be in anywise damaged, because that express mention of the true yearly value of the premises in these presents made does not appear, any statute, ordinance, or Act thereof, made, ordained or provided to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding. Witness the King, Westminster, 8th of March, by writ of Privy Seal, and of the date aforesaid, by authority of Parliament.

It promises to be a long time before the financial situation in the United States can again get into anything like a normally healthy condition. The patient has undoubtedly improved during the last week or so, but there are a concomitant of circumstances that preclude rapid recovery. The repeal of the silver law, in the task of which Congress is now engaged, will undoubtedly do much in the premises, but, even that act performed, it may, like a surgical operation upon an individual, cause a temporary increased weakness. Until public confidence is restored, legislative action cannot do much; although, at the same time, the legislature, by creating new laws or repealing old—the silver law, for instance—can sometimes do a great deal towards restoring the desired confidence. At the moment, confidence is badly needed to pursuade those who are hoarding up currency and making it difficult for railroad companies and and manufacturing concerns to get enough to pay employees their wages to release it. Confidence is half the battle. Gold, it is true, is returning in heavy volume, but the fact that it is large is likely to momentarily check its flow, the Bank of England having already, with that end in view, raised its discount rate to 4 per cent. One fortunate thing for the currency is the low price of government bonds, which has induced the National banks to purchase them and deposit them in the treasury against note issue. The law, it will be remembered, demands that for every 95 cents of notes issued one dollar in government bonds shall be deposited with the treasury, a procedure that is too cumbersome to give that elasticity to the currency that is really needed. Quickness of expansion—similar to that which we have in Canada—is what is wanted; and if we are to judge by the tenor of the U. S. financial and daily press, that is what they will have before a great while.

Another good thing for our neighbors is that the stocks of grain in store on the other side of the Atlantic are rapidly decreasing, and that the demand from there for wheat of American growth is increasing. During the last couple of weeks there have been sent out from American ports to supply this demand over ten and a half million bushels of wheat. This is larger than has been sent out during the corresponding period for some years. It has been contended all along that wheat on this side was been held too high for export. Now that it seems to be down to the desired point it is to be hoped that our neighbors will do a brisk trade in what has on the whole been a lagging business this year.

One feature of the situation that is giving a good deal of concern in the United States is the condition of the labor market there. In Chicago alone 200,000 men are believed to be out of work, and in New York another 100,000, while in the country at large idleness is estimated to have been enforced upon no less than 1,000,000 wage earners during the last couple of months. And the end in this particular does not seem yet, for mills and factories continue to close down and business concerns to go up. Even those who are employed have a hard time getting the money they have earned owing to the scarcity of currency, as already stated. With an army of 1,000,000 men without employment, and detachments of it going about the country in bands of two, three, four, and five hundred men, it is not surprising that labor riots should be feared in some of the leading centres of population. We in Canada may not have such a great deal to boast about, but we may be pardoned for congratulating ourselves on the fact that we have plenty of the "needful" for all legitimate business purposes, a good cereal and fruit crop, and good prospects for fall trade; and we have not got a crisis, financial or otherwise, hanging over our heads, nor an abnormal number of unemployed workmen either.

The past season has been anything but a satisfactory one for dealers in maple syrup. It was late in opening, and there was a scarcity. Later on they got more than the demand would absorb, with the result that now, when there is no demand for it, jobbers find themselves with large stocks on their hands, much larger, it is believed, than is usual.

A business man can in many ways, while helping himself, help others. Particularly is this true with regard to the payment of bills. All slow payments are not the result of a scarcity of the "needful" with which to liquidate them. Procrastination is often no small cause. But the trouble is that the man who has the money with which to make prompt payment and does not injures not only his own credit but for the community at large is more or less affected. Money is to trade and commerce what blood is to the individual. Sluggish circulation is as injurious to the one as to the other. We have an instance of this at the moment in the United States, where, because of the fear of a crisis, so many are withholding money from circulation, making it difficult for large corporations to get enough of the "necessary" to even pay their employees their salaries. But the great consideration for the merchant who meets his liabilities promptly is the discounts, something which in these days of narrow margins he cannot afford to lose.

We cover the ground from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and have double the circulation of any other journal in Canada.

NEW CANNED SALMON.

The first arrivals of new pack canned salmon were offered on the Montreal market at the close of last week, the opening figure being considerably higher than that of last season. The Montreal arrivals so far comprise five car loads, which means 2,000 cases, but several more car loads are on the way. Sellers are offering these goods at $1.35, which is 2½c. higher than the price at which new pack opened at last season. But it is when a comparison is made with the price at which old stock has been selling that a still more striking difference is found. During last fall and through the winter the speculators who had bought heavily on the coast made a handsome profit on canned salmon, for the price steadily advanced until it stands, as it does now on old pack, at $1.60. Last year the top on old pack was $1.40, against $1.32½, the opening price on new. With new pack offering for 25c. less, however, it is not at all likely that buyers are going to pay the high figure for old stock, so that unless prices on the new goods advance materially a decline is bound to result on old stock. A vital topic at present is whether the price on the new will advance or not. THE GROCER has referred before to the conflicting rumors which have been received from the coast making it difficult to arrive at any conclusion as to what the pack would be. It was thought when the dispatch already published in THE GROCER to the effect that the pack on the Fraser was very heavy that the uncertainty had been dispelled, but to last week still another and entirely different report has been received, viz., that the enormous run on the Fraser river had suddenly collapsed, leaving most of the canners with two-thirds of their cans unfilled. One cannery had prepared cans for 23,000 cases, but only filled 8,400. On the Skeena river the same advice stated that the quantity put up amounts to about two-thirds of what it was last year, while some canners report that their pack is even less than that, and from these causes it is anticipated that prices will rule very high. The agent who received this news claims that it is the very latest from the coast and reliable. The trade therefore is anxiously awaiting further news from the coast, but so far none has been received. It is the impression with some of them, however, that if the cessation in the run is any way serious, that the canners will not be able to turn out the pack they predicted even if "the run" does again recommence in generous proportions. Holders of canned salmon are therefore pursuing a conservative course.

RETAIL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

President Clark, of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association, presided over the regular meeting Monday night with the aid of a new gavel.

Among those present were: Vice-President Gibson, Secretary Corrie, Treasurer McMillan, F. S. Roberts, H. W. McCulloch, A. G. Booth, F. W. Johnston, J. S. Bond, Sykes, White, Robt. Mills, J. Ferguson, J. McMahon.

W. H. Morgan, of Leslieville, was elected a member. He was present and was introduced to the meeting by the president.

Treasurer McMillan reported that full returns were not yet in regarding the picnic, but he estimated that there would be a balance on hand of about $150.

A letter addressed to Vice-President Gibson was read by the Secretary, enclosing the sum of $25 from the Reindeer Condensed Milk Co. as a donation towards the expenses of the excursion.

On motion of Mr. Roberts the secretary was instructed to acknowledge the donation with thanks.

No report having been received from the committee re appointment of solicitor for the Association, the secretary was instructed to write Mr. Williamson, convenor of the committee, asking him to submit a report at the next regular meeting.

Vice-President Gibson started what proved to be an animated discussion. The subject was Dinny Callahan's letter in THE GROCER. Personally he did not care what was said about him, but he complained of remarks that were made therein regarding other persons, one in particular, and of the foot note by the editor which appeared at the bottom of the letter in reference to the 48th Highlanders' band at the Grocers' picnic. The statement therein made that proper preparations had not been made for the band he vigorously denounced as being untrue.

Mr. White also denied that no provision had been made, and he related how he and other members of the committee had arranged for dinner for the band at 40 cents each, and the money had been paid. He complained that the bandmaster did not put in an appearance at the Falls till about three o'clock, and he blamed him for more music not being furnished.

Treasurer McMillan volunteered the information that the bandmaster had waived all claim for his services on account of his having been with the excursionists only part of the day.

Mr. Booth: It is no use talking, the band was not well treated in regard to dinner. At twelve o'clock they could not get anything but bread and cheese, and the landlord when complained to in regard to the matter said that the Association had not made any arrangements with him for dinner for the band.

Mr. Mills: It is not true.

Mr. McCulloch reiterated what Mr. Booth had said, and urged that in future when arrangements were made for dinners that it be clinched in writing.

Mr. Roberts also claimed that the band was not well treated as regards dinner, but that was of course no fault of the committee. It had made the arrangements in good faith.

Mr. Bond: It must not be forgotten that the foot-note at the bottom of Dinny Callahan's letter did not give the opinion of the editor of THE GROCER. It was merely relating what the bandmaster said.

The matter was then allowed to drop.

"How about agitating for a reduction in the garnishee?" queried the President.

Mr. Johnston: I think it would be a good thing.

"I move that the subject be referred to the Executive Committee," said Mr. Roberts.

Mr. White: Well, I don't think it is a good thing for us to encourage grocers to give credit like we do. (Hear, hear, and laughter.) Therefore, I believe in allowing the law to remain as it is. If we are foolish enough to give twenty-five or fifty dollars' credit to poor people I don't think we should ask the law to collect it. To me it seems far better that the law should be such that we would be afraid to give too much credit.

Mr. Roberts' motion was seconded by Mr. McCulloch and carried.

Somebody suggested that the Sunday street car question be discussed, but the president remarked: "Well, I think it would be better to discuss questions of more importance to the trade. For instance the oyster season is coming on and we don't know whether we are going to get three or five gallons. I think the dealers should be compelled to sell by Imperial measure.

Mr. Booth said that if the trade demanded that the oysters be measured by Imperial measure the dealers could be compelled to do so. The grocers themselves were to blame for the short measure they got. The law was on the statute books, and all they wanted to do was to see that it was enforced.

The matter dropped.

Mr. Roberts complained of the action of the City Council in putting off the Civic holiday till the 28th of the month. People would be then returning from their holidays and the result, by closing so late in the month, would be unnecessary loss to the trade. Anyhow it seemed to be the policy of the City Council not to consult the interests of the business men.

The association adjourned to meet on September 18.

CANNED GOODS GOSSIP.

Canned salmon in flat tins is still rather scarce in New York, and brings relatively higher prices than stock packed in tall tins. The latter are quite firm, however, at $1.15 upward for strictly prime red Alaska packing.

There are six lobster factories operated this season at and near Northport, with an average put out of 2,000 cans. About 25 boats are employed.

The Kingsville canning factory is building quite an addition, and will commence canning tomatoes in ten days.

Arrivals of new pack Canadian lobster have been moderate thus far. The season is practically ended, and the pack is found to be a light one. Spot prices are $1.85 to $2 for tall, and $2.30 to $2.50 for flat tins.—N.Y. Journal of Commerce.

Advices received by local canners from the north is to the effect that the salmon run on the Skeena has been very poor, as the water at present is too clear. The pack to date has been very light, less than last year. It is thought that this will tend to strengthen the market.—News, Vancouver.

The canning business is among the leading industries of the country, and, owing to the small amount of capital required to establish a factory, is increasing more rapidly than any other industry. The pack of corn last year was over 1,000,000 cans in excess of the year before, and of tomatoes over 1,500,000 cans, yet the prices are much better than they were then, and the consumption is on a steady increase.—Commercial Enquirer.

The Delhi Canning Company is putting in a new corn machine, which cooks the corn, fills the can, which it caps, and counts it, by once going through, and will do away with at least half a dozen hands.

Salmon fishing has made the Fraser River hum with business in the last week and the 5,000 people directly or indirectly employed in the fishing business have had literally more than they could attend to. The record of salmon canning has been broken, not only on the Fraser but in the world, by the day's pack of one canning factory, and on Monday, although it sounds fishy, it is nevertheless a fact, that the river was literally full of salmon from side to side.—News, Vancouver, Aug. 3.

The total pack of salmon for the whole Columbia River up to date is 239,612 cases, and of this 145,620 cases have been put up in Astoria canneries. The pack to date, at a careful estimate, includes 380,000 Chinook salmon, besides 920,000 small fish. It is now certain that the total season's pack will amount to from 275,000 to 282,000 cases, or at the best 173,000 cases short of last year. All the canneries on the lower Columbia will this year pack fall fish. They will start to work again on September 10, and run continuously till November 1. In addition to the river pack of silversides, work will be carried on at Nehalen, Tillomook, Gray's Harbor, Coquille and Suislaw, and the total fall output will probably be 118,000 cases. This will be the first year since 1887 that fall fish have been packed on the Columbia. The news that the Fraser River work has been plentiful will greatly depress the sale and prices of the fall pack here, but canners will be forced to operate on account of the slack of the spring run, though there will not be more than a few cents a case profit. They have decided not to pay fishermen more than 2 cents per lb. for fall fish, and it has not yet been decided by the union whether they will accept this rate.—Times, Victoria.

A REPLY TO "DINNY CALLAHAN."

DEAR GROCER,—I among many others of your subscribers am disgusted in being compelled to read such productions as THE GROCER chooses to publish from time to time under the non-de-plume of "Dinny Callahan." These letters contain virtually nothing but satire and abuse of wholesale and retail grocers of this city at whom the writer wishes to inflict a sly and assassin-like thrust. His reasons for so doing are quite plain to any right thinking person. For instance, some wholesale salesmen are in competition with other salesmen in the same line of business, and they either by their superiority in goods, prices or salesmanship, or by being better known for sincerity and integrity, are able to distance them in the race for trade. As this is very galling for some persons to bear, and as they are so miserably mean and vindictive, they resort to such unseemly means as your "Dinny Callahan" does to spit out his spleen and abuse under an assumed name, thinking in so doing to cover up and round off his vemon so that only those whom he intends it for shall get the full blast. A very honorable and manly way of doing it, isn't it? This applies also to the retail grocers. There are some of them in this city who have quit dealing or doing any business at all with the writer of those letters, and to those who know of this it is plainly seen by his remarks what he is driving at. It must not be forgotten that he very childlishly gave himself away in his former letters, and he apparently thought he had been too smart and thought perhaps his intimate friends would not know who was the writer of "Dinny Callahan." So he took the trouble to inform them—of course privately—but alas, unfortunately, there is very little privacy among "friends" in these days. And in reference to myself, when he becomes a little bolder and takes especial delight in showing his hatred of me and others in using me as a target to fire in his infernal shots against all those who believe in Christianity. This to my mind is the most glaring insult of all. Because he apparently does not believe in the truth, he is permitted to use a trade journal to express his hatred of it, and also of those who believe in it, and who are not ashamed to confess it and proclaim it to others.

In none of my correspondence in THE GROCER have I ever hinted what my views are on religion, nor do I do so among my customers or in the trade generally, although there are a couple of wholesale houses known in this city and some of their staff who appear to take a delight in talking and trying to ridicule me in these things in an underhand or serpent like manner, and it has proven to their disadvantage and loss of business and respect, and I have been the gainer, because honest business men who love truth and uprightness have no use for such infernal machines as "Dinny Callahan" and his craft. I trust, Mr. Editor, you will see the force of these plain remarks and facts, and in the future you will expurgate all such idiocy from the columns of THE GROCER.

Yours, etc.,

STEPHEN HUSTWITT.

Toronto, Aug., '93.

[We fancy our correspondent, Mr. Hustwitt, takes the matter too seriously. Had we for one moment thought that "Dinny Callahan" was actuated by venomous motives his letter would never have appeared in the columns of THE GROCER. We did not think so then, nor do we now. What he aimed to be was humorous. And as for his attacking religion, it it scarcely possible that he would do that seeing that he is a prominent and official member of a city church. Mr. Hustwitt may be assured that his "walk and conversation" is too well known to the trade of Toronto for his character to be injured by even an attack that was actuated by venom.—ED. GROCER.]

RECOGNISING FAITHFUL SERVICE.

Among the important elements which go to make success of failure for a man ufacturing or mercantile enterprise is the service rendered by subordinates. Intelligent, earnest, or faithful service on their part goes very far toward the success of the enterprise. On the other hand ,stupid, half-hearted and disloyal work will often render null the ablest endeavors of the executive head. Doubtless it is the appreciation of the truth of these facts that has led the proprietor of the New York Herald to treat the faithful workers upon his publication with the marked consideration that he has always, and that led him last week to publicly outline a plan which he intends to put into practice in the near future, that will not only acknowledge the services rendered by his subordinates,but will give the latter very substantial evidence of the fact that at least one utilizer of the labor of other people recognizes and appreciates the value of faithful service on the part of his employees, who, in his large and comprehensive view, are considered co-workers or co-partners. In brief, Mr. Bennett proposes to form a co-operative society for the sole benefit of members of the Herald staff, which Mr. Bennett considers to include the "General Manager, city editor, news editor, night editor, all editors, correspondents, reporters, artists, cashier, clerks, foreman press and composing rooms, proofreaders, compositors, printers, exchange readers, shipping clerks, telegraph clerks, advertising clerks, messengers, porters, firemen, machinists—for they are all members of the Herald staff, are they not?" This is one of the most enlightened recognitions of the value of faithful service that has ever been made; and in fact it is far in advance of previous actions in a similar line. It cannot be denied that such action on the part of Mr. Bennett will inure to his own benefit, and be one of the best investments that he ever made.

We have given space here to an outline of Mr. Bennett's scheme, because it conveys a lesson to the head of every manufacturing and mercantile establishment reached by the Cordage Trade Journal. Too often has the important fact that faithful service is a jewel of rare value and profit been overlooked or ignored. We know of concerns that have secured (inadvertently, perhaps) the services of some of the very best men in their particular line in the business, and that have profited by their faithful services to the extent of many hundreds of thousands of dollars. Yet the heads of these houses showed little appreciation of the value of these faithful workers. No encouragement was given to them; their remuneration was kept down to the lowest possible point. The result has been that the faithful servants have been secured by more appreciative concerns. The houses which might have retained the services of these most desirable men by anything like a fair division of the proceeds of their labor now have, in some cases, some very indifferent servants, and will continue to have so long as they continue their present policy. Such desirable men that they may now have in their employ are likely to be tempted to leave their present employers by promises of a better reward.

It is a very short-sighted business policy to attempt to run a business without regard to the proper cultivation of a loyal spirit between the employer and the employed. Thousands of dollars may be lost annually by those who think that they can afford to ignore this matter. Whatever attention is paid to cultivating the goodwill of employees is sure to result in a many fold profit.—Cordage Trade Journal.

THE SOLICITOR.

Every merchant has had his share of experience with the swarm of solicitors that prey upon all classes of business men, says Ohio Merchant. The first week he spent in business found them his most frequent visitors. And since then his success or failure has been in a measure due to the policy he has adopted and adhered to with regard to such solicitations. To a person out of the "swim" it would seem a easy matter for a merchant to squelch all of these intruders at the start, but questions of tact, and seeming good-will at least are involved, and it does not pay in the long run for a merchant to be a fighting blunderbuss in this regard.

The one kind of solicitor that the merchant must treat courteously, and whose propositions he must consider seriously is the one sent out by the jobbing house. He can keep in touch with the tread of the market and learn a great deal about the details of his business from these men. If they open his eyes to investments he had not thought of before, so much the better for him, if they are paying investments. At any rate he can learn by such experiences what to do next time, and this is a part of his education as a merchant. To deal thoughtfully with these commercial travellers will teach him discretion in business, whatever may be his intention about giving an order. It will never pay him to get the reputation among these men of being cranky. If some of these dyspeptic, sour-visaged retailers could hear the conversations about them in some of the drummers' associations, when these fellows get together and "size up" some of the retailers they have called upon, it would cause a little chagrin. Does the little dried up corner groceryman, who always greets the drummer with a gruff "Naw! don't want anything to-day!" imagine for an instant that he has a firm grip on the biggest end of the earth, and stands in a position to wobble it as he pleases? It may be interesting for him to know that every drummer whose misfortune has led its predecessor under his unhospitable roof, has "spotted" him, and that every new drummer who contemplates a call upon him, has learned every trait of his character and knows just how to take him. Drummers are very good judges of human nature and they are very just in what they say about their customers to each other. And where a man treats them "white," whether he buys of them or not, they spot him as one of the oases in their deserts. But he need have no fear that these knights of the grip will be so unchivalrous as to kill the goose that lays the golden eggs by abusing his good will.

The average commercial drummer is in the business to stay, and he fully appreciates that it is for his interest not to sell to his customer an order of anything that the latter will regret having bought. With him, while gruffness of manner does not count as an argument, good, straight business logic does, and the customer will find that it is possible with such acquirements to convince the drummer that it would not be wise to give an order, and that in the face of good logic the latter will withdraw. In a continuation of this subject, the merchant's experiences with other kinds of solicitors will be discussed.

SQUARE YOUR ACCOUNTS.

A retail grocer told us the other day that he had a good balance in his bank and proposed to keep it there.

"Do you owe anything?"

"Yes; I owe a few accounts but they'll wait. I'm not going to squeeze myself dry for anyone."

This merchant is guilty of a grave fault. He may not realize it, but so far as business honor and commercial morality are concerned he is a thief. In all probability the jobbers owed have been carrying him for months and showing every possible kindness. They have taken the retailer's word to the effect that he is unable to pay, and have treated him with all possible leniency. They need every dollar that is due them, yet forbear to press the debtor for a settlement.

And all the time that retail grocer has money in the bank and could pay his accounts if he would. He is perpetrating a great wrong. The man who owes, has money, and will not pay, wrongs himself, his creditors, and the entire community. In times like these a merchant should pay out his cash just as fast as he gets it. He should keep his accounts paid up just as closely as possible. If he does this—if he shows a disposition to do all he can, he has a right to expect favors from his jobber, and will doubtless receive them. Don't hold money in banks. Pay it out, and thus help to keep the business world moving.—Commercial Tribune.

MOCHA COFFEE.

The best sorts of Mocha coffee are grown in the Province of Yemen, where it is cultivated in terraces among the mountain ravines. It is grown in soil composed of clay, porphyry and trap. It is generally cultivated in small gardens. The best coffee garden of Yemen is said to be that of Uddein, in the northeast of Mocha. It is claimed that the bean there produced is the finest coffee bean grown in the world. Another important district is that of Beit-el-Fakhi, in which are various estates on Mountain terraces stretching from the Tehama on the mountains of Central Yemen. A third district includes the gardens of Mofhak and Harraz on the flanks of the Yemen Mountains in the direction of Hobdelda. Some small and productive gardens are at Jenaad, to the east of Mocha. The entire productive region lies from 1,200 to 4,000 feet above sea level, and is comparatively a small section of Yemen.

The coffee is brought from the interior to Aden on camels, the average load being 3 cwt.

It is undeniable that coffee is subjected to considerable manipulation in Aden, where it is mixed with coffee produced in other regions. Ceylon coffee is used to mix with the true Mocha, which has a greenish yellow color; the mountain coffee being the darker, while some sorts have a light yellow color.

It is stated that while formerly the bulk of the supply was sent to London and Marsailles, at present 70 per cent. of it comes to the United States, reaching this country through the ports of Boston and New York. Much of this is genuine, while an unknown proportion is Mocha only in name and style of package. Generally coffee arrives here in large bales containing smaller packages, styled eights (40 pounds) and quarter (80 pounds) bales. These are subject to a tare of 2 1-2 to 3 1-2 lbs on eighths and 4 to 4 1-2 pounds on quarter bales. These bales are of peculiar shape and constructed of a coarse material sewed with a vegetable substance, which becomes hard and excessively tough by age. We believe that it is practically impossible to imitate these bales in this country.

Mr. F. B. Thurber, in his book, "Coffee from Plantation to Cup," says: "At Aden and Alexandria the coffee is carefully picked over and assorted in compliance with the singular fashion in trade, which creates a demand in Europe for the larger beans, while the United States will have none but the smaller ones. In point of fact, the larger beans are the best, being fully developed both in appearance and flavor."

Formerly Arabian coffee was exported from the port of Mocha, which is about 120 miles from Aden, and this gave to it the name of Mocha, by which it is familiarly known throughout the United States.

Mocha coffee acquired its great reputation before coffee culture became such a widely spread industry as it now is. The flavor of some of the coffee of Yemen is undoubtedly exquisite, but there are many who prefer coffee of other growths. There are some growths of Central American, Mexican and South American plantations that will equal in flavor the best selections of East Indian or Arabian coffee. Then tastes differ, and that sort which is regarded the best by some is not in favor with others. Really, there are only two distinctions—rank and mild. The Rio and Liberian grades come under the former designation, and all other growths, including Santos, under the latter. The variation in flavor is largely due to climate and soil.

The latest figures at command make the export from the port of Aden, the outlet for Mocha coffee, in the years 1888-89, 85,417 cwt. cleaned beans and 6,670 cwt. of berries. The imports for that year into the port of Aden were 73,203 cwt. The imports into the United States in 1892 were 48,766 bales, or 3,483 tons, out of a total of all kinds of coffee imported of 280,117 tons, or 1 1-4 per cent. In 1891 only 1,971 tons were sold; 2,096 in 1890. The average yearlysales of Mocha for five years were 2,026 tons 2,093 in 1890. The average yearly sales of all kinds of 241,923 tons, or less than 1 per cent. of the total.—American Grocer.

BE EXPLICIT.

The truth of the familiar adage, "time is money," is not only generally admitted, but every means within the reach of the would-be successful merchant is employed to eliminate waste of this most precious article. In some cases, however, we doubt if the object is accomplished by the methods used. The practice of abbreviation, so much resorted to, in making out bills, and similar instruments of business, while it is easy and expeditious for the clerk, it is often the means of much delay, which would otherwise be averted. Something might be learned from our French and English neighbors, who take nothing for granted, and maintain a degree of explicitness, throughout, that leaves no chance for misunderstanding. No reference is here made to standard abbreviations, such as are generally understood by all, but only those that originate with the clerk, and which, in many cases, he alone can understand. For example, when a bill or receipt appears for identification, bearing the legend: 100 css Who. Tom., 1 c. Ex. Bf., it often requires a letter of enquiry, and an answer, to develop the fact that 100 cases of whole tomatoes, and a case of extract of beef, are the articles represented by these combinations. In addition to the unnecessary time consumed, the item of postage may be added as an argument in favor of explicitness in invoices, and all similar lists of merchandise. While we advocate, in the strongest terms, good time and labor saving methods, we argue in favor of hurrying slowly, and the use of judgment in the selection of systems. In this connection we cite the case of the old countryman, who, upon the receipt of his bill from the grocer, enquired of his wife what she had been doing with so much ditto. She informed him that she'd had no ditto. With this assurance he started for the grocer's, where the matter was soon cleared up. Upon his return his wife asked him what he had found out, and he told her he had found out that he was an ignoramus, and she was ditto.—Grocers' Review.

WHEN ACCOUNTS ARE DUE.

The prompt settlement of indebtedness will, in times like the present, do much to prevent disasters and check further depression of trade, remarks Merchants' Review. When money is hard to borrow except at exorbitant rates of interest, even on the best of collateral, neglect to settle accounts may inflict injuries that are so wide spreading in their effects that not only every branch of trade must suffer but the consumer—the wage-earner—eventually bereached, through the shutting down of factories, the restriction of building and mining operations, etc. It therefore behooves the consumer, the retailer and the jobber to meet their obligations as promptly as possible, not only for the general good but to prevent injury to themselves from the boomerang tendency of such evils. When accounts are due it is poor policy to let them run on if one has the requisite funds in bank, and especially is this true of times like the present when banks are closing their doors all over the country. A dry goods jobber of this city recently received a letter from a delinquent customer stating that he wanted more time to meet his obligations, as a local bank had burst, locking up for the time being, possibly wiping out, his deposit of $1,500, all the cash he had at his disposal. The retailer's indebtedness to the jobber, by a strauge coincidence, amounted to exactly the sum locked up in the closed bank, and he had been dunned repeatedly. Some men hate to let money go when once they get a grip on it, and this retailer evidently belonged to this class. In reply to his request he received a little lecture from his creditor on the folly of holding back remittances needed by the creditor, when he was well able to settle the account, and his attention was drawn to the fact that if he had met his obligations promptly the failure of the bank could not have hurt him, while his credit would have been much better. The dealer has learned a lesson which he probably will not forgetin a hurry. In future, when accounts are due, he will hardly procrastinate if his bank balance admits of prompt remittances to the creditors.

THE GROCER AND THE GROCERY.

"Cleanliness is next to godliness," and the truly conscientious grocer steadily, gradually approaching the horizon of success, surely has found that old adage the cynosure of his prosperity.

How inviting to the delicate sensitiveness of the epicure's tomach is a nice, clean, sweet-smelling grocery.

We have all, no doubt, entered one of those dingy little rooms, with, perhaps, a few windows that were intended to admit light, but to which naure had been permitted to hang curtains of dust, which, with the rain, commingled to compound its fabric; where "the man that tends store" sits lazily at the stove, smoking his pipe and wondering what is the matter with trade.

Well, I am going to enter that store to do my marketing. I am a stranger in town, and looking for a desirable place to do my trading. I enter, but am I attracted by the sight before my eyes? The man lazily draws his feet down from the stove, adjusts his pipe to the corner of his mouth and pulls down his vest. "What can I do for you?" he says at length, but not until I have had time to take in my surroundings, the dark, dingy room,, the musty, sickening odor arising from it all.

There, strewn upon the counter, are the onions and rhubarb and radishes and the spinach that were brought in yesterday, now withered, with a few fresh bunches of each thrown promiscuously on the top, the floor bespattered with dust, paper, quids of tobacco and cigar stumps. Brown, white and various colored wrapping paper and boxes of all sizes are scattered over the counters. The shelves have been neglected by the duster, and the goods irregularly "thrown" upon them; the canned goods and spice cans that, perhaps, were once bright and attractive, now rusty and fly-specked. Under the coffee mill is a pile of coffee-dust, dropped from time to time, a dusty, dirty display of canned goods in the front window. The broom hangs on its nail, and the busy little spiders have woven a beautiful web from it to the ceiling, all of which proclaims the grocer a discouraged, unenterprising, negligent and indolent man. My stomach fails me!

"What do you want?" he repeats.

The sound of his voice awakens me from my reverie, and, saying I was looking around, step out into the sweet, refreshing atmosphere.

"Let me see; what was that advertisement I saw in the morning Tribune, where a grocer named Jones came out in big letters announcing a special sale of some new catsup? I'll find Jones' establishment."

"Hello! What's this?" I am attracted by a large glass case a few paces down the street. Arriving there, I find it is arranged with several wire shelves and beautiful fresh displays of green groceries nicely piled upon them; and from the top came a continuous spray of water from a perforated trough, fed by a hose attachment with the waterworks. I glance at the sign above the door, and I find it is John Jones. I look in at the window, and there, in beautiful and regular display is the catsup I saw advertised in the paper.

I enter, and immediately a bright-eyed, neatly-dressed, and smiling young man approaches me with a cheerful "Good morning, sir. May I wait upon you?" Again I find myself thinking.

What a contrast between the two stores; the one I had just left and the one I now entered. How clean the windows, admitting a cheerful flood of sunlight; the floor was evidently on the best of terms with the broom; the young clerks, flying to and fro, bright and cheerily, waiting upon the customers, that were continually coming and going. Everything was a marvel of cleanliness, and the goods, all in charming display, at once made such an impression on my stomach that my appetite soon returned.

"Are you being waited upon, sir?" says the clerk.

"I beg your pardon, young man," says I. "I would like to speak to Mr. Jones." Jones is called, and he quickly responds from behind the railing of his neat little office.

After exchanging the usual courtesies, I tell him I wish to become a customer, and when I have presented my references, etc., we fall to talking.

"Mr. Jones, you have a model store," I venture.

"Yes, I think so, too, Mr. ——, and I am proud of it, and my clerks and the steady increase in the number of customers; but I have had to work hard and persevere through all the perplexities that arise in every groceryman's career. I have had to overcome much discouragement and throw aside this thing of worrying, and I have learned how to compete with my fellow-grocers in many ways, and, Mr. ——, do you know wherein I found the secret of my success?"

"Well, I can readily guess—but go on; this is interesting to me."

"Above all things, I keep my store and its contents clean. When I commenced business I selected the most mannerly, industrious young men for clerks. I taught them, first of all, the necessity of keeping everything clean; to dust the shelves, counters, and stock thoroughly daily. To keep counters clean of packages, paper, twine, etc., and to have places for all these things, to replenish the displays whenever anything was sold from them, to wash out the butter chest daily with hot water, and keep the butter nicely shaped on clean plates, to keep the cheese box thoroughly clean and always close it when not in use. I pay them from $10 to $15 per week, according to the merit of their work. I expect them all to be at the store by 7 o'clock every day, and one each week to come at 6 o'clock to open. I have taught them to greet a customer as soon as possible after he enters the store, to help him in deciding what he wants; that is, to always be ready to show him some new article we may have taken into our stock, or anything the clerk thinks would be a novelty to him. I never would have a crabbed, lazy, unwilling old fellow in my employ. I am very particular about having the goods delivered as soon after the order is left as possible, and whenever I wait upon a customer it is in such a way that I will expect to see him in my store again. I never misrepresent my goods. To tell the truth about them I have found the best policy, and that I have always told my clerks. And upon these and many other little points I base the cause of my success."

"I can easily see the truth in all you say, Mr. Jones. By the way, what is this new catsup you are advertising?"

"A very fine article, Mr. ——. But, let me tell you, right there is another great factor that figures in the success of a groceryman. I have tried all manner of ways of advertising, and I find that when I come out in big letters in the paper, simply announcing a specialty for a week, say, at a time, and display the same goods I advertise in a conspicuous place in my store, I find that the most successful way. Anything to get the people to the store, you know, and we can show them what we have. The paper advertisement simply presses the button, you know, and we do the rest."

I ate a hearty supper that night of the good things I bought of Jones, and I envied him his success.

So, if we commence and give our groceries, as well as ourselves, a complete overhauling, get the best young fellows for clerks, take heart and stop worrying, but work with a will that soon will overcome discouragement, and, in other words, look at this man Jones as a guide, we will find our sales much increased.—G. T. L., in Cincinnati Tribune.

THE TOMATO AND CORN CROPS.

Reports of damage by drouth to the tomato and corn crops of the Province have been flying about during the last few days. To lend color to the matter some of the canners have instructed their agents to cease making offers.

"Yes," said the representative of one canning company, "my firm have instructed me to offer no more tomatoes and corn just now. They give as the reason that the crops have been damaged by drouth. And our firm is pretty reliable."

Jobbers on the other hand—and some of them claim to have taken special pains to learn the condition of affairs—do not hesitate to state that the crops have not been damaged, at least to any extent.

"Our Mr. Blank," said one wholesaler, "has just returned from a trip through Western Ontario on the C.P.R. He tells me that the ground between Guelph and London is so dry that it is cracking. At the same time, he says that tomatoes and corn are practically uninjured. From all I can learn they have had fair sprinkling of rain in the Niagara district, and the crops there are good."

"Well, sir," replied one jobber who said he had taken special pains to find out the state of affairs, "my reports are most favorable both for corn and tomatoes. The outlook has not been finer for years. Peas are a short crop, but comparatively speaking it makes little difference, for we probably do not sell more than ten cases of peas where we sell one hundred cases of tomatoes or corn. The great tomato belt of this province is the district of which Hamilton is the centre. Well, around there they tell me that an abundant crop is promised. They have had some good showers along there, and the country is looking fine. Most of the corn I think is grown around Aylmer, Picton, Trenton, etc. I have had men in here from there and they tell me that the pack promises most favorable, and that it will probably be on the market two weeks earlier than usual."

"Yes, it is true that damage has been done," remarked the senior partner of one wholesale house; "and I'm glad of it, for I'm holding some. It's selfish that isn't it?" he added with a laugh.

CANADA'S GREAT FAIR, TORONTO.

Though not a World's Fair, Canada's Great Industrial Fair, to be held at Toronto from the 4th to the 16th September, will be very much the same in every respect, except as to extent, and will be equally as important to the people of Canada. This year's fair will, it is predicted, excel all former ones, both in point of exhibits and in the attendance of visitors. The space in all the buildings has already been applied for. New stables and new cattle sheds have been erected at a cost of over $100,000, and can pass through all the buildings and view the animals under cover at all hours of the day. The grounds have also been drained, new roads constructed, and many other improvements made. The special attractions are promised to be greater and better than ever and will embrace many new features. A very small proportion of the Canadian people are going to the World's Fair at Chicago, the masses being intent on taking in the Toronto Fair, of which they all feel justly proud.

INTERESTING TEA STATISTICS.

Mail advices from London under date of August 3, report that the arrivals of China tea have been heavy, including seven million pounds from the north and three million pounds from Foo Chow. The Kaisows proved to be somewhat better than last year, and have been sold freely at prices ranging from 8 1-2d. to 1s. 2 1-2d. Panyongs and Paklums are about the same quality as last year. Saryunes are inferior. In Monings, the demand has been principally for the finest and commonest.

Imports of the month for London are 24,084,000 pounds, against 21,098,000 pounds last year. Deliveries for London 19,026,000 pounds, against 18,644,000 pounds last year. But notwithstanding this the stock in London July 31 was smaller than last season, being 58,899,000 pounds, against 61,624,000 last year.

The export sfrom China for the season of 1893-4, according to latest telegrams, were 30,750,000 pounds, against 31,000,000 in 1892-3.

PAWNED A $20 BILL FOR 75c.

A man entered a pawnbroker's shop in the Bowery, and, laying down a 20-dollar bill, asked if he could be accommodated with a dollar on it. The pawnbroker was an excellent judge of money, and saw at once that the bill was genuine. So he turned and said to the stranger, shoving the bill toward him as he spoke, that he was in no mood for nonsense. But the stranger shoving the bill back, rejoined in earnest tones that he meant business; that he couldn't get any conductor on a horse-car to change the bill; that he had already been put off three cars; that his boots were awful tight, and that unless he could get a dollar on the bill he would be compelled to walk to the Battery. Well, the pawnbroker couldn't but feel that the stranger meant what he said. So he took up the 20-dollar bill, toyed with it a few moments, and then said to him: "Well, my friend, I'd like to accommodate you, but owing to the financial stringency I can only give you 75 cents."

ODE TO CAMPBELLTON, N.B.

A representative of THE GROCER had occasion to visit the town of Campbellton, N.B, recently on business. His mission was to secure advertisements and subscribers for the paper. But in the midst of his peregrinations he was pounced upon by a minion of the law and served with a notice to appear before the local magistrate on a charge of infringement of a by-law which stipulated that pedlars of books must take out a license before they can do business in the town. In vain did THE GROCER'S representative plead that he was not a book pedlar but the representative of a trade newspaper, and before he was set at liberty had to contribute $1 and costs to the town treasury. THE GROCER has several subscribers in Campbellton and they were indignant. A Halifax traveler felt the same way, and sitting down he reeled off these verses:

Campbellton's streets are grassy,
Its visitors are few,
And those whose business takes them there
Their journey well may rue.

Their journey well may rue,
If their case is like to mine,
For I could not book an order there
Until I paid a fine!

Yes, I had to pay a fine,
Because a stranger there
Must help to swell the treasury
And stand before the Mayor!

The Mayor is an autocrat,
Whose word goes down as law;
His sentence is, "One dollar, sir,"
And do not slack your jaw.

And when I paid my dollar there,
I soon did quit the town,
And eastward roamed in search of rest,
Far from that Mayor's frown.

And judge ye then of my surprise,
When down by Charlo's shore,
I soon did meet the Mayor bold
With half a dozen more!

Who in the style they did affect,
Both haughty and severe,
Did hold thereat a high old time
On fish and ginger beer.

And though I'd paid my dollar good
They never looked at me,
Nor asked me in to take their cheer
At Charlo by the sea.

So all who sojourn down this way
A warning take by me,
And skip the town of Campbellton
Or skinned you sure will be.

Charlo, Aug. 1st, 1893.

A lady from Belgrave was the other day charged with sending a letter containing money in a newspaper contrary to the law. She pleaded guilty, and a fine of $10—the lowest that could be imposed under the Act—and costs were inflicted. Assistant Post Office Inspector Maloney, of Stratford, was complainant.

German refiners complain of small profits owing to keen competition and the narrow margin between raw sugar and its product. The general consumption of sugar in Germany, however, is increasing, recently prepared statistics showing 9.5 kilos, or about 20 lbs. per capita, as against 8.6 kilos average for the preceding five years.

Sugar is at present rather scarce here owing to the delay in the arrival of the vessels from Java for the refinery. A shipment of 200 tons was, however, brought up from San Francisco by the last steamer, so that the refinery will have a supply on hand in a day or two. —News-Advertiser, Vancouver.

Major & Eldridge, wholesale and commission merchants in Vancouver, have made arrangements for starting a pork packing establishment there, and it is expected that in a month's time it will be running full blast. They have obtained a site for a slaughter house between Vancouver and Hastings, and the necessary buildings are now being erected there, and a side track being laid from the C.P.R. main track. The firm expect to get their hogs chiefly from the North-west, but they will purchase as many as possible in the province.

A St. John's paper says: The average catch of fish in Quidi Vidi village thus far is about six quintals for each fisherman. Some men have got ten andtwelve quintals, while others got but three and four. The average is not half what it should be, and would be a fair month's work for what has been done in two months and a half.

According to Gow, Wilson & Stanton's tea circular, advices from Calcutta and Colombo speak of the improved demand from Australia and New Zealand. These markets are fast becoming important factors in the consumption of British grown tea, the amount shipped from India and Ceylon during June alone amounting to nearly one million pounds.

There are grocery stores and grocery stores, but how many are there like that one in a neighboring city for the stealing of which a man was arrested the other day? The total stock and fixtures of this emporium were valued at only $100. Yet it is the owners of such places who help to swell the numbers of grocers in the cities and make the percentage of association grocers appear small.—Ex.

Of course, everybody knows just why business is dull and money is scarce. But the trouble is that there are a hundred different opinions. Very few people, though, have thought it out for themselves. They hear or read somebody's explanation and then go echoing it around as gospel truth. One prominent personage will declare his views and all the little fellows of his party or society will straightway look very wise and tell you just what's the matter.—Ex.

"I can stock your house so that you need not make another purchase of food for five years, and you shall have every day for dinner soup, fish, or entree, roasts, fruits, pudding, cheese and coffee," said a local dealer the other day. If things keep on in this way, all a man will have to carry in his pocket hereafter will be a latch-key and a can-opener, the former to get into the house and the latter to get into the eatables. —St. Louis Grocer.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

Trade during the week has been fair. In fact, the general expectation seems to be for a fair fall trade once the farmers know with certainty what the crop returns are likely to be. The representative of a leading firm who is at present making a trip through Ontario, writing in regard to the district west of Ontario, considers the outlook hopeful, remarking as a most favorable feature that stocks in country dealers hands are in good shape.

The fact that several of the houses here have had to send forward repeat orders for dress goods and other staple lines of imported fabrics is considered a very good sign. The lines which have been running most in demand have been vevets, velveteens, cashmeres, shirtings, jacquards and ladies cloakings. There has been a good call for all kinds of plain stuffs.

Payments have ruled fair on the whole, and in some cases improvement is reported. The 4th of August is usually a good time to judge this matter with the dry goods trade, and many of the houses state that fully 80 per cent. of their paper was met, which they consider a very satisfactory showing.

S. Greenshields, Son & Co. have an extensive stock of Moreens, which are in good demand for shirtings.

Mr. Eagam, of J. G. Mackenzie & Co., is away from town at present enjoying a well-earned holiday.

Hodgson, Summer & Co. now have their complete stock of fall and winter goods on hand. They report a decided improvement in their August sales.

Several of Thibeaudeau Bros.' travelers have returned from their placing trips, and report having had a very satisfactory season for dress goods, tapestry and brussels carpets and floor oil cloths.

J. G. Mackenzie & Co. state that their turnover of challies this summer both in light and dark grounds, was much larger than last year.

Brophy, Cairns & Co. are offering some superior shirtings in silk stripes and moire effects, also some handsome lines of meltons in single and double widths.

S. Greenshields, Son & Co. are having a good run on velvets, velveteens and braids. They say that the turnover of these is quite as satisfactory as that for the corresponding period last season.

Gault Bros.' travelers report an encouraging demand for general fall supplies, tweeds, overcoatings and cloakings, and their stock in country dealers' hands is small.

Mr. Tower, of Mathews, Tower & Co., has returned from a Western trip, and reports a satisfactory turnover of their fine lines of gents' furnishings. The firm are no longer handling cowboy hats.

W. Agnew & Co. are receiving extensive lines of silk sealettes, black broche dress goods, silk warp henriettas and black jacquards, and are generally busy in forwarding fall orders from them.

Mr. Thomas Brophy, of Brophy, Cairns & Co., is at present making a trip through Ontario. Writing of the situation, he considers the prospects fairly encouraging in most of the districts that he has visited.

The dress fabrics bearing the trade mark, the "Varnished Board," from Priestley's well-known works, are familiar to everyone in the trade. Messrs. S. Greenshields, Son & Co. have been appointed sole Canadian agents for this great firm, and have now got a full line of samples on which to take orders for fall importation. The fabrics turned out by these works comprise "Henriettas," "Sachnfire de l'Inde" serge, "Armure" half mourning cloth, Melrose, "Drop d'Alma," crepe cloth, "Clairette," etc., in silk and wool; and albatross cloth, mourning cloth, savinua twill, veiling, real India cloth, crepe cloaking, Panama, grenadine and biarretz in all wool; also several of the above lines given under the caption of silk and wool.

TORONTO MARKET.

The past week has been dull owing to the holiday season. The country merchants have gone to the World's Fair or to the trout creek and travelers are returning home slightly disgusted. Those who are out are staying there because they have to, not because it is profitable. Still wholesalers are busy receiving shipments and reshipping. A few sorting orders of an unimportant character are received daily. Next week quite a number of buyers are expected in town and this will cause a brisker appearance. Stocks are pretty well completed now.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling are showing som enovelties in dress goods in natte cloths, hopsackings in plain and shot effects, Loie Fuller fancies, embroidered costume cloths, serges, broadcloths, wailes and whipcords in both plain and shot effects.

In their carpet and curtain department John Macdonald & Co. have re-stocked lace curtains, curtain nets, table covers, piano felts, English art squares in all sizes, and chenille curtains. Their stock is now ready for visiting buyers.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence report that they have bought peau de sois, pongees, surahs and failles at prices which ruled before the recent enormous rise in silk. This is a strong evidence that the silk market has weakened considerably.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. show special value in men's neckwear, and their range of novelties is probably as extensive as any in the trade.

John Macdonald & Co. have just opened up a shipment of ladies' and children's woolen vests and underwear in Health, Hygiene, and Elysian brands. These goods are carried in all sizes and quoted at special prices. A shipment of English and German wool goods is to hand, comprising boots, bootees, infantees, gaiters, leggings, mitts and mittens, caps and hoods. These are sightly goods, and are shown in very comely combinations of colors.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling have a shipment of cotton Irish pointe laces. A shipment of wide military and hercules braids are to hand in navy, seal, myrtle, grey, granite and black. These are scarce goods. They are still selling at prices which obtained before the recent continental advance. Handkerchiefs in white, fancy printed borders, embroidered, etc., are shown in large range, including the newest designs and novelties.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have opened a range of fine tartan effects in dress goods—bright, rich, effective colorings that must make up very handsomely.

Alexander & Anderson claim that their celebrated and well-known "Excelsior" flannel has no equal in the trade. It commands a ready sale, and ought to be exhibited on every retail counter. They control the entire production of the mill, so that it cannot be had elsewhere. The make, finish, color and texture of this popular flannel is always reliable, and to merchants who have not hitherto handled it we would suggest sending for a sample piece and judging for themselves.

John Macdonald & Co. have a delivery of metal belts in white and gilt. This lot was bought at a special price, and

Two new lines of whalebone, one called "Corrugated Corrubone," and another called "The Antarctic Real Whalebone." The latter is in continuous lengths of twelve yards. "Swan Bill Safety" and "Spring" hooks and eyes in white and black have been restocked. White cotton and silk hat elas-

Gordon, Mackay & Co. pay great attention to the details of their haberdashery and smallwares, with the result of a steadily increasing trade in that department.

Alexander & Anderson have bought out "The John Ryan Mantle Manufacturing Co." of this city. They have engaged a staff of designers, cutters, tailors, operators, etc., in New York, and are going to prosecute the new branch of their business with energy and vigor. They are unfortunately a little late to catch the early orders, but their factory is now in full working order, and we understand they are producing very stylish tailor-made mantles, for which they are finding a ready sale. The garments produced are all the very latest New York styles, and, being tailor-made, the fit, cut, and finish are reliable and perfect. We wish this enterprising firm every success in their new venture.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have a new idea in suspenders for the coming season. Every pair of the special range has an accident insurance policy for £100 or $500, attached, good for one year in any part of the world. This adds next to nothing to the cost of the line, and is perfectly sound. The idea recommends itself, and is sure to take.

Some very pretty fur trimmings are shown by the house of Caldecott, Burton & Spence, who can generally be relied upon for some of the latest novelties of this department. The goods are of German manufacture, and are very low in price. Among the different furs, they show coney in white, black, grey and browns; natural squirrel, silver-tipped fox; oppossum, in greyish fawn shades and black. By skin measurement they run in width from 1-8 inch to 1-2 inch. Fur trimmings of this nature, and also those of the same kind introducing gimp effects, they predict good for autumn. They report trade in the dress goods department one of the best fall seasons they have had for years. They report shot effects of all classes good, but particularly so in whipcord and hopsack styles; also shot cheviots and shot diagonals. They show silk checks on shot diagonals and shot checks on hopsacking; also a very neat effect in silk figure woven on a black ground whipcord, the spots running in the various colors. Tartan checks for trimming and for children's wear have gone well. In plain goods they quote whipcords and sedans —a plain, smooth, satin-finished cloth— in the lead. They show what they claim to be special value in a line of lady's cloth, 48-inch wide, in all the newest colorings. Estamine and diagonal serges, with a strong demand for harder and smoother finished goods, more to the style of men's stuff, and the demand for blacks in these goods, are on the increase.

HINTS FOR GROCERS.

Charcoal is of great value in keeping ice chests, store rooms and food sweet, writes Maria Parloa in the Ladies' Home Journal. Place a shallow dish of fine charcoal in the ice chest. In milk rooms and other rooms where food is kept, set dishes of charcoal. If poultry or birds are to be hung in a cool room for a few days, remove the internal organs and partially fill the body with charcoal. Now wrap the birds in paper and hang up. If the outside of the poultry is rubbed with black pepper before being covered with the paper, it will be still further protected from the flies. Small birds, livers, kidneys, sweet breads, etc., may be wrapped in parafine paper and then be buried in a bed of charcoal.

For keeping large pieces of meat and poultry here is a simple device. Have a large barrel or hogshead half filled with charcoal. Put meat hooks in a strip of joist and place across the top of the barrel. Have a netting to spread over this. This barrel may be kept in a cool place and pieces of meat may be hung on the hooks. The charcoal will keep the atmosphere dry and sweet, and the netting will be a protection against insects. Should there be danger from rats or mice, use wire netting.

Fresh fish may be rubbed with salt, wrapped in paper and buried in a bed of charcoal. Of course, the charcoal in barrels and boxes should be changed at least once a month. It can be used for lighting fires, or for broiling meats or fish. If, however, it is difficult to get a good supply of charcoal, the old can be purified by putting it into the stove with a few lighted chips and allowing it to burn until red hot. At this stage open all the windows and let the gas pass off. Then close the draughts of the stove, remove the covers, and leave the room. When the charcoal becomes cold it will be ready for use again.

If there is any question as to the purity of the water, none of it should be used for drinking or cooking purposes unless it is first boiled. There are several methods of purifying water, but boiling it is the safest of all. When water is tainted by decaying vegetable matter, several methods are used to purify it. It may be boiled, or filtered through charcoal, or oak chips, or a little alum may be added. The condition of the astringent wood or the alum causes the albuminous matter in the water to coagulate and fall to the bottom, and the purified water may be poured off.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, Aug. 17, 1893.

GROCERIES.

Trade is as flat as the proverbial pancake this week. It has neither the form nor comliness of life, and the hardest thing they have to do around the warehouses is to brush away the flies. Even the ubiquitous broker keeps to the seclusion of his office or hies himself away on holidaying or fishing tours. Where it has been the rule to find him in the jobber's sample room, it is now the exception. The quietude is of course not unusual at this season. In fact it is the usual thing, but business men do not like it all the same. But while they complain in one breath at the present condition of affairs, they in the next speak hopefully of the future. The quietness is not confined to any one line. It is general, in no one article being the demand really brisk.

COFFEE.

Business is still confined to a few odd bags, although there seems to be a little better demand from the wholesalers, but brokers say that it is at prices lower than they are willing to accept. Coffees generally are scarce on this market, and jobbers have in some instances been compelled to take better grades than they really wanted. The Rio market continues firm and the New York weak. Advices received here this week state that duplicate invoices cannot be laid down here at less than ½c. more. Prices are unchanged, and we quote: Rio, 20 to 21½c.; East Indian, 27 to 30c.; South American, 21 to 23c.; Santos, 21 to 22c.; Java, 30 to 32c.; Mocha, 26 to 27c.; Maracaibo, 21 to 23c.

DRIED FRUIT.

The market remains much as before. Valencia raisins continue to move slowly at 6½ to 7½c. for selected and 3½ to 4c. for off stalk. Sultanas are meeting with a fair demand this week at 6 to 6½c. Currants are as before, quiet, at 5½c. up. There are some cheap currants offering from New York, but reports are conflicting as to quality. There are a few more prunes moving; prices are unchanged, 7 to 7½c. still being the idea. New dates for November shipment are offerng at about same price as last year, but no business seems to have been done, the period being considered to remote. Locally the trade is as slow as ever, and 5 to 5½c. are the ruling prices. Figs are as before, dull and unchanged.

NUTS.

There is scarcely anything doing, and the only thing worthy of special note is that there is a scarcity of soft shelled almonds on this market. We quote:—Brazil nuts 11 to 11½c. a pound; Sicily shelled almonds, 32 to 35c. a pound; soft shelled almonds, 15 to 16c.; peanuts, 13 to 14c for roasted and 11 to 12½c. for green; cocoa nuts, $5 to $5.50 per sack; Marbot walnuts 11½ to 12c.; pecans 13½ to 16c.

RICE AND SPICES.

There is a fair demand for rice without any change in prices; 3⅝ to 3⅞c. is the idea as to price. Outside an improved demand for pickling spices, there is scarcely anything doing in this line. Whole ginger is quoted at 20 to 25c., pure white pepper at 20 to 28c., and pure black at 14 to 16c.

SUGAR.

Nothing new has developed in this market during the week. The movement continues to be of a hand to mouth character, only more so than a week ago. For granulated 5⅝c. still remains the idea, although this price is occasionally shaded. Yellows run all the way from 4½ to 5¼c. The Lower Province refineries have not yet began to make offers. They were offering consigned yellows, but in these they have been cleaned out.

Willett & Gray's Statistical says: The week—Raws declined ⅛c. Refined unchanged. Receipts, 22,420 tons. Meltings, 25,000 tons. Total stock in four ports, 96,230 tons, against 98,810 tons last week, and 155,912 tons last year. By cable: Stock in Havana and Matanzas, 113,000 tons, against 114,000 tons last week, 135,869 tons last year. The six principal ports of Cuba gave for the week: Receipts, 3,000 tons; exports, 5,000 tons; stock, 166,000 tons, against 168,000 tons last week and 155,693 tons last year. Total stock in all the principal countries, 722,830 tons, against 976,905 tons at same dates last year. Afloat to the United States from all countries estimated 50,000 tons, against 70,000 tons last year.

Raws—Financial affairs have gone from bad to worse during the week and counteracted all the good effect that might have resulted from the statistical position of sugar. Buyers simply waited the pleasure of holders, and towards the close of the week a few sellers gave up the hope of an advance and disposed of some sugars on last week's basis. Other holders now seem disposed to follow, and Europe also has barely maintained its firmness until the end of the week, when it shows signs of some weakness again. The most that can now be expected is a steady market at quotations until there is some change for the better in the financial situation. At present it seems to be growing worse and worse all the time.

The Democratic platform of "Tariff for revenue only" naturally calls for a duty on sugar; but, in view of reciprocity treaties, bounties, etc,. it is quite difficult to foresee the method of arriving at this result. If a duty for revenue is collected, then it requires the equivalent of about 25 to 30 per cent. on all articles (sugar included) to cover the amount required for this purpose, which would be about 1¼c. per lb. on raw sugar and say 1¾c. on refined.

Refined—A much improved demand followed the firmer tone of raws during the week, and as the entire business of the country is on a close hand-to-mouth basis from necessity for the strictest curtailment in buying in these troublous times, it is to be expected that the slight weakness in the tone of raws will not influence the trade in refined unfavorably. There are no indications of any reduction in prices for the present.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups continue dull and unchanged, with prices ranging from 2¼c. up. There is nothing doing in molasses, and 30 to 35c. are still the ruling prices.

TEAS.

The demand has slackened off somewhat, as is usual at this season, although there is a fair business doing in Ceylons, particularly the golden tip varieties, at 27 to 35c. The little that is doing in Japans is at prices ranging from 19 to 20c. In China teas there is scarcely anything doing. Prices are unchanged and we quote: Japans (1892-3)—Low grade and common 15 to 18c.; medium, 18 to 20c.; fine, 20 to 25c.; new Japans, 30 to 32c. for medium and 30 to 35c. for fine. Blacks — Low grades Congous, 14½ to 16½c.; medium, 18 to 23c.; fine, 30 to 45c.; fancy, 60 to 70c. Brokers also report the local market sluggish but showing some signs of improvement. They have experienced a little more enquiry for Japans, but other kinds have been neglected. Local jobbers are reported to be less eager to buy than are those outside.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

Prices have further appreciated since a week ago, and there is a brisk local demand. But as far as export business is concerned there is practically nothing doing. This is the weak point in the market, and if it does not improve in this particular, prices will naturally depreciate, for the local demand cannot absorb all the offerings. Shippers are holding off. The idea as to price is: Fine dairy tubs, pails and crocks, 17 to 18c.; store packed, 14 to 16c.; pound rolls, 19 to 20c. Creamery butter is in good demand at 20½ to 21c. for tubs and 22 to 23c. for pound prints.

Cheese continues in fairly good demand at 9½ to 10c. The factories are selling at 9¼ to 9½c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—There seems to be a slight scarcity. Ordinarily hand-picked beans are selling at $1.35 to $1.40, but anyone wanting a really choice article would have to pay 5 or 10c. more than the outside figure quoted. Medium are selling at $1.20 to $1.25.

DRIED APPLES—Demand has fallen off slightly, but jobbers seem willing to pay a little more, 4c. now being the figure at which they are making purchases instead of 3½ to 4c. as before. Jobbers are ordinarily getting 4½ to 5c from retailers. There is evidently some speculation being done.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Dull and nominally 8½ to 9c.; quarters sell at 7c., and they are about the only kind to be had.

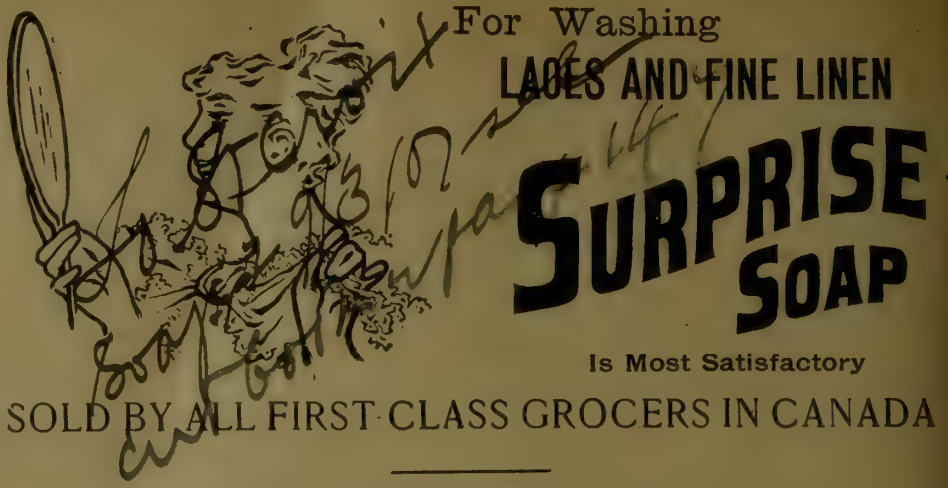
CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

Trade continues light, and there seems to be a slight disposition to shade prices on vegetables. There is no great demand for any particular line, although the preference, if anything, is for tomatoes and corn. The idea as to price for tomatoes, corn and peas is still 80 to 85c., although the inside figure would probably be shaded for round lots. The market is bare of apples, but the demand is light and prices unchanged at $2 to $2.25 for gallons and 85c. to $1 for 3's. The stock of peaches is also small and demand light at $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's and $3 to $3.25 for 3's. The peach crop this year is large, and the trade in consequence anticipate that prices will rule lower than last season. Plums are unchanged at $1.45 to $1.55. It is too early to speak definitely, but the indications are that there will be a good crop of plums. In strawberries and raspberries there is nothing scarcely doing. There is still a scarcity of good red brands of salmon; $1.50 seems to be the lowest point at which red fish can be got, while the range runs 10 or 20c. higher than that figure. Flat tins are quoted at from $1.60 to $1.80 Holders of white salmon are anxious sellers, and prices for this kind of fish run all the way from $1.10 to $1.25. The demand continues fair for good brands of lobsters but the poorer kinds are not much wanted. The idea for first-class brands is $1.80 to $2 for talls and $2.40 to $2.50 for flats. Sardines are slow, and reports regarding the catch are conflicting, but it is said that the pack will likely be larger than last year, and prices, in consequence, lower. Meats are quiet and unchanged.

EGGS—Supplies are liberal, demand small and prices easier at 10¾ to 11c. Jobbers are not inclined to handle them except on commission.

POULTRY—Unchanged at 50 to 60c. for chickens and 40 to 60c. for ducks.



POTATOES—Are in good demand and supplies are a little scarce; jobbers are paying $1.25 per bbl. and selling at $1.75 to $2.

HONEY—There is more enquiry than for some time, and prices are unchanged at 5 to 8c. for extracted; new season's section, 20c.

ONIONS—Unchanged at $2 to $2.25 for Egyptians.

MAPLE SYRUP—Dull at 50 to 60c.

HOPS—Market continues dull and featureless at 12 to 14c. for 92's.

GREEN FRUIT.

The briskness noted for some weeks past continues. The small domestic fruits are of course occupying the most attention, but considerable trade is doing in bananas and watermelons. Lemons are lower and oranges are quiet. The market is cleaned out of Messina oranges, while Rhoda oranges are arriving. The feature of the week has been the receipt of large shipments of California fruit, some of it direct. The market is in consequence lower on this kind of fruit We quote as follows : Oranges—Rhodas, $4.50 for 160's ; California Mediterranean's, $4.50 to $5 per box; lemons, $3.50 to $4.50; bananas, $1.25 to $1.75 ; raspberries, 8c.; Lawton berries 9 to 10c.; peaches, 40 to 80c. per basket ; Canadian tomatoes, 35c. per basket ; huckleberries, 70 to 90c.; cucumbers, 25 to 30c. per basket ; beans, 35c. per basket ; cabbage, $1.50 to $1.75 per bbl. for Canadian; watermelons, 18 to 25c.; California fruit—Peaches, $1.75 to $2 ; pears, $2.65 to $2.90 ; plums, $1.85 to $2

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

The supply of dressed hogs for the season is liberal and prices are a little easier at $7.75 to $8. The demand continues good for hog products, but bacon, lard and barrelled pork is a little easier in sympathy with the United States market. The price of compound lard is affected more than that of the pure are, stocks of the latter here being light.

BACON—Long clear, 10½ to 10¾ c. Smoked backs 12 to 12½c., bellies, 13 to 13½c., rolls 10 to 10½c.

HAMS—In good demand and firm at 13 to 13½c. for smoked.

LARD—PureCanadian 12¾c. in tubs, 13c. in pails and 12½c. in tierces. Compound 9¾ to 10c.

BARREL PORK—Canadian heavy mess $20, Canadian short cut $21, shoulder mess $18.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef fores are 4½ to 5c., hindquarters 7½ to 8½c., mutton 6 to 7c., lamb 10 to 12c.

FISH.

The fish trade is weak, and no change can be looked for before the first or second week in September. We quote as follows : Fresh sea salmon, 16 to 18c. ; skinned and boned codfish, 6½c. ; Labrador herring, $3 per half barrel ; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 11 to 12½c.; boneless fish, 4c. ; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; blue back herring, $2.00 per hundred ; blue pickerel, 4 to 5c. a lb.; yellow ditto, 7 to 8c. a lb.; salmon trout and white fish, 7c.; eels, 6 to 8c. a lb.; prepared frogs 50c. per doz.

SALT.

The salt trade is fairly good. A number of car lots have gone out during the present week, besides the usual good demand for smaller lots. Prices are unchanged. Quotations in car lots are : Sack salt, 65c. ; barrels, $1 ; dairy, $1.25. Liverpool rock, $10 per ton.

HIDES, SKINS, TALLOW, WOOL.

WOOL—There is little or nothing doing in wool. The mills seem to be well supplied and many of them are waiting to see if wool will not be lower in price. Indications favor this policy, and factories with cash can buy wool lower now than they have done for years. For fleece wool buyers are paying 17c. for selected combing, and 18 to 20c. for clothing. Foreign wools are deemed by some mills to be more profitable to manufacturers than Canadian wools.

SKINS—Calfskins are more nominal, although prices have a downward tendency, with stocks accumulating. Dealers are paying 6c. for No. 1 and 5c. for No. 2. Pelts and lambskins are scarce and are being rapidly taken up at outside prices. The prices paid are 45c. for lambskins and 30c. for pelts. Our large dealers say there has been an importation from Chicago of over 5,000 lambskins and pelts, and if this continues it will have a disastrous effect upon the local markets.

HIDES—Hides are quiet and the market weak. There has been a large quantity sold in Canada of Western hides at low figures. These sales have completely demoralized our local markets, and dealers are paying 4c. for No. 1 local hides, which is about 50 per cent. below their actual value, in comparison with the cured hides bought on the Western market.

PETROLEUM.

There has been no material change on the Toronto market, trade being fair and prices as before. We quote: 5 to 10 bbl. lots, imperial gallons, Toronto: Canadian, 12½ to 13c.; carbon safety, 16½ to 17c.; Canadian water white, 17c.; American water white, 18½ to 19c.; photogene, 22c.

MARKET NOTES.

H. P. Eckardt & Co are offering a line of canned corn at 75c.

Edward Adams & Co. have just received a shipment of Morton's fresh herrings in flat tins.

Granulated cornmeal has been advanced 50c. per barrel, being now quoted at $3.50 per barrel.

Eby, Blain & Co. are offering the finest selected Valencia raisins at $1 to $1.25 per box.

Smith & Keighley expect the arrival of the new fall catch salmon in about a week or ten days.

The Toronto salt works report the sale this week of 3 cars of sacks salt, 1 car of bbl. salt, 1 car of dairy salt.

Smith & Keighley are selling off the balance of old prunes in cases at low prices to make way for new goods.

Davidson & Hay have new season's pack of green peas in stock. The quality is said to be ahead of last year's crop.

The "Fan" brand of Japan teas are maintaining their high reputation. Edward Adams & Co. are the importers.

A shipment of Morton's kippered fresh herring and preserved bloaters has just been received by H. P. Eckardt & Co.

A new soap is being placed on the Toronto market. It is known as "Home, Sweet Home," and is being handled exclusively by Sloan & Crowther. Sheet music, "Home, Sweet Home," an elaborate hanger, paper bags, and coin envelopes for mailing silver accompany the soap. It retails at 5c. per cake, and that at a good profit. It is manufactured by the London Soap Co.

T. Kinnear & Co. are in receipt of a shipment of Goat brand Japan tea, which is said to show first-class value.

H. J. Bray has now on hand a fine supply of frogs, which he says at this season of the year are in good demand owing to the scarcity of fish.

Sloan & Crowther are showing a fine lot of Imperial Vostizza currants in half boxes of 60 lbs. They are being offered at a low price.

A shipment of new crop collory coffee, consigned to Musson & Co., has arrived at New York and will be on the Toronto market in about a week.

The Canadian Specialty Co. are now selling agents for the Adams Root Beer Extract Co. They are doing an increasing businesss, especially on the 10c. size.

The attention of the trade is drawn to the advertisement of H. P. Eckardt & Co., in this issue. They are offering choice new cut lemons at $4 to $4.50 per bbl. according to quality.

Gillard's whole mixed pickle spice imparts a peculiarly pleasant aromatic flavor to pickles and sauces, and wherever used it has become a household favorite. Put up by W. H. Gillard & Co., of Hamilton.

A direct car of California fruits—pears, peaches and plums—was received this week by Dawson & Co. of Toronto. It was one of the best cars received here for years, and, coming on a bare market, was soon disposed of.

W. G. A. Lambe & Co. received the first shipment of "Globe" salmon this season on Tuesday last. Perkins, Ince & Co. and Eby, Blain & Co. are also in receipt of shipments. This is only the second season for this brand on this market, and it has already established a reputation for being of the highest class goods.

The "Lion" brand of canned salmon will be handled on this market this season by two firms only—Sloan & Crowther and Davidson & Hay. It is said that the brand will sell as low as the common brands. "Globe" salmon is of excellent quality, and not much of it is usually seen on this market, it being mostly packed for the English market.

W. H. Gillard & Co., of Hamilton, have secured a fine line of May pickings new season's Japan teas, which they are offering to the trade at from 17½ cents up. The attention of the trade is drawn to their advertisement on another page.

Marcopoli & Fils, of Smyrna, under date of July 22, advise that the sultana raisin crop is progressing favorably and promises to be one of the finest on record. The yield is expected to be about the same as last year, 35,000 tons. Opening prices are expected to be moderate, owing to heavy stocks on the English market. The fig crop, it is estimated, will be about 10 per cent. smaller than last year, but better in quality. Shipments of both figs and sultanas will be a week or ten days late owing to a late spring. The crop of Eleme raisins is estimated at 20,000 tons, against 22,000 tons last year, and the quality promises to be satisfactory.

The Ireland National Food Co. say the sales of their dessicated rolled wheat have trebled during the past six months. It is made from the choicest Ontario white winter wheat thoroughly cleaned so as to remove all foreign matter or imperfect grains. In the process of manufacturing and preparing this food the grain is dessicated to the extent that the starch in it is mostly changed into dextrine (thus rendering the first act of digestion done before the food enters the stomach; by a further process of decortication all the outer woody fibre or coarse bran is removed, leaving only the perfect berry of the wheat and the fine inner bran containing the phosphates, nitrogen gluten and other food elements so necessary to supply the wastes of the body. It is then rolled into a convenient form for cooking and makes most delicious porridge, gems, puddings, griddle cakes, etc. It requires only a few minutes to cook it perfectly.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

GROCERIES

MONTREAL, Aug. 17, 1893.

Business in groceries during the past week has been very quiet, and there is nothing special to mention, the only lines which furnish anything at all of interest being tea and canned salmon. In the former there has been quite a fair movement, due to the arrival of samples of new crop Japan, which are considered first-class property at the prices at which they are offering, and agents in consequence have booked quite a few orders for goods ranging all the way from 16c. to 21c., the most of the demand running to stock which can be had around 18 to 20c. In canned salmon the arrival of about five carloads of new pack, and the receipt of advices to the effect that there had been a sudden stop in the run on the Fraser river, has been the feature. The details of the matter are referred to elsewhere, and it will suffice to say here that the goods are offering at $1.35, and some of the French wholesale houses have, it is said, booked quite a few orders on this basis. In other lines there is absolutely no change and the general market is certainly dull, with buyers showing very little inclination about trading. There is nothing to say about the sugar market, which is steady. Molasses have furnished a few sales from first hands, but jobbers are not doing much in a regular way. Syrups are quiet. Dried fruits are purely nominal so far as old stock is concerned, while there is nothing new to relate with regard to offers on new crop, the nominal quotation, cost and freight to Montreal, being 16s. 6d. to 18s.

SUGAR.

The sugar market is quiet and steady. A fair movement is noted in granulated at 5 3-8c. and yellows are unchanged at 4 3-8 to 5c., according to grade, some fair quantities having been moved between the inside price and 4 7-8c.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There has been rather more doing in Barbadoes molasses from first hands, and we note the sale of a cargo lot of 200 puncheons at 30c. and another at 29 1-2c. In a regular jobbing way, however, business is quiet with buyers showing no urgency whatever. Values in this connection are precisely the same, the combine steadily maintaining its agreement to sell nothing under 33 to 34c.

Syrups are quiet but steady at 1 7-8 to 2 1-8c. per lb. in the wood for Canadian, and 17 to 20c. per gallon for American, as to quality.

TEA.

The tea market has furnished a fair degree of activity in consequence of the arrival of samples of new crop Japans, and brokers have been booking satisfactory orders for stock, ranging from 16 to 21c., the bulk of the demand running to grades at 18 to 20c. The goods are generally considered first-class, and far better value at the money than the new goods purchased last fall. How the arrivals of these new crop samples will influence holders of old stock Japans is difficult to say, and opinions differ with regard to it. Holders of some of the higher priced stock of last year, however, who have held on with the idea of making a better figure in their stock, will find it more difficult to make with this good quality new crop offering at the prices quoted.

In blacks and greens there is no particular change, business ruling very quiet.

COFFEES.

There is no change in the coffee market, business being of small volume and prices the same. We quote: Jamaica, 17 to 19c.; Maracaibo, 19 to 22c.; Rio, 19 to 20c.; Java, 24 to 28c., and Mocha 25 to 28c., in wholesale lots, smaller quantities calling for an advance on these figures

SPICES.

Spices rule quiet and unchanged. We quote Jamaica ginger at 16 to 18c. for common and 20 to 23c. for fine, black papper 8 to 8c., pimento 6 1-2c., nutmegs, 50 to 52 1-2c. to $1.

RICE.

Only a fair local business is noted in rice, and prices here show no change, but the primary markets are cabled very firm.

DRIED FRUIT.

The market is a nominal one so far as Valencia raisins are concerned. There are none in first hands on spot so we cannot quote them. Advices regarding new crop do not denote any actual transactions, but prices are nominally quoted, cost and freight Montreal, at 16s. 6d. to 18s. First shipments of new fruit are expected to be made about the 15th, but will not come direct, but via Liverpool. Currants are very dull, and can be had all the way from 4 1-2 to 5 3-4c., as to quality.

GREEN FRUIT.

There is nothing special in the way of change to note in green fruit during the week. The feature of the week has been the fight between the general houses and the Fruit Exchange over California fruit, but it is understood that the latter, owing to its facilities, which enable it to receive goods more promptly, has the advantage. In the matter of staple lines, business is quiet and prices much the same. Lemons are dull and somewhat lower, at $2.25 to $3.50, according to quality. Oranges have been in fairly good demand at $3.25 to $3.50 per box. Bananas were in rather light supply during the week, and sold at $1 to $1.75 per bunch. Pears have been in good demand at $2.65 per box and $4 per keg. Peaches have moved at $2.25 per box, and all kinds of currants at 50c. per pail.

BEANS.

The market is steady. We quote hand-picked $1.40 to $1.50, and ordinary to good $1.25 to $1.30, with inferior 95c to $1.10.

HOPS.

The market is quiet at 18 1-2 to 19c. for choice Eastern Townships. Advices from New York State and abroad are bullish in their tenor with regard to the growing crop. Picking is expected to begin generally in about a fortnight hence.

HONEY

Some lots of new honey offering during the week have found purchasers at 11 to 13 1-2c., the outside for white clover stock. Buckwheat honey changed hands at 11 to 11 1-2c. Old stock is very slow sale at 6 1-2 to 8c. for extracted, as to quality.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market is very quiet. A small jobbing trade is being done in smoked meats, but the market as a whole is dull. Canadian short cut, per bbl., $21 to $21.50; mess pork, Western, new, per bbl., $22; hams, city cured, per lb., 12 to 13c.; lard, Canadian, in pails, 11 to 12 1-2c.; bacon, per lb., 11 1-2 to 12 1-4c.; lard, common refined, per lb., 9 1-4 to 9 3-4c.

EGGS.

Receipts of eggs rule moderate, but they are ample for the demand, which is slow. Prices range from 11 to 12c., the average price being 11 1-2c.

CHEESE.

The cheese market does not show any change, the ruling features of the situation being essentially unchanged. In a regular way over the cable it is extremely difficult to get offers which permit the payment of the prices ruling here, and regular business of this sort is naturally slow as a result of it. We hear of some purchases for this week's shipment, a line of 1,000 boxes of Ottawa valley goods changing hands at 9 3-8c. They were white, and the figure is considered a specially good one. A lot of French goods, 500 boxes, also changed hands at 9 1-4c. With regard to finest Ontario stock, both white and colored, a reliable quotation can hardly be given, but if a seller is to make any money on colored he would certainly have to get 9 3-4c. and for white 9 1-2c. These figures, however, have not been made on spot, so that they cannot be quoted, and a dealer who cabled Saturday on colored on the basis of 9 3-4c. got a refusal of his offer today. The buying in the country, however, proceeds as usual, and some 4,000 French country cheese fetched 9 to 9 1-4c. first cost. Finest Ontario colored, 9 5-8c.; finest Ontario white, 9 1-2c.; finest Townships, 9 3-8c.; finest French colored, 9 1-8 to 9 1-4.; finest French white, 9 to 9 1-8c.; under grades, 8 3-4c.; cable, white, 46s.; cable, colored, 47s.

BUTTER.

Butter does not show any new phase, the market ruling dull. Shippers say there is no more encouragement in their advices from the other side than there was last week, and they all talk lower prices. We understand that lots of creamery changed hands at 20 to 20 1-2c., and this is the basis on which business in finest for shipment if possible. In Western 17c. is all that shippers are prepared to give, and their ideas are down from that on some of the goods that are offering. There is very little doing in the grade or in Townships. Creamery, 20 to 20 1-2c.; Townships, 19 to 20c.; Western dairy, 16 to 17c.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

Porto Rico molasses in cargo lots has sold on this market during the week at 25c. per puncheon.

Rice millers here have been advised by cable that prices in Burmah have advanced 1 1-2d. to 4 1-2d. on rice.

The first shipment of currants from Greece, it is expected, will be made on the 31st of the present month.

Advices from Denia state that the crop of Valencia raisins will be lighter than that of last year, and the fruit of small size.

W. T. Costigan & Co. are offering new pack canned salmon for prompt delivery, having received three carloads during the week.

Cable advices from London on sugar state that a firmer feeling has set in, the impression being that the new beet crop will be higher priced than was at first thought.

Mr. Brown, of Tetley's Tea Co., is at present in the Maritime Provinces drumming them up in his line. The new delivery wagon of the company is a unique idea in the matter of advertising, and has attracted a good deal of attention since its first appearance. It is an exact copy of a tea-pot, the spout forming a rest for the driver's feet, while the handle in the rear is the catch of the door which lets into the interior of the wagon.

Advices received here from New York on sugar noted an advance in centrifugals, which were quoted at 4c., and the statement was made that it was only the financial depression which prevented a general advance.

A correspondent writes: We noticed a few days since the arrival of a daughter in the household of H. V. Taylor, the popular Western traveler for Edward Adams & Co. We congratulate him on the event, which is not of frequent occurrence, and trust both mother and daughter are doing well.

TRACING LOST BUTTER.

Bill Nye often disguises a great deal of cold, hard truth under his flow of nonsense. In a recent letter he turns the shaft of ridicule upon the circumlocution methods in vogue upon railroads.

William, according to his own admission, while in the "wooly West" hungered for some nice Eastern butter, "made from the real cream, distilled from the luscious cow." He ordered some of this article, and describes his efforts to secure the consignment as follows:

I received notice that the butter had been shipped. Part of it arrived. Only twenty pounds out of eighty, but the freight bill on the whole amount got in one day ahead of the twenty pound tub. I paid the bill, and not knowing any of the officials but the general passenger agent, with whom I had held some correspondence, I wrote him. He wrote me coldly, by means of a long primer editorial, that such claims should go to the general freight agent. I wrote to the general freight agent in a tone of pleasant banter, asking him to return the butter; that I liked fun just as well as anybody, but that it had gone far enough, or at least part of it had, and that if he would send on the rest before it acquired that peculiar boquet which comes to butter when it is in full meridian, I would be obliged.

He wrote me asking for the bill of lading or way bill or manifest, or whatever it was, stating also that the letter was dictated. I had a long correspondence with him extending over a number of years, and throughout the whole blindly infatuating interchange of thought he never came right out and said that these were his sentiments, but always claimed that each was a dictated letter. He did not tell me who did the dictating.

In the meantime my butter was probably sidetracked in a small place seeking madly to get out and shrieking for air. I was going to say wildly tearing its hair, but it was not that kind of butter. The general freight agent wrote me at last that he had sent a tracer after it. I went home and told my wife that the general freight agent had sent a tracer and a St. Bernard dog in search of our butter.

Some time then elapsed, though we had been eating bacon gravy on our bread two years, when a letter from the general freight office, addressed in a beautiful Spencerian hand, with bloated capitals was received and contents noted. In business correspondence contents are almost invariably noted. The general said that tracer had just returned, though fatigued, I judged from the wonderful word painting of the letter. In my mind's eye I could see the tracer, with his tongue hanging out about four inches, sinking down exhausted in the general freight office. The letter stated that the tracer had demonstrated the fact that the butter was lost; I had often feared it myself. I had frequently dreamed that my butter was in a lost and undone condition. I wrote again and asked the general if he could not wrench loose some more facts like that by twisting the tail of a tracer. I said it in a sneering way, for I was mad.

He wrote once more to state that the matter had been turned over to the auditor, and that he begged leave to subscribe himself my friend and well-wisher and to repeat with even greater earnestness than ever before that this was a dictated letter. I then studied the style and orthography, syntax and prosody of the auditor. He reproved me sharply for sending so far away after butter, and then went to Florida to seek much-needed rest. I then fell into the hands of the first assistant auditor, who enjoyed signing his name to statements which did not in any way compromise him.

But I must be brief. I cannot enter into details. I know there was a long discussion over the question whether the consignor had released the butter or not, and if so, whether the consignor or consignee would be liable for damages done by released butter while in transit. I never got the butter, but I obtained a terse English style of erecting Gothic sentences, banked up with odd little three-cornered adjectives that I could have secured in no other way. I was paid for the butter at last, but when my little children climb on my knee as I wrote these lines and ask what it was that made my affluent hair so white while their face is still so young and fair, I tell the story.

ON THE UP GRADE.

"Down in Middle Tennessee the other day," said a drummer, "as I came out of the store where I had finished my business, I saw one of the small farmer class sitting on a nail keg. His clothes were ragged, his face was thin, his shoulders fell forward, he was utterly spiritless, and altogether the most forlorn specimen I had met in a month. We struck up an acquaintance. I asked him about the crops, and he answered dolefully. He asked me where I was from. When I told him Texas, he said:

"Mebbe you know Bill Russell of Kaufman County?"

"I said I did. He wanted to know how Bill was doing and I told him.

"'Well,' said he, 'when you get back to Texas and see Bill, tell him you met his brother Pete in Bolivar. Tell him I'm doin' mighty porely; couldn't be wuss off. The crops is bad. I hain't able to get money enough to send the children to school or to get the old woman a dress. The place is mortgaged, and I don't know how we're goin' to live through this comin' winter. Times never was so bad and I'm jest clean tuckered out. I would leave Tennessee to-morrow ef I could.'

"'Partner,' said I, 'let's take one.'

"He poured down a full glass of whiskey. We stood around chatting a few minutes. I said I must go to dinner. As I left him he said, with a little more life:

"'Don't forget to tell Bill you saw me in Bolivar. Tell him I'm pegging along just about the same as ever. Things is only so-so with Pete and family."

"I went to dinner. About the middle of the afternoon I met my friend the farmer, and we had another drink. As we came out of the saloon he said:

"'I'm powerful glad I came up with yo', Colonel. It's almost as good as a visit to see someone who knows brother Bill. Now, don't you forget to tell him what I told you fore dinner. Tell him you saw Pete. Tell him we're getting along comfortable, no great shakes, you know, makin' a decent livin', with bunnets now and then for the girls and a dress for the old woman, something in the house to eat, and the crops jest middlin'. Ain't no use of misleadin' Bill and makin' him think we're better off than we air, ye know.'

"I saw the farmer once more. It was just before train time. His head was up. There was light in his eyes. This time he insisted I should join him, and I did. As he set down the empty glass he said with a ring in his voice, laying his hand on my shoulder:

"'When yo' get back to Texas yo' see Bill and tell him yo' met Pete. Tell him we're doin' well. Tell him the crops is promising, and that Pete is goin' to clean off the mortgage on the place this year, and have something right smart ahead. Tell him if he wants anything to drop on Pete fer it.'

"The farmer gave me a slap on the shoulder and went off towards the hitching-rail with shoulders thrown back, his hat over his right ear, and the tread of a man with a bank account."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THOSE POPULAR BRANDS.

I have read with considerable interest the tales of woe in your paper in the eloquent language of Mr. Jacob Furth and others. It is certainly a very serious fact that no man or firm is allowed to get a respectable profit on the grocery business—various causes are given for this state of affairs and various offered.

I can look back with pride to the days only a few years ago, when I had no trouble to run up big sales at a gross profit of 10 per cent. and 12 1-2 per cent., and now when I see the small percentage of profit on my sales I find that I am only a "pall-bearer" at the funeral of a once prosperous and honorable business—some of the writers seem to lay the blame at the door of the drummer for the loss of profit in the business. The members of the older class of drummers in the language of an Arkansas lounger, "deny the allegation and defy the alligator." None of the writers upon the subject seem to have discovered, or at least admit, the real cause of all the trouble. I do not claim to be able to cope with the eminent writers I have read after in your paper, either in business ability or thinking and reasoning powers, but from practical experience, having been in the front ranks fighting every day with all the ability and energy in my composition, trying to give my house a suitable return for the handsome salary they have always paid me, trying to hold my profits up to a degree of respectability upon a basis that I could conscientiously feel was just to both my house and my customers, I have no trouble to discover the main cause of the destruction of profits in the business.

The monster that has caused me to retreat is too formidable a foe for me to mistake him, viz., "The House Organ," "The Weekly Price List." When the merchants of St. Louis began to flood the country with price lists, they in this very act drove a dagger home to the very heart of the grocery business, and it has been gradually dying ever since.

Each house tries to excel the others in publishing the greatest number of articles among its list of "snaps," and when a drummer approaches a retailer he will not try to buy a bill until he has consulted half a dozen house organs upon every article; the consequence is the life is cut out of everything, as I am compelled to meet the printed price lists of other houses or lose my trade. Thus it is with all drummers. Now, who is to blame, the houses or the drummers?

The question answers itself, the houses. If the houses would come together and have the moral courage to stamp out of existence this destroyer of their business, they would soon see a change both pleasing and profitable to them, but just so long as these weekly price lists are scattered broadcast over the country, falling not only into the hands of retailers, but consumers as well, just so long will the grocery business prove unremunerative to the jobber.

The retailer could get all the information he wants through such a paper as the Interstate Grocer, the prices would all then be uniform, equitable and legitimate. The average retailer is willing for the jobber to make a reasonable profit on his goods, provided his neighbor does not buy cheaper. And if he is not his trade is certainly not desirable.

There is yet another thing which saps the life out of the grocery business. Every man who gets out of employment or fails in business in the country imagines himself peculiarly fitted for the position of grocery drummer, he goes to St. Louis with money enough to pay his expenses for a couple of months, and most any house will let him go out with a line of samples on commission. He is totally ignorant of the relative value of goods, or the profits they should pay, the consequence is the intelligent retailer "works him" to perfection, he sets prices which the regular man is compelled to meet, consequently the trade is thoroughly demoralized and the profits destroyed.

The question of "popular brands," discussed by Mr. Furth, will admit of considerable argument, it is certainly not the fault of the manufacturers that the prices are so cut. The house organs and incompetent drummers pick upon these articles upon which to make their fight. As for my part I sell such goods when compelled to, but I put in my best energies upon private brands, and when they have merit I soon build up a trade on the goods. Now comes the solution of the question, Where is the remedy?

In the first place let the houses be thoroughly organized so they can have concerted action upon all subjects, stop the publication of every price list in St. Louis, except the Interstate Grocer, which is the only independent grocery trade journal in the city, have your committees thoroughly examine and properly change the prices each week as the market changes, be sure the prices are sufficiently low to give the retailer full justice, then let houses employ none but honorable, reliable men who are thoroughly acquainted with the grocery business, and shut off this army of unqualified commission men, then adhere to the established prices on so-called "popular brands," while each house can then have its own private brands, and fight for supremacy upon the quality of their own goods and upon the treatment accorded the trade as well as the merits of their salesmen, who can and do create business and the sale and use of thousands of articles, notwithstanding the opinion of Mr. E. G. Leigh, Jr.

This line of action in my opinion will restore the grocery business to the honorable and profitable footing to which it properly belongs, and which it formerly had.—R. B. Arthur, in Interstate Grocer.

DOCKING OF WEIGHTS.

During the past 25 years at least the system of weighing cheese in Montreal, notwithstanding it has been acquiesced in by both buyers and sellers, has barely given the former their just due. The custom has been to give plump weight, or in other words, to give the buyer the benefit of the fractions of a pound on each cheese. For instance, if a cheese weighs 651 lbs. scant, or 65 lbs. level beam, it is but right and just that the buyer should pay for only 64 lbs., especially now that factorymen ship their cheese on the green side, and thus impose an extra shrinkage on the purchaser, which formerly took place in the factory. Then again, we have taken no cognizance of allowance for bandage,etc., so that were an attempt to be made to alter the present system, we feel confident it would result in a more liberal allowance than the public weigher is by law and the custom of over a quarter of a century now entitled to give. There appears to be at least one scribbler, however, under the cognomen or mask of "Vindex," who affects to believe, for a purpose, that the shippers of cheese in Canada get the benefit of the public weigher's figures, whereas the very reverse is the case, as shippers get paid only on the certificate of weight furnished by the public weigher. Consequently, the insinuation of "Vindex," that exporters derived benefits from Mr. McLeod's weights, falls ignominiously to the ground. If any alteration of the present system be found necessary it should certainly be more in favor of the buyer, as the weights seldom or never hold out to the retailer. What we would advocate, therefore, is that a plump pound be deducted from the level beam weight, in which case the multiples or fractions of a lb. could then be recognized by the public weigher. For instance, a cheese weighing 65⅞ lbs., less 1 lb. for shrinkage, bandage, etc., 64⅞ lbs. net. A cheese weighing 63½ lbs., less 1 lb. for shrinkage, bandage, etc., 62½ lbs. net. A cheese weighing 66⅛ lbs., less 1 lb. for shrinkage, bandage, etc., 65⅛ lbs. net. This alteration in the present weighing of cheese we must strenuously maintain would then not give the retailer the full allowance he is entitled to. The ventilation of this question by the Huntingdon Gleaner, on behalf of a solitary sorehead among the Huntingdon cheese makers, whose own weights were unquestionably at fault, may therefore after all be the means of remedying an abuse which the poor retailers have too long borne. Now, we will suppose this Huntingdon sorehead goes to his grocer for one-quarter of a lb. of cheese; would he be satisfied with a level scale on that little chunk? No; he would think he was robbed if he did not get the turn of the scale. Consider then how many turns of the scale a retailer has to give in cutting up a 65-lb. cheese, to say nothing of natural shrinkage, before it gets into the hands of the English importer. The wholesale dealer in England is compelled to allow 1 lb. of cheese for every hundred-weight he sells to a retailer, so that a full pound on this side is little enough allowance on the level beam weight as soon as it comes from the factory.

The small platform scales used in cheese factories, considering the careless manner in which they are knocked around, would need to be inspected every 24 hours in order to place reliance upon their correct weighing, so that the chances are that the instance cited by the Huntingdon Gleaner, of a lot of 45 or 47 boxes on which it is claimed there was a dockage of 54 lbs., was due to defective weighing at the factory. It must be satisfactory to our public weigher to find that the Huntingdon Gleaner has allowed its base insinuation, that "the official weigher needs disciplining, or there is collusion to defraud the country shipper," to go by default, at the point blank challenge of Mr. McLeod in his letter to that paper, which now considers it the better part of valor to slink behind silence on that point.—Trade Bulletin.

POINTS FOR PROVISIONERS.

Short clear sides should be cut reasonably square at each end, the backbone and ribs to be taken out, hench bone and breast bone sawed or cut down smooth and even with the face of the side, feather of blade bone not to be removed and no incision (pocket) to be made in the side.

Extra short clear sides should be made same as short clear, except that all the loin must be taken off the back.

Long clear sides should be cut reasonably square at both the tail end and the shoulder end, the neck taken off and smoothly trimmed, back bone, shoulder bones and ribs must be taken out, also the leg bone and blade, hench bone and breast bone sawed off or cut down smooth and even with the face of the side.

Long fat backs should be made from smooth, heavy, well fatted hogs, the sides to be cut through the centre of the ribs, from the ham to and including the shoulder, and all the lean to be taken out, trimmed smoothly and properly squared on all the edges.—National Provisioner.

FEATURES OF U. S. CANNED GOODS.

Past experience teaches that Baltimore literary productions relating to canned goods are generally optimistic, but at times there is a certain amount of conflict in the statements contained in the various circulars sent out from the Oriole City. In view of this it would seem proper to remark that the various Baltimore circulars issued on Saturday were so near alike in tone that a skeptical person might find some cause to insinuate that all were edited in one office. That such could be the fact is, however, out of reason. The remarkable similarity is therefore significant. One circular states as follows: "It may seem strange to those people, elsewhere, who are experiencing a very dull time in their business, to be told that the canned goods trade here continues quite active, and that there has actually been a legitimate advance in some articles. The Baltimore packers have, very sensibly, started everything this season at the lowest prices. The orders are numerous though small, as a rule, and come from all sections. There is no 'boom' in any line of canned goods, and no one cares to speculate in them at present." Another makes practically the same statement in the following words: "Business this week has been good, very good. Don't look incredulous—it is a fact—positive. The demand for canned goods has been as good as the corresponding week of last year, and we don't know how to express it stronger than that. The demand has been for tomatoes, peaches, berries and small fruits, with a number of nice size corn orders sandwiched in." New York brokers were rather more modest in their statement regarding last week's business, but not a few went so far as to state that a summary of sales afforded considerable satisfaction, and that, drawing the line at orders for distant future delivery, all signs pointed to a gradual improvement in the market for leading lines of Southern goods. Here and there some little concessions on price were made for the account of canners who desired to realize on a portion of their vegetables, in order to get into proper financial position to pack peaches at the most favorable period, but signs of serious depression have thus far failed to materialize. For that matter, it looks very much as though the extremely low prices have led to purchases in a quiet way by jobbers that tend to heal some weak spots that have developed since the beginning of the month. Not as favorable outline of the position of California products is justified by facts. Nevertheless there are faint signs of better things to come that will likely materialize as soon as financial affairs become less strained.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

Ald. Garratt, of Hamilton, is suing the Canada Canning Company to get $4,500 on a building contract.

The City Travelers' Association has issued a neatly printed program for its Promenade Concert and At Home to take place on the steamer Chippewa on Monday night, Aug. 21. Glionna's orchestra has been engaged for the occasion.

ECONOMY THE IDEA.

In the Mediterranean countries, and in fact everywhere that the orange is grown, says a contemporary, the utmost economy is exercised—nothing that will return a particle of fertility to the soil or a cent of revenue to the pocket of the grower is allowed to waste. Even the peel from the culls is saved, and the petals as they fall from the orange blooms are religiously gathered up and sold to the perfumer. Perhaps our people would do well to take a few lessons in economy from their foreign friends.

There is, for instance, the matter of making orange wine, marmalade, etc., from the culls, and the business might and should be developed to great proportions during the shipping season.

Of course it would not be practical for each orange-grower to manufacture the refuse fruit into these commodities himself, and the only way to utilize it in a profitable manner is by disposing of it to the factories that might be establishd in every orange growing section. Each grower could then save his culls, and after a day's packing deliver them to the factories and secure so much per thousand for them. These factories could utilize every portion of the fruit, from the peel to the seed, and while the price paid would be small, it would be just that much clear money to the producer.

QUALITY OF CANNED MEATS.

We have, says an English paper, received the following from the Preserved Food Section of the London Chamber of Commerce: "It has been so much the fashion of late to attribute any ill effects following the partaking of a meal in which tinned meats or fruits have formed a part of the menu, to the use of such meats, that it is reassuring to find that what, it is to be feared, is a growing, but nevertheless groundless popular prejudice against canned foods seems to have no better foundation than that the public will find in tinned foods cause for occasional poisonous symptoms than be content in no cause at all. A party of about 40 persons left Harpurhey recently for Disley, near Manchester, for the purpose of holding an annual picnic, and sat down before the end of the day to a meal consisting of salmon, chicken, beef, lamb, and, it is said, potted tongue. On their return homeward several of the party developed symptoms of poisoning, although it is satisfactory to learn that all have since recovered. The landlord of the hotel at which the party put up now writes denying that the party in question were served with any tinned meats at his house, and that the goods provided were fresh, or supposed to be, and cooked under his own superintendence. Preserved foods have become an indispensable factor in the food supply of this country, and the need of them is likely to increase rather than diminish. Ordinary precautions being used, there is no more danger attaching to the use of tinned foods than fresh market foods. A striking instance of this disposition to rush to the conclusion that tinned foods are responsible for temporary illness, or even death, is to be found in the case of the unfortunate Stamford-street girls, for whose death the man Neill afterwards suffered. In that case the eating of tinned salmon was assumed to be the cause of death in the first instance."

A merchant complains in the columns of a contemporary that he has decided to give up business because "he cannot put up with the quality of clerks as they are at the present time." Poor man, he is to be pitied—and blamed too. A young man does not become a first-class clerk solely by his own volition. Much depends of course upon his own natural aptitude and the heed he gives to the instruction of others. But at the same time he needs some instruction in the A B C's of a clerk's duties just as does a child who is taking its first steps in the rudiments of learning. His instructors are his employers. If, therefore, good clerks are so scarce it is obvious that merchants must to some extent share in the responsibility of being the cause.

Merchants should be honest with their clerks. This is about the first thing necessary. Every young man is not intended for a clerk, but a good many are allured into the belief that they are. Such as these seldom amount to much. Square blocks do not conform to round holes. When, therefore, a merchant has a young man in his employ who is desirous of becoming a clerk, but who is totally unsuited for such avocation it is his duty to tell him so in a friendly way, and to, if possible, direct his attention to what he may be best suited for. But even those who have in them the material for good clerks are spoilt through improper training. Merchants should enjoin upon their clerks square dealing, attention, system and quickness. If a merchant allows his clerks to represent a thing to be what it is not or to give anything less than 16 ounces to the pound or 36 inches to the yard it cannot be expected that they will be true to themselves or to any body else. Civility is something no clerk can be without and be a success. When a customer enters the store the clerk should not wait till he comes to him. The clerk should go to the customer, and that promptly. Nothing is more annoying to a customer than to be kept aimlessly gaping about in the store with the clerks paying no attention to him. And yet it too often occurs. Sometimes a clerk is engaged in reading a newspaper when a customer enters. Instead of dropping the paper immediately a clerk here and there will be found who thinks the finishing of a certain paragraph or article of more importance than waiting upon the customer. Such conduct is reprehensible; and young clerks should be trained to look upon it as such. The importance of training a clerk to be systematic can scarcely be over-estimated. It is invaluable to the merchant, for the clerk who is systematic can accomplish much more work; and it is better for the clerk himself, for not only does he spend less energy but he can command a better salary than he who is unsystematic. Quickness is another thing that should not be overlooked in a young clerk's training. Customers loose patience with the slow clerk, and if there is no other clerk in the store will not infrequently transfer their patronage to where it does not take—to them at least—an age before the article they want is procured and properly parcelled.

The wholesale merchants of London, England, have been receiving many complaints of late regarding Indian and Ceylon teas, and at the annual meeting of the Wholesale Tea Dealers' Association of that city a good deal of attention was paid to it in the report. Irregularity in the tares of certain Indian and Ceylon teae, especially that some Indian teas were inferior to sample, seemed to be the most prolific cause for complaint. The leaving of teas on the floor of some warehouses an unnecessary length of time after bulking and before the packages were refilled, was also a source of some complaint. Since, however, these matters had been brought to the attention of the Tea Brokers' Association an improvement was noticeable. The committee also pointed out instances of parts of breaks of tea only being offered in public sale when it was generally understood that the complete parcels were submitted. It had been found, too, that wood, in a green state, is frequently used in Indian, but still more often in packing Ceylon teas. The sap from the wood, when it comes in contact with the lead, produces an acid which seriously affects the tea. The Indian and Ceylon associations had been fully advised of this, and had, the report said, taken steps to ensure only seasoned wood being used in future.

The present system of renting telephones is not equable. Nearly everybody will acknowledge this. Gas is paid for by the thousand feet and water by the gallon. A telegram we pay for by the word. For riding on the railway we are charged so much per mile. At the restaurant we pay for what we eat or for what we drink. But when we come to the telephone there is no discrimination. Every body is put upon the same footing whether the 'phone is used once or one hundred times per day, it is all the same. True—a difference is made between the factory, office, or store, and the private dwelling house, but even in the latter instance there is the same want of discrimination. It is obvious then that under the system now in vogue some are contributing more than their share towards the maintenance of the telephone companies while others are not paying enough. It is like a tailor taking a roll of goods and making it up into a dozen suits, ranging in sizes suitable for fifty-pound boys to 250 pound men, for which he makes no difference in price, great and small being charged alike. Of course the one who frequently uses the telephone does not require a more costly telephone or necessarily a greater length of wire than he who only uses the instrument less frequently, but he demands more of the time and the attention of the operators, and that is practically the same as if he consumed more material.

Whether the telephone companies were disposed to discriminate between the big and small users or not, it would, under the existing conditions, be both a difficult and expensive task to keep a record of the number of times a telephone was used. There is now, however, a probability of this difficulty being overcome if certain German advices can be relied upon. These advices state that an instrument has been constructed under the auspices of the government telephone department of that country by which the desired object is to be obtained. It is called the telephonemeter, and registers automatically each conversation from the ringing up of the central office to the ringing off signal. One of the beauties of this instrument, if it proves efficient, is that the merchant will have a good opportunity for refusing the use of his telephone to outsiders who are ever troubling him for the loan of it, or at least an excuse for charging them for its use. With the telephonemeter or some other time-registering device attached to the 'phone less idle talk would be transmitted across the wires, while there would at the same time be more economising of time. And thus, with some such register in use would at one stroke be abolished an anomaly and the means created for regulating, if not removing, the "may-I-have-the-use-of-your-telephone" fiend.

Census Bulletin No. 17 has just been issued by the Agricultural Department at Ottawa. It deals with the educational status of the population except 55,401 Indians. The aggregate of all ages in the Dominion who can read is 3,383,793, or 70.83 per cent. In making an analysis it it found that of persons between the ages of 20 to 29, 89.83 per cent. can read; between 30 and 39 years, 86.66 per cent.; between 40 and 59 years, 82.64 per cent.; between 60 and 74 years, 74.21 per cent.; from 75 years and upwards, 66.32 per cent. It will thus be seen that of the adult population the youngest group shows a great advance over the older groups, evidencing the spread of educational facilities during the last twenty years. Those who can both read and write number 3,176,667. Of the adults 80.34 per cent. can both read and write. Including children as well as adults the percentage is 66.50. The banner province in the ability of its adults to write is Manitoba with a percentage of 93.1. Ontario is second with 90.4 per cent. Then comes, in the order named, the Northwest Territories, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island (equal) and Quebec. In the matter of writing Canada stands sixth among the nations of the world. Taking 100 as the standard of perfection Scandinavia stands first with about 97, Germany and Switzerland next with 95 each, the United Kingdom third with 90, Holland fourth with about 87, France and the United States fifth with 85, and Canada sixth with 80. The lowest in the scale is Russia with 15.

A number of the National Banks of the United States reduced their circulation last spring. Then there was no anticipation of a scarcity of circulation. Now some of them are desirous of increasing their circulation, but they have struck a snag in the shape of a clause in the law which says that "no National bank which makes any deposit of lawful money in order to withdraw its circulating notes shall be entitled to receive any increase of its circulation from the period of six months from the time it made such deposit."

A PACKER'S DOUBTFUL COURSE.

Honor among business men is more sacred than a good many people suppose. The fact that much odium is cast upon and publicity given to acts that are dishonorable is an evidence of this. If they were of common occurrence they would naturally attract but little notice.

An act that was an exception to the rule was recently brought to the attention of THE GROCER. The perpetrator was a well-known canner east of Toronto who occupies a high position in the Canadian Packers' Association and the victim a well-known Toronto wholesale firm.

Some time ago the wholesale house in question made a contract to supply a hotel in Toronto with some 150 cases of canned goods of the aforesaid packer's brand. The goods were to be delivered a few months hence. When the time for delivery arrived the wholesaler, meeting the representative of the hotel on the street, asked him when it would be convenient for him to have the goods delivered. The latter hesitated, coughed, and in effect remarked: "Yes, of course. Well, let me see. Yes; well it's too bad I didn't let you know before. But I was just going to call upon you. You know the man whose pack I ordered from you puts up at our house. And he would have it that I must buy my canned goods direct from him. He offered me a pretty good inducement and I gave him the order. So I'll have to cancel yours."

The wholesale man was naturally annoyed, but he said nothing and allowed the order to be cancelled. Since then he has refused to handle that particular canner's goods, and furthermore has taken pains to relate his experience to his fellow jobbers.

That the packer's action was dishonorable goes without saying, aside altogether from the question as to whether he was justified or not in selling direct to a consumer. Not only had the wholesale house in question stocked itself up with his goods, but some four others or more had done the same thing. It was the implied understanding when these houses contracted with him that they, as middlemen, were to supply the trade. If it was not so what would have been the use of their taking his or any other packer's product? If the packer supplies Smith, Brown, Jones and Robinson with all they can consume, what earthly use is there in the wholesaler stocking his shelves with goods with the same object in view? If A wants a bushel of beans and cannot or will not take more, it is obvious that B the dealer, cannot sell him if C the producer, has already secured the order and that at a figure below the market price. If the packer complained of, or any other packer for that matter, means to cater direct to the big consumers, like hotels, or to the retail trade, let him proclaim it, and not, by misleading the middlemen, induce them to take his goods for the purpose of selling them to the very people whom he is going to supply himself direct from his factory. Business is business. Playing at Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde is not.

A GROWING FRUIT CENTRE.

The fact that Montreal is a great distributing point for fruit of all kinds has been pointed out in THE GROCER several times before, and some recent developments make it evident that she is destined to become a still greater centre in this respect. The large spring sales of lemons and oranges, when almost a million dollars worth of fruit are turned over, are a sufficient event in themselves, not considering the large direct fall shipment of dried fruit, currants and raisins, from Greece and Spain, three cargoes being already contracted for. But within the past month auction sales have become regular, and now it is the customary thing to turn over all the way from $10,000 to $15,000 worth of fresh California and other fruit every week. The enterprise of one particular firm in this respect has caused keen rivalry to spring up, so that recently, instead of one auction sale, there are two and sometimes three. The fact that large quantities of California fruit were handled with profit last fall in Montreal, was the primal cause of the present activity. Early this spring the Montreal Fruit Exchange came into existence, with the announcement that all lines of fruit would be dealt in, but that California fruit would be a specialty. The new concern had the advantage of being appointed direct agents for some of the leading fruit growers in the Golden State; also a big fruit packing concern in San Francisco, which already had agencies in all the big American cities. The Montreal concern were enabled therefore to lay down fruit with promptitude direct from the orchards. An illustration of the extent of the business being conveyed in the fact that 32 carloads of fruit have been cleared out during the past week, worth over $60,000. In fact there has been two carloads per day sold on the average, and the prices realized compare favorably with those ruling at the auction sales in the States, being higher if anything. The effect of so large a supply of fruit in Montreal is that it can now be bought for less than half the cost of a few years ago, when it all came through the hands of Chicago or New York firms, and of course they were not doing business for the fun of it.

In the old days also the different fruit firms in Montreal divided the trade up among themselves and plodded along in a quiet way. The enterprise of the new concern, however, has stirred them up likewise, for as any retailer can attend the exchange auction sales and buy from ten boxes up there was a danger of losing a lot of good customers. To meet the emergency the wholesale fruit men have united and formed the Montreal Fruit Auction Company, and of course with this competition matters have been even more lively than they were. Each member of the latter association turns over all his individual consignments to it and pays a commission of 2 per cent. to cover actual expenses. So far the departure has worked first class, and now there are sales of fruit every day in the week, and they are attracting custom not only from Montreal but from all the surrounding towns, so that it promises to widen out into a really extensive business, constituting one of the features of the port in a commercial sense.

Of course the public will benefit by this, and another thing is that it has led to a marked improvement in the manner of carrying fruit to Montreal. With increased receipts and more traffic the railway companies are giving better transportation. In fact the time occupied in transit from California of the fruit refrigerator cars is exactly ten days, and the arrivals occur with the regularity of passenger trains. Altogether Montreal's fruit trade is in the advance, and Maritime province buyers instead of making their purchases in Boston and New York are directing their attention more and more to the Canadian metropolis.

A NEW CHEESE COMPETITOR.

Some facts gathered from a recent return of the British Board of Trade show that there is a probability of a new competitor in the English cheese market which our shippers will have to consider in addition to the New Zealand shipments. This is Finnish cheese. One of the chief articles of rural industry in Finland in the past has been butter making, but it is stated that a crisis exists in that industry and the farmers are trying to work on something else. The greater part of Finnish butter has for some years been shipped to Great Britain, there being a butter shipping company which maintains direct communication between Hull in England and Honge in Finland. Rural economy in Finland, it is pointed out, has been at all times distinguished by a certain exclusiveness, it being a trait of the Finish character to concentrate all energies on a particular specialty. For some years this specialty has been the supply of butter for the English market. The Finland government encouraged this exclusiveness by offering prizes for model dairy farm breeds of cattle, etc., and also appointed traveling instructors, the result of it all being that Finland soon obtained the reputation of turning out the best butter in Europe. Thereupon Ireland, France, Germany, and even America sent commissioners to Finland to take a note out of the Finish book, the consequence of which is that the exportation of butter from Finland has been considerably reduced to the profit of these other countries. This has resulted in an overproduction of butter in the Grand Duchy, and as they have no mixed dairying and the majority of the peasants are dependent on the profits of their dairy produce a crisis exists. Accordingly the Fins are now discussing the propriety of making less butter and substituting for it the production of cheese. Finland cheese is therefore within reasonable distance of becoming a staple article of British provision, and is likely to be cheap, good, and worthy of attention, for the traits of the people make it a certainty that they will repeat in cheese making the success they exhibit in butter.

THE WORLD'S MONEY SUPPLY.

Acting Director of the Mint Preston has prepared a table of the monetary systems and approximate stocks of money in the aggregate and per capita in the principal countries of the world. This table shows that the aggregate stock of gold is $3,582,605,000; the aggregate stock of silver is $4,042,700,000, and the aggregate uncovered paper is $2,635,873,000. The stock of gold possessed by the principal countries is given as follows: United States, $604,000,000; Great Britain, $550,000,000; France, $800,000,000; Germany, $600,000,000; Russia, $250,000,000.

The silver stock of these same countries is given as follows: United States, $615,000,000; Great Britain, $100,000,000; France, $700,000,000; Germany, $211,000,000; Russia, $60,000,000.

This stock of silver is divided by Mr. Preston into full tender and limited tender. The United States has $538,000,000 full tender and $77,000,000 limited tender; Great Britain, no silver full tender, $100,000,000 limited tender; France, $650,000,000 full tender, $50,000,000 limited tender; Germany, $103,000,000 full tender and $108,000,000 limited tender, and Russia $22,000,000 full tender and $38,000,000 limited tender. The ratio prevailing in nearly all the principal countries between gold and legal tender silver is 1 to 15½. This is the ratio in France, Belgium, Italy, Spain, Netherlands, Russia, Central and South America. The ratio between gold and limited tender silver is as a rule 1 to 14.38. The respective ratios in the United States are 1 to 15.98 and 1 to 14.95. The various monetary systems as divided among the several countries are as follows:

Gold and Silver—United States, France, Belgium, Italy, Switzerland, Greece, Spain, Netherlands, Turkey and Japan.

Gold—United Kingdom, Germany, Portugal, Austria, Scandanavian Union, Australia, Egypt, Canada and Cuba.

Silver—Russia, Mexico, Central and South America and India.

Of the uncovered money South America has $600,000,000; Russia, $500,000,000; the United States, $412,000,000; Austria, $260,000,000; Italy, $113,000,000; Germany, $107,000,000; France, $81,000,000, and Great Britain, $50,000,000.

The per capita circulation of gold is: United States, $9 01; United Kingdom, $14.47; France, $20.52; Germany, $12.12; Russia, $2.21.

The per capita of all classes of money is: France, $40.56; Cuba, $31.00; Netherlands, $28.88; Australia, $26.75; Belgium, $25.33; United States, $24.34; United Kingdom, $13.42, and Russia, $7.16.

SOUTHERN SUGAR AND RICE CROPS

"As you are vitally interested in securing and disseminating correct information to the commercial and mercantile community, and in view of the fact that statements have gone out to the country advising that the staple sugar and rice crops of Louisiana are this season very large and fully equal to the season just closed," writes a New Orleans correspondent of the N. Y. Journal of Commerce, "we deem it proper to acquaint you with the facts which we have secured by direct observation and correspondence bearing on the crop situation.

"The sugar crop is in fine condition, and the promise of a large yield in both tonnage and saccharine is of the best, every indication now being in evidence that the largest crop ever known will be harvested the coming season.

"The rice crop, however, has developed a situation decidedly adverse to the statements put forward in May as to the yield and probable outcome, and is essentially different from the sugar outlook. The low prices at present prevailing, and which have depressed the rice situation so effectively all the past season, and the large crop just harvested, resulted in a greatly decreased acreage along the Mississippi River, and from the mouth of the river up to the crop limit the decrease in acreage is fully 60 per cent. less than last season, and in addition to this the losses to the rice crops from the 'Resoue' crevasse will be fully 2,500 acres, or, say an output lost by crevasse of fully 30,000 barrels of rough rice. In Southwest Louisiana, in what is called the 'Calcasien' country, and Acadia, the present crop is turning out very disastrously, as in that section they have to depend in large measure on the clouds for irrigation; the smaller section, say about one-quarter, being able to use pumps for irrigation, securing water from the bayous, which this season has not been in sufficient quantity, because of the long-continued drouth, no rain of any consequence having fallen there in two months. This lack of rain has prevented the rice growing, turning the plant yellow, and in many instances it is simply burning up from the intensity of the July sun, the ground being baked hard; hence those crops which depend alone on rains for irrigation will not make a one-quarter crop—in fact, not more than sufficient for seed. Letters from Calcasiem to-day speak of abandoned crops to avoid further loss. Hence we have every reason to assume from the present outlook that the rice crop of 1893 94 will undoubtedly fall short fully 750,000 to 900,000 sacks of rough rice, equivalent to 275,000 to 300,000 barrels of clean rice for consumption, as known to the mercantile community. As rice is now selling below cost of production, we look for a radical advance in values the coming months; if this does not ensue, the planting of rice will be abandoned, as many of the rice planters are on the verge of ruin now from their inability to realize cost of production on last crop, and present values cannot but tend to drive them all from the attempt to again realize their past but disappointing expectation."

MUSTARD.

A favorite function of the French daily papers is that of volunteering advice to their readers as to what they should eat, drink and avoid, says W. D. Bennett in National Grocer. The learned and benevolent man of science who pens the articles addresses his audiences in magisterial style, exactly like a doctor in consultation with his patients, and usually, like the latter worthy, gives them credit for a limited share of knowledge or common sense. The subject of one of these dissertations in a late number of La Patrie is the useful condiment mustard, which recent revelations have shown to be adulterated to an incredible extent in Paris. The meaning of the word "mustard" has not been definitely settled by etymologists, who dispute vigorously over it; but the writer seems to incline to the opinion that it is a word of Celtic origin, implying that which has a strong smell. Having settled this point, he proceeds to trace the history of mustard, beginning with the days of the Greeks, who used it in powder as we do pepper, and thence on to the time of the Romans, who used it first in the same way but afterwards improved it, as they thought, by mixing it with water. In the fourth century he declares that mustard was often mixed with honey and oil. The middle ages found it in a proud position as regards popularity, and it is said that at the fete given by Eudes IV. of Burgundy to Philip of Valois, at Rouvres, in 1336, no less than 300 pounds of the attractive seed was consumed. The upshot of the advice which the French physician gives after this long historical survey amounts to little more than a warning to sanguine and nervous people not to eat too much of so exciting a condiment, even in hot weather, when it is supposed to be most appreciated by epicures. Since the introduction of mustard in the British Isles by the Romans it has become an indispensable article in every household, the yearly consumption amounting to millions of pounds. Pure mustard does not burn like red or cayenne pepper. Only recently pure mustard has been manufactured in the United States, and those who have used it prefer it to the imported article, which is not pure, having to pay a duty of 14 cents per pound.

The following directions for mixing mustard may be found useful:—The water used should be previously boiled, and should have become nearly cold. Hot water destroys the essential qualities of the mustard, while a mixture with cold water is liable to ferment; vinegar should not be used. It is best to make one day's supply at a time, and it is a false economy to keep over what is left—the fresher the mustard the better. In mixing, the mustard should be stirred until every lump has disappeared, and the mass resembles thick cream.

WHAT MAKES SUCCESSFUL MEN.

The most successful merchants and manufacturers to-day are those who served a conscientious apprenticeship in their chosen business. The successful man of to-day was not the shirk of twenty-five years ago. He was the young man who made himself useful and invaluable, who filled his place so well that a week's absence made such a vacancy that he was missed from his post. The successful man of to-day was not the young man who tried to kill time, who tried to earn his salary by the least exertion, and who did not have the interest of his employer at heart.

There are hundreds of practical illustrations of the above assertions. We might mention one of the most successful paper manufacturers in New England, who died some years ago one of the wealthiest men of Fitchburg, who worked while a lad for two brothers who had formed a partnership in the paper manufacturing business at Franklin, N.H. He was a quiet, industrious, conscientious lad, who had been well brought up. He did not share in the levity and nonsense of the other boys about the mill. He attended church regularly on the Sabbath and behaved himself every day in the week. When the other boys would guy him about his church-going habits, and even steal his shoes and hide them, he would go on just the same, barefooted. He turned neither to the right nor the left from his path of duty. What was the result?

After he had been in this employ for several years, one of the brothers came to him and said: "Young man, my brother and I do not get along well together, and we have decided to dissolve partnership, and I should like to buy out my brother's interest and sell it to you, making any reasonable terms for payment, and you and I will build up a large business." The young man said he felt complimented at this manifestation of confidence and would take the matter into consideration.

The very next day he was called aside by the other brother, and was told that existing relations between the two brothers were not exactly what they should be, and that he had formed the idea of either buying out the entire plant or starting elsewhere, and would like to have the young man join him in the enterprise, the member of the firm agreeing to furnish the capital, and make easy terms of payment. The young man was somewhat bewildered by the two offers, and, feeling that it might result in some embarrassment to him to accept either of them, he gave reasonable notice and left the employ of the firm at Franklin, going to Fitchburg, where he soon worked his way up as a manager and owner of paper mills, and finally as one of the most successful paper manufacturers in New England.

Such instances are not rare, and should serve as examples to the rising generation so to inspire them to work for the best interests of their employers, feeling sure that if their present employers do not fully appreciate their services, they are attracting the attention of other manufacturers, and, at the same time, educating themselves for higher positions in other concerns. The young man who fools away his time, who fritters away his opportunities, is cheating himself. This is a crime, equally as well as that of cheating his neighbor. Real worth never fails of appreciation.—American Cultivator.

INCREASED USE OF SOUP.

In the primitive condition of existence man found his nourishment in such food as nature had provided for him and which he obtained from the nearest field, forest or stream, remarks Chicago Grocer. He is largely vegetarian or carnivorous according as the supply of food within his reach consists of either or both. The more civilized races have reached the condition where both a choice and abounding variety of foods are presented to meet their desires. Food products, animal and vegetable, are brought from every clime and country to meet the demand for variety. In the consumption of meats the greatest diversity of taste exists as to the manner of their use. In almost all countries of the old world, for economic reasons, by far the most prevalent form of meat consumption is the soup or the stew. Even the much vaunted "roast beef of old England" is indulged in by the masses on festive occasions only, whereas "broth and meat" is the every day food.

The writer has a vivid recollection of the fact that in his boyhood in Scotland, when sometimes he fain would have "passed" on soup and proceeded to the meat course, the rule rigidly enforced was "Sup your broth, then you can have some meat." There was an inflexible unwritten law in force: "No soup, no meat." In fact the supply of meat was limited and had to be expanded by conversion into broth. The average Scotchman is rarely the product of soup, oat meal porridge and milk, bread and some milk, just enough meat so he can swear he is no vegetarian.

On the continent of Europe, however, is where soup is the veritable "staff of life," and to concoct a new and palatable soup places the inventor in the company of the "immortals," with a patent of nobility and wealth at his disposal. The great masses of people have to reserve their meat consumption for the red-letter days, when they revel in the luxury of real meat soup and toothsome fricasses, made from the meat that previously had done service in the soup pot, the flavor lost in the process being replaced by adding a little garlic and other herbs. For everyday food, soups made without meat are in order, and give flavor to the black or white bread and other vegetables that are available. These people are healthy, and, moreover, happy withal. In America, owing to the great abundance of animal food, we find the most reckless extravagance in the consumption of meat. The extravagance is not so much that of wastefulness of material, although it would not be difficult to convict the average American of wanton and needless waste in this regard. Putting that aside, however, as outside the scope of this article, we have still left to battle the reckless waste of health, the irritated nerves, impaired liver, weakened kidneys, resulting from the effort made to keep up the everlasting consumption of boiled meat and roasted meat which the conscientious American citizen regards as a duty and as a sort of mark of his nobility. In fact he would feel unhappy if it were even whispered that he could not afford to eat and waste every week animal food sufficient to feed a company of Kaiser Wilhelm's bodyguard for a month.

The consumption of soup in this country is increasing, but with the masses it has not become popular. The reasons are easily enough seen, some of them having already been foreshadowed. Among other reasons are, perhaps, the care, labor and time involved in the making of a really good soup, which in the bustle and excitement of American life it is hard to spare for this purpose. Our domestic life is somewhat crowded and is made burdensome because of the demand for labor in other fields than domestic work. The wastefulness of the broiler and the oven is extenuated perhaps by the economy of work, but this does not overcome the wear on the vital organs caused by overtaxing their powers to eliminate an excess of elements that are not assimilated, thus poisoning the nerves and the brain. The canning of soups meets this need of our people. In a soup the best elements of animal food may be obtained, both nitrogenous and carbonaceous, besides this all the valuable mineral salts are retained in their natural state. When in excess a portion of the fatty matter is withdrawn. No small amount of skill is needed in seasoning to render the article palatable and more than "appetizing." A can of soup sufficient for several people may now be obtained at a price only a trifle in excess of what it would cost to make it in the kitchen, where it is rarely that all the ingredients necessary can be found, and as the can is sealed its contents are good for years if not wanted for immediate use. Our experience is that when a supply of such articles is to be found in the domestic larder, or is easily procurable by going to the nearest grocery store, they are wanted for immediate use and wanted very often. Decidedly let us eat less of the broiled beefsteak and the roast of beef, use our meats more in the diluted form as in soups and we will realize quite a gain in health and spirits, besides a substantial saving in domestic expenses.

RICE RECEIPTS, 1892-'93.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat publishes a table giving the receipts of rice at New Orleans for the crop year 1892-93 showing a total of 1,972,946 sacks rough rice and 6,490 barrels clean rice, or reduced to clean in proportion of three barrels rough to one barrel clean, 664,139 barrels clean.

The increase of rice receipts in New Orleans in past sixteen years is shown as follows: 1877-78—233,707 sacks rough rice, 16,682 barrels clean rice; 1878-79—279,611 sacks rough rice, 21,045 barrels clean rice; 1879-80—182,999 sacks rough rice, 11,152 barrels clean rice; 1880-81—445,397 sacks rough rice, 29,812 barrels clean rice; 1881-82—435,692 sacks rough rice, 39,390 barrels clean rice; 1882-83—392,750 sacks rough rice, 37,736 barrels clean rice; 1883-84—459,559 sacks rough rice,41,055 barrels clean rice; 1884-85—333,693 sacks rough rice, 32,333 barrels clean rice; 1885-86—899,212 sacks rough rice, 57,983 barrels clean rice; 1886-87— 838,476 sacks rough rice, 48,566 barrels clean rice; 1887-88—626,811 sacks rough rice, 23,263 barrels clean rice; 1888-89—737,075 sacks rough rice, 29,227 barrels clean rice; 1889-90—777,742 sacks rough rice, 7,441 barrels clean rice; 1890-91—892,374 sacks rough rice, 4,115 barrels clean rice 1891-92—1,052,331 sacks rough rice, 5,640 barrels clean rice; 1892-93—1,972,946 sacks rough rice, 6,490 barrels clean rice.

"AD." MIXTURE.

Keen "ads." cut prejudice and purse-strings.

Dull ads., like dull salesmen, are wet blankets to business.

If your logic leaks your ads. won't "draw."

The seeds of success often lie in some happy catch phrase connected with an ad.

A magnetic ad. will cling about the reader's mind like the closing counsel of a dead uncle.

The recoil of ads. loaded with lame logic often breaks the backbone of business.

A verbal "wiggle" to a "business bait" will often catch the eye and interest of a very cautious "fish."

It takes two to make a bargain, but one persuasive ad. well circulated will often make a market.

An appetizing ad. leaves a taste in the reader's mouth which often ripens into a hunger for the thing advertised.

A peculiar verbal twist in an ad. often helps it to draw the cork of pent-up prejudice.

A business boom, loaded with convincing logic and shot through the columns of a mighty medium, will knock piggish prejudice higher than Gilroy's kite.—Jed Scarboro in "Business."

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

Mr. P. L. Mason returned last Friday from a fishing trip up near North Bay. Saturday morning I ran against him in Davidson & Hay's. He had no fish stories to tell beyond that his party had brought away, to the ounce, as many goodly speckled trout as the law allowed; but he had a thrilling story to tell of the narrow escape of one of his companions. I'll give it as far as I can remember, in his own words. "One day George Mitchell, one of the fellows in our party, went out on the top of a big bald rock on the bank of the river. In shape it was something like this," explained Mr. Mason as he held out his left hand, bending his wrist downward to show the curve of the rock. "Well, Mitchell had just got on the top of it, intending to stand behind an old stump, when out from under him went his feet, and down the rock he flew with frightful velocity. Fortunately in going over the edge of the rock he managed to throw himself to one side and instead of falling into the exit of a seething chute he fell on his side on a dead tree. The tree was smashed to pieces, and it is a wonder that something did not penetrate Mitchell's side. Beyond a few bruises and a general shaking up he was none the worse however for his fall. The distance he fell was something like twenty-five feet. An old man we had with us was fishing near where Mitchell fell. Turning round to him he said, with a look of surprise, 'Well, where in the mischief did you come from?' 'Well, I didn't come of my own free will,' replied Mitchell. 'Well, I didn't suppose you were fool enough to, anyhow,'" answered the old man.

"Well, I can't say that there is much news," said a traveler to me Saturday. "But hold on! I did hear by-the-bye that a traveler of one house on the street had a laughable experience the other day. It seems that he was asked to take part in a ladies' aid social in a town where he happened to be one day. That evening, in his hurry to get through business in time for the social he undertook to cross a stream on a plank. He wasn't a Calverly, for when he got to the centre of the stream he lost his balance and over he went sprawling into the creek. He was, of course, wet through to the skin. Instead of gracing the social that night he went to the hotel and to bed, while his clothes were hung up in the kitchen to dry."

"Yes, our old friend Bob Gowanlock, of Perkins, Ince & Co.'s will be off for Chicago and the World's Fair in a few days," said one of his confreres of the Grip to me the other day. "And he'll have a good time. He always does. But you might tell the boys that they need not fear about getting their annual supply of fish as the result of his prowess, for he's going fishing later in the season. He wouldn't forego his fishing for even a World's Fair, and then you know he has so many friends who like to think about him while discussing a plate of his speckled trout."

"Friend James Vair of Barrie is doing an extensive business in jobbing fruit this year," remarked one of Sloan & Crowthers' travelers to me Saturday. "He has handled fruit for some time, but this year he is going into it much more extensively than ever before. The merchants of such northern towns as Orillia and those doing business on the Muskoka lakes seem to be getting most of their supplies from him. Some days he gets two or three carloads of stuff in. He's a hustler I can tell you."

BYSTANDER.

TRAVELERS IN THE MOONLIGHT.

The gods favor the city travelers. At least they have lately. A few months ago the new quarters of the association was opened with an At Home, and it was a success. Next they held an excursion to Niagara Falls, and a more delightful day or time could scarcely have been had. On Monday night they held a moonlight excursion on the steamer Chippewa, and there was the same result.

Old Props had early in the day issued threatenings of unpropitious weather. But he was either miscalculating or lying, for a more delightful night for a moonlight excursion could scarcely have been imagined. Luna was just old enough to be appreciated, and not a cloud flitted across the sky to vail her face or the thousands twinkling stars that winked at each other as if to say: "Looks as if the travelers are having a pretty good time down there." And they were, thanks to the committee as well as to the weather.

The main deck was given up to the dancers, and, in order that there might be an equable distribution of music, Glionna's band of 30 pieces was divided into two parts, each playing simultaneously. In the ladies' cabin a vocal and instrumental concert was given, presided over by R. M. Corrie. Selections were given by the Harmony quartet—Dinnock, Gorrie, Adamson, Verral; the Harmonic Quartet—Theaker, J. Simms, A. Toms, J. F. Howitt; saxaphone solos by J. H. King, comic songs by E. B. Piggot, piano solos by E. J. Hogben and G. F. Beard, vocal solos by Gorrie, Dinnock and others. W. T. Harrison was accompanist. The card players and smokers took possession of the spacious smoking room, and a harp and a violin player were detailed to entertain them. For those who preferred to stroll about the boat, in addition to the strains of dance music they could catch, was provided a banjo and guitar club, whose weird music in the fore part of the boat attracted a good deal of attention.

There were about one thousand persons on board, and that without any advertisements being placed in the daily papers What it would have been had the usual advertising methods been resorted to is obvious. But the promoters wanted a select party, and they got it.

It was almost nine o'clock when the Chippewa steamed slowly through the western gap out into the lake, where for nearly three hours she sailed now in one direction and then in another, or described big circles, like some lazy monster of the deep that had nothing to do but bask in the moonlight and enjoy itself. And those on board did enjoy themselves, and that right royally. Even yet they are singing praises.

The City Travelers' Association is to be congratulated upon not only the success that attended the excursion, but upon the fact that one of the most enjoyable and best moonlight excursions that ever went out of Toronto harbor was that under its auspices on Monday night.

These composed the committee: J. Owens, chairman; W. F. Daniels, secretary; A. M. Piper, treasurer; W. Bremner, R. Maxwell, Ben Dack, S. H. Moore, W. Soper, F. Gallow, J. A. Dickson, J. A. McGuane, W. H. Steele, S. G. Martin, J. Mortimer, R. M. Corrie, R. C. Morrison, L. J. Barwick, J. F. Smythe, C. F. B. Spencer, Charles Dinnock.

A DEFENDER OF DINNY'S.

DEAR GROCER,—Kindly permit me to offer a few remarks regarding "Dinny Callahan's" letter to his friend Moike, in your journal of Aug. 11th; also on the reply from one Stephen Hustwitt, in your issue of August 18th. Mr. Hustwitt, I notice, undertakes to put you, as editor, right, as to what you will publish. Now sir, to say the least, he errs in so doing, that is to my mind. Of course "doctors differ." I am a constant reader of your journal, THE CANADIAN GROCER, and consider "Dinny Callahan's" letter one of the funniest I have read in many a day. From a town point of view I would have no hesitation in saying that it is most free from anything of the character which he imputes to it. Mr. Hustwitt's letter reads to me like coming from a man of narrow views, and who is currying favor from a certain class of the community. If Dr. Fowler, the phrenologist, were on the scene, or could send one of his scholars in phrenology, I feel certain that neither could find a bump in Mr. "Dinny Callahan's" assailant's head that could be called "broadview" or "generous," and if so, I have mistaken my man, which is not easy to do after reading his letter. When men are troubled with that dread disease, dyspepsia, my advice is to take medicine, and not give it by abusing "Dinny Callahan" and his letter. In conclusion, I for one will await Dinny's next funny epistle, or better, should he leave Toronto for Ireland before this meets his eye, I would advise Mr. Editor, that you cable him for his experience on the fish pond, not forgetting to give us a few lines about Dublin and the new Irish parliament that is to be.

TO CURE CUTTING.

There is, perhaps, no question that is more perplexing to the retail trade to-day than that of how to prevent one man from underselling another, seeking thereby to ruin his neighbour's trade. A competitive war of this description is one of the sharpest gradients down which the trader can travel, and he who gets full swing upon it generally finds destruction at the bottom. The evil of the system has called some retail trade associations into existence, whilst the effort to stop it, has been the ruin of others. And yet the pernicious practice seems, like the stream, "to go on for ever," though men may come and men may go. Among the most recent attempts at a cure are the steps which are being taken by some of the principal manufacturers of proprietary articles. Lever Bros. have for many months past—we had almost written years—been adopting the most drastic measures to cure it, but not many weeks ago. Blondeau et Cie went the greatest length we have yet noticed, for they proceeded successfully and got an injunction to restrain a trader from selling their goods retailed at less than the prices which they as manufacturers had fixed. This strong, yet justifiable action, has come before the Brighton Grocers' Association, and that body has not merely approved of it, but has urged it as a subject worthy of discussion in the "Trade Parliament," which meets at Portsmouth next month, where we should think it will elicit an interesting interchange of views from the eight or ten score of delegates who are expected to be present. Certainly no more urgent trade question can come before them than this, for it presses very hardly upon retailers, especially the smaller ones. It is perhaps the most hopeful sign for the partial, if not total cure, of the evil that the manufacturers are thus taking the matter up themselves. It will not do for them to say, "This cutting is no concern of ours. We sell the goods to the retailer and he is at liberty to sell them at what prices he likes to the public." If the goods are sold at cost, sometimes even under, and very generally at a ruinously small profitable margin, it both diminishes the value of the article in the eyes of the consumer and makes the trade with such a cutter very risky. If the manufacturer advertises his article as a sixpenny one and the retailer sells it at 4½d., and sometimes even at 3½d., the public draw their own deductions as to its intrinsic value, whilst the man thus selling at cost, or under, often is unable to pay his way, and inflicts a loss on those who have stocked his shop. At the same time a great injustice has been done to the honest neighbor, who, whilst trying to sell his goods at a fair living profit, sees his trade drawn away from him by the cutter, who temporarily concludes his career with a 1s. in the £ composition. On all grounds, therefore, the entrance of the manufacturers into the area of this struggle against unfair trading is a matter for satisfaction, and we trust that ere long many more will join the crusade. But there is at present one unsatisfactory feature of this matter so far as, at any rate, one firm of manufacturers is concerned. We refer to the well-known firm of cocoa manufacturers, Cadbury Bros. We understand—we write subject to correction—that this firm differentiate between the legitimate retailer and the co-operative store, by allowing the latter to give a dividend to their customers when their goods have been sold at their lowest net prices. We are informed they defend their action in so doing by stating that the dividend which these societies declare is a profit on trading. But surely Messrs. Cadbury, whose customers include a large number of retailers, do not intend to prejudice them by giving the co-operative stores an opportunity thus to cut under their prices. It is bad enough to find the Government backing co-operative stores without manufacturers helping them thus to compete against the retailer. It is to be hoped that they will look at this question from the retailer's standpoint, and then we believe they will see the unfairness of such a concession. We hope to hear very soon that they have resolved to deal equitably with all their customers in this matter. The whole question is one which we believe will best be settled by co-operation between the manufacturer and retailer so far as proprietary articles are concerned, and it is a very promising sign of the times that already this is taking place. No obstacle should be offered to an extension of this mutual feeling, for in many ways the interests of these two parties are parallel, and a healthier tone will be given to our trading if a stop can be put to ruinous and useless competition. There is a competition which is the very life of trade, and gives a stimulus to energy and enterprise which nothing else will furnish, but to sell articles at less than a living profit—"that way madness lies."—Grocers' Chronicle.

TEA IN OLDEN TIMES.

In 1719 Bohea tea was worth 24s. per pound in Philadelphia, but in 1757 it had fallen to 7s. When tea was first introduced into Salem, Mass., it was boiled in an iron kettle, and after the liquor was strained off, it was drank without milk or sugar, while the leaves of the herb were placed in a dish, buttered and salted, and eaten. Small wonder that those partaking should have seen black cats, or witches, or anything else.

In 1740, or thereabouts, each woman in Boston carried her own tiny teapot when she made one of those much deprecated tea-drinking visits, and often her own tea cup, also, else she might have to drink from a pewter cup. And she frequently brought her own precious thimbleful of tea, especially if she had a fancy in the variety she used.—American Grocer.

"PRETTY NEARLY CASH."

"Do you stick to the cash system?" said the Scribe to a thrifty New England grocer, who replied, "pretty nearly cash. I found that when I had been receiving the patronage of people for years whom I knew to be thoroughly reliable and good, I could not say no, when they came to my store and asked for goods and said they had no money with them, but would pay the next day or the next time they came along. And then there were others who for one good reason or another were not prepared to pay cash on delivery and to whom I felt indebted for past favors, who receive short credit. Why! if I refuse them, they get mortally offended and give their trade to some one of my competitors, and I can't afford that."

"But," replied the Scribe, "there are grocers here and in Brooklyn, who refuse such customers, and must do so if they desire to succeed in doing a strictly cash trade."

"Yes," said the New Englander, "I know that, but doing a thing in a big city like New York or Boston—I mean Boston or New York—is very different from doing the same thing in a small town. The city grocer does not care if he does lose a customer, for he has a great population behind him, but in my place, an offended customer cannot be so easily replaced. The individual patron in a little town has a much higher value to the grocer than is the case in a big city."

"Pretty nearly cash," is the vestibule of a full fledged credit store. If a customer is perfectly safe to credit for one day, is he not just as safe for a week or a month? If this is so, why not abandon the idea of doing an ironclad cash business, subject to exceptions, and do a credit business in a correct way? The trouble is not with the system so much as with the man. Many lack the moral courage to say no, to the unworthy applicant, because they feel under obligation for patronage and because he is an old acquaintance, a neighbor, who goes to the same church, whose children play with his children, or whose wife goes shopping or gossips with his wife.

It is a false notion entertained by many, that there is an obligation resting upon the merchant because of patronage bestowed. The keeper of a store places every member of the community under obligations to him. He provides accomodation and renders a service which the community must have, or else be placed at great inconvenience and expense. He gives as much to his patrons as they render him. The service is mutual and imposes no obligation, and yet thousands are driven from a cash to a credit business through entertaining a sense of obligation for patronage given. An ideal cash trade is seldom attained. It is done and can be done. It has been successfully tried in city, town and farming district. And so has the credit business, and where the latter fails it is because the man lacks the ability to supervise credits and fails in keeping accounts. —American Grocer.

Mrs. W. Smith, groceries and crockery, Acton, has decided to retire from business.

The grasshoppers have done considerable damage to crops, especially oats, in the vicinity of Deseronto as elsewhere in the bay district.

Several farmers in Prince Edward have lost all their bees as a result of the drouth, which has burned up vegetables. One bee man lost sixty hives.

The Rathbun Co. have chartered the steamer Antelope to run between Gananoque and Brockville, calling at Rockport. She makes three trips a week.

The cheese factories in Hastings county have contracted for the balance of the season at 10c. to 10½c. The make will run about 10 per cent. below that of last year owing to the drought and the horn fly.

The Sandwich Council will offer the Canada Brush Company free water and taxes for ten years if they decide to locate in the town on condition that half the men employed shall reside in Sandwich.

The rust has attacked the spring wheat and oats in some sections about Perth. Apples will be a poor crop, owing to the worm on trees not sprayed in the spring. Potatoes promise to be a fair crop and of good quality.

The quantity of rice now afloat from the East to the United Kingdom is 184,000 tons in 1892; and the exports from Burmah this year have been 645,000 tons, in opposition to 669,000 tons last year, and 709,000 tons in the seven months of 1891.

The Canadian Pacific Railway announces still another cut between Pacific coast points and the east. To Toronto from Westminster the fare is now only $34.30, to Montreal $41.65, and to all other eastern points in the same proportion.—Free Press, Winnipeg.

Sunday night the general store of W. H. Crooker, Waterdown, was broken into and several razors and knives and a quantity of ready-made clothing were stolen. The thieves cut out the sash of a window and entered the store that way.

Business men of Oshawa have suffered many small losses of wares and money from their stores for some time past, and the miscreants were at last discovered in the persons of two youths, Frank Mitchell and Aaron Cameron, whose ages would not be greater than 10 or 12 years. They were found upon examination by Magistrate Grierson to be intractable, and were sentenced to two years in the Penetanguishene reformatory.

Ohio's new cigarette law went into active operation August 1. From that time on it will cost retailers $100 and wholesalers $300 a year if they wish to handle the taboed article.

Imports of canned beef into Great Britain during the seven months ending July 31st, show a total of 145,976 cases from Australia in 1893, against 123,788 cases in 1892, and 110,851 in 1891. The quantity received from the United States was 326,282 cases in 1893, against 429,987 cases in 1892, and 509,328 cases in 1891.

The controller of Inland Revenue states that the request of the Dominion Hop Growers' Association, that the hop boxes, 36 inches long 18 inches wide and 30 inches deep, as they contain 70 gallons, be legalized as measures, has been complied with. It is probable that an order-in-council will be passed so that the legal measures may be in use for the hop picking of the present season.

The Windsor Patent Brush Co. (Ltd.) has secured temporary quarters in the old furniture factory, Sandwich, and are now making brushes, brooms and whisks. The building secured is fitted up with 35 h. p. boiler and engine, and wood working machinery necessary to the business. There will be very little delay in filling present orders, and no delay in filling any orders the firm may be favored with.

The sales of Armour & Co., Chicago and Kansas City, for the fiscal year ending April 1, 1893, were $210,000,000, that is over $300,000 for every working day in the year. The firm killed 1,750,000 hogs, 1,080,000 cattle, 625,000 sheep. It employs 11,000 persons and pays them $5,000,000 wages. It has an equipment of 4,000 cars, 700 horses. And the brains and push of this gigantic enterprise lie with one man.—American Grocer.

The post office department has notified postmasters that any envelope coming under their observation indicating that it is from a bad debt collecting agency or a "collecting and detective agency," must be sent to the dead letter office if addressed to any person in the United States, as under a recent act of congress postal matter of this kind is not allowed to go through the mails on the ground that it may be defamatory to the person to whom addressed.

A Montreal despatch says that there is something brewing in the Canadian Pacific syndicate. There have been consultations and whisperings about a new entrance into the States, and the talk on the streets has reference to the Boston and Maine Railway. Ever since the McIntyre syndicate, which means the principal shareholders of the Canadian Pacific Railway, acquired control of the Grand Trunk, it has been rumored that they would try to extend their powers in the United States.

The machinery is being placed in J. Y. Griffin's pork factory, and the establishment will be in running order by the 1st of next month. A large number of shipments of hogs throughout the country are awaiting the opening of the factory.—Free Press, Winnipeg.

The San Francisco Commercial News says: "The California hop outlook has not changed essentially, and there will probably be a good yield, although the weight as betore intimated may be light. In the north the prospect is mixed and hard to decipher owing to the conflicting nature of reports. The spot market is strong but inactive under scarcity, while trading on future account is hampered by the enhanced rates demanded by growers. But 691 lbs. were shipped during the week."

The Manitoba Government has just issued its official bulletin regarding the crops. The estimated yield per acre in wheat is a trifle over 22 bushels, oats at 40, barley 31, flax 16. The eastern portion of the province appears to be the most favored district, wheat there averaging nearly 25 bushels to the acre. The sample in all sections is reported excellent. The probable yields are: Wheat, 22,000,000 bushels; oats, nearly 16,000,000 bushels; barley, about 4,000,000 bushels, and flax, 150,000 bushels. Harvesting is now in full swing, but harvest hands continue to be very scarce.

An agitation in favor of early closing has been started in Vancouver, B. C. "Since being in the city," writes a correspondent of News-Advertiser, "I have often wondered how it is that there is no early closing day here and no association of wholesale and retail traders, especially the latter. Would it not be possible for such an association to be formed and to have one day a week when all the stores would agree to close say at 2 o'clock, and so enable all the assistants as well as the proprietors themselves to get half a day's leisure for any form of relaxation from the cares and anxieties of business that each one thought most suitable."

The new match factory of the British Columbia Match Co., on Lulu Island, New Westminster, has now made a modest beginning under the management of Mr. R. C. Lowery, and the establishment promises well. The initial capacity of the factory is 4,000,000 matches daily, and several hundred thousand are now being turned out daily towards meeting a demand, which in this Province alone is estimated at 2,000,000 a day. The wood used is British Columbia spruce, which burns as well as the cedar used in the California factories, and the labor mostly Chinese. Some fifteen hands are at present employed, but the number will probably soon be increased.—B. C. Commerce.

ALL ABOUT CANNED SALMON.

The News-Advertiser of Vancouver says that the Columbia River salmon pack is all put up now. It consists of 375,700 cases, or 90,000 fewer than those of last year. The pack was this year more than fully sold in advance.

The lobster fishing season in Cape Breton has, according to the Halifax Critic, been one of the most successful experienced by fishermen and packers for several years, and had it not been that operations were retarded by the great scarcity of bait the season just closed would probably have been one of the most profitable since the beginning of the lobster canning industry in the island.

By the steamer Islander from the North, information comes about the salmon fishing, which shows that the catch for 1893 will be considerably below that of last year. All canneries on the Skeena, except the Royal Canadian, have stopped fishing for the season, and the Royal Canadian people expect to haul in their nets in a week. The number of cases filled by the Skeena River companies is given approximately as follows: British American, 7,000; Windsor, 6,000; Inverness, 7,000; Standard, 7,500; North Pacific, 7,500; Royal Canadian, 10,000; a total of about 60,000, against 98,000 cases in 1892. The Alert Bay cannery put up about 2,000 cases; Prices, of Gardner's Inlet, 4,500, and Drainey, near Rivers Inlet, 2,500 cases. The Rivers Inlet fish have been running well, and each of the two companies will have from 8,000 to 10,000 cases. On the Naas the run was small. The McLennan cannery filled about 3,000 cases and the other company about 2,500 cases.—News, Vancouver, Aug. 11.

The New Westminster correspondent of the News, Vancouver, under date of Aug. 11, says: Mr. John McNab, Provincial Inspector of Fisheries, estimates that the pack of salmon for the Fraser River to date exceeds 250,000 cases, and that the exports of canned salmon alone from this river will be greater than that of any former year. The River catch yesterday averaged over 300 fish to the boat, and the run is rather on the increase than otherwise. Mr. McNab and Mr. Rithet's opinions, both based on observation, agree in stating that neither the number of nets nor the dumping of offal in the mouth of the river has anything to do with the breaks in the run, and that during the slack days in the Fraser millions upon millions of salmon were playing off Beechy Bay and along the shores of Vancouver Island, and that they would come into the river was a matter of certainty, as no other river to the north was within 300 miles, and nothing short of barricade or death would keep the salmon out of its native beds when ready to spawn.

From the Pacific Coast it is advised that there is no chance of the pack of Columbia River salmon this season exceeding 275,000 cases, and that the chances are very much against more than 250,000 cases being put up. The highest estimate is 50,000 cases below the record of work in the year 1879, and would appear significant in view of the fact that the amount of old stock carried over this season is below the average. In British Columbia there is a pronounced shortage that, in the ordinary course of events must exert some influence in the European markets sooner or later. What the Alaska canners have done thus far this season remains to be seen, but the fragmentary accounts received up to date indicate that there will be little if any excess over last season's pack. From the standpoint of possible supply, the statistical position is strong and just the reverse of encouraging to buyers who may look for lower prices in the immediate future.—N. Y. THE GERMAN BEET ROOT CROP.

The Berlin correspondent of the Louisiana Planter writes that abnormal weather conditions and the insects have played havoc in the beet fields, and as we found on the occasion in a short trip into the beet-growing sections, the gaps are too numerous and too large in some places, and at this stage of vegetation can't be filled any more. But there are also places where the beet fields show a full stand, but they are backward almost everywhere, and the weight of the root is, as compared with last year's, sensibly lighter. Another serious disadvantage is that the development of the leaves is not as luxuriant as it should be, which goes to reflect unfavorably on the quality of the beet. It is not impossible that the latter two circumstances may be remedied by good weather in a marked degree, but it is generally believed that they cannot be discarded altogether. The prospects have no doubt improved, but they are not good, and if the highest crop estimates of the factories do not exceed an average yield the lowest are so far very discouraging. There have been the same complaints hitherto, and now as rain has set in the same hopes are fostered in the beet-growing countries of Europe, except in Russia, where the reverse change has taken place, viz., from wet, which has become a little injurious, to dry, the latter being at present the desirable kind of weather for that country.

TANNIN AND THEINE IN TEA.

The London Lancet reports in its issue of July 1, the results of an investigation of China and Indian teas, based on the constituents of tea as it is ordinarily made and presented to the drinker.

The results to which these experiments have led may thus be generalized:

1. There is an important difference in the amount of tannin but not of theine in these China and Indian teas. The China teas contain from 5 to 6 per cent. of tannin and the Indian teas an average of 10 per cent. In both the theine amounts to practically the same—averaging 3.4 per cent.

2. Distilled or softened water, or water to which carbonate of soda has been added, dissolves the tannin more rapidly, but effects no increase in the amount of theine dissolved; the practice of adding carbonate of soda to the water, therefore, is not to be recommended. Moderately hard water used the moment it reaches boiling point effects just as rapid a solution of the valuable principle theine as distilled water, whilst the objectionable tannin is not so rapidly dissolved.

3. China teas may safely be left to infuse for a longer period of time than the Indian teas; for the former even fifteen minutes may be allowed without fear of dissolving an excess of tannin, but for the latter not longer than five, or at the most seven minutes is advisable.

4. Tannin, of course, imparts astringency to tea; but this constituent is not wholly concerned in producing an infusion of the desirable body and strength, for the theine and tannin together amount to only one-fourth of the total extractive matter present, except in some instances of Indian teas, which are particularly and undesirably rich in tannin.

5. The best results are obtained when the tea is powdered immediately before use. The flavor is then exquisite, complete extraction of the theine is insured and, provided the infusion is allowed to stand for only five or seven minutes, a minimum of tannin is dissolved and no sacrifice of body or strength is perceptible. The remarks in section 2 also apply here.

The Indian tea No. 4 used in this investigation was obtained by private purchase; the China teas were supplied by the Russian-China Tea Company, which has been established with the avowed object of supplying Chinese plantation teas in the United Kingdom as imported into Russia.

NEED OF NERVE IN BUSINESS.

The subjoined article is from the N. Y. Journal of Commerce. It was of course intended for the people of the United States, but Canadians will loose nothing by pondering over the principles therein enumerated.

There is a degree of prudence, remarks our contemporary, that is almost as dangerons as reckless speculation in business, and it is now time for some bankers and merchants to ask themselves whether their caution is not overreaching itself. If nobody will trust anyone business must come to a full stop, but it is not the best policy for the individual or the community to precipitate the worst merely through fear that the worst will come. It is not at all probable that the worst will come unless it is brought about by the excessive precautions taken against it. A man can only starve to death at the worst, and he is not showing great sagacity if he stops eating while he still has money in the savings bank, merely because he is afraid that when that money is gone he will then suffer the pangs of hunger.

It is not for the interest of the banks that their customers should fail, nor is it for the interest of the wholesaler that the retailers should be driven out of business. It is of the utmost importance, not only to the community, but to the individual bankers, merchants and manufacturers who make up so essential a part of the community, that business should be kept in motion. The people have not stopped buying, and they have not yet suffered greatly in their ability to buy. If their ability to buy should be seriously reduced it would be because so many enterprises have closed in anticipation of something that has not yet happened. The large capitalists are upbraiding the small ones for taking their money out of banks and locking it up in safes, but they are doing much the same thing themselves in stopping their mills and discharging their workmen, or in holding on to the money in their vaults to the grave peril of the mercantile community.

Some months ago a thrill went through the business world because the $100,000,000 gold reserve in the Treasury had been impaired, but the thrill passed off and no disaster befell the Treasury, and that reserve might have been depleted much more without endangering the credit of the Government. The reserve of the New York banks has been reduced below the legal limit, but that reserve was required to provide for emergencies, and an emergency is most emphatically here. The reserves are performing the work for which they were provided, and they might be applied in a still larger measure to meet the emergency without any greater danger than is incurred in refusing to do so. The public has been urged to abandon its pernicious course of hoarding and to deposit its money in the banks, but all this urging is in vain so long as people who have money in the banks cannot get it. The banks themselves are hoarding, and if there be danger in disbursing the money they hold there is also danger in holding on to it.

The manufacturers whose employees are no longer earning wages have in most cases stopped their mills in anticipation of something that may happen. But people still go to the retail stores and buy goods, and unless they are impoverished by a general stoppage of business they will buy about as much as usual next fall and winter. The retailers are not buying ahead so freely as the solicitation of drummers has led them to in recent years, but they have neither shut up shop nor stopped selling. Collections are not so good as sometimes, but they are not very bad. In many lines of production orders are fairly good. Congress is not acting with precipitate haste, but the probability that it will stop the silver purchases before another month is reached is a very strong one. Breadstuffs are going abroad rapidly, and a large amount of gold has come and is coming to this country in payment for them, or as loans on the securities that will be popular again in Europe when the danger of their being redeemed in silver has passed away, and a large addition has been made and is being made to the circulation of the National banks.

What is needed now is courage, pluck, confidence, not more in business men than by business men. These are essentlal in business at all times. The circumstances that interfered with mutual confidence are passing away, and there is no reason now why it should be entirely withheld and every man act as if disaster had already befallen the country.

The prudent mariner takes in sail when a gale approaches, but he does not strip his spars and let his vessel roll in the trough of the sea.

SPICE FROM JAMAICA.

The Island of Jamaica, according to a contemporary, produces about all the allspice that is used. It is known also as pimento or Jamaica pepper. The tree on which the berries grow is evergreen, and the flowers grow in dense clusters; these develop into small green aromatic berries, the size of black pepper. If allowed to ripen they become pulpy and lose some of their pungency. For commercial purposes the berries are gathered when green, carefully dried in the sun, and afterwards packed in bags holding 160 to 180 pounds, and shipped. Pimento trees grow in many parts of tropical America, but nowhere do they thrive as in Jamaica. The trees are never planted by man, and receive no culture worthy of the name. The seeds are dropped by the birds, and the rains and the tropical sun do the rest. Surplus trees are cut down and become walking sticks and umbrella handles.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, Aug. 24, 1893.

GROCERIES.

Nothing materially new has developed during the week. Trade remains reasonably quiet, and although the travelers are one by one getting back from their holidays, there does not appear to be any increase in the volume of business, nor is there now likely to be much until after the fall fairs are over. Teas seem if anything to be attracting the most attention, but even in that particular there is nothing to boast about. Generally speaking the business that is being done is of a hand to mouth character. New pack of canned salmon is arriving, but canned goods as a whole are quiet and uninteresting. Payments, while slow, are fair for the time of year.

COFFEE.

Trade here continues quiet and featureless. Prices are unchanged, and we quote: Rio, 20 to 21½c.; East Indian, 27 to 30c.; South American, 21 to 23c.; Santos, 21 to 22c.; Java, 30 to 32c.; Mocha, 26 to 27c.; Maracaibo, 21 to 23c. Brazilian coffees showed some slight improvement last week in New York, but there was nothing approaching animation.

DRIED FRUITS.

The situation remains much about the same. Valencia raisins continue quiet, with selected meeting with a fair demand at 6 to 7½c.; 3¾ to 4½c. is the idea for off-stalk. A letter from J. D. Arguimbau, Denia, under date of Aug. 7, states that the first arrival of Valencia raisins in his store are large fruit and of good quality. Off-stalk and fine off-stalk grades will likely therefore be of better quality than usual if this is characteristic of the whole crop. Quotations so far received in Toronto for August shipment of Valencia raisins indicate a disposition on the part of growers to meet the market at once and not, as in past years, hold for high figures. Demand for Sultana raisins is light at 6 to 6½c. This week's mail advices confirm original estimate of the Sultana crop, namely 25,000 to 26,000 tons against 33,000 tons last year. Opening prices are considerably under last year's closing prices. Currants are quiet at from 5½c. up. Mail advices of Aug. 8 from Patras are as follows: "Crop is very late and will require another month or so of dry weather, and doubt if any weight of fruit will be on the market before first week in Sept. The impression prevails that the opening prices will be low. Already offers have been made in New York for early shipment at low prices, but this is for American staple, which with most shippers out here is synonymous with rubbish." Prunes quiet, with prices ranging all the way from 7 to 8½c. For the crop prospects continue favorable, while prices so far quoted are considered low. Dates quiet and unchanged at 5 to 5½c.

NUTS.

Quiet, unchanged and featureless. We quote:—Brazil nuts 11 to 11½c. a pound; Sicily shelled almonds, 32 to 35c. a pound; soft shelled almonds, 15 to 16c.; peanuts, 13 to 14c. for roasted and 11 to 12½c. for green; cocoa nuts, $5 to $5.50 per sack; Marbot walnuts 11½ to 12c.; pecans 13½ to 16c.

RICE AND SPICES.

There is just an ordinary trade doing in rice at 3⅝ to 3¾c. for ordinary and 5c. for Japan. Spices remain in much the same uninteresting condition as before. We quote whole ginger at 20 to 22c., white pepper at 20 to 28c., and pure black pepper at 14 to 16c.

SUGARS.

The local sugar market remains quiet and without special feature. The little that is doing is confined to small lots, but prices remain unchanged and steady. For granulated 5⅝c. is ordinarily quoted, but the range runs ⅛c. below this figure, although it seems to be mostly Lower Province sugars, which sell as low as 5½c.; 3⅜ to 5⅛c. is the usual range for yellows. In the New York market there is still a good deal of faith in raw sugars, and rumors have prevailed of stock secretly put under contract to refiners, with prices to be fixed later on, but it is claimed that even should stories be well founded a more general open market line of trading cannot be much longer delayed if it is proposed to continue the meltings. Furthermore, there is an idea that the European beet market has a natural tendency towards recovery and cannot be much longer used as an influence to pound the position here, although to-day's cables were without further improvement. So far as can be learned, no fresh dealing has taken place, but there is a renewal of rumors of importers having made secret deals for remaining stock on hand. Refined sugars evidently cannot be sold with the ordinary seasonable freedom, and refiners, brokers and jobbers are gradually making up their minds to abstain from any waste of effort looking to a change in the methods of buyers. It is quite likely, however, that the supply outside of first hands is small, and demand for small lots must continue steady.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There is a little better demand for syrups at from 2 to 2½c, per lb., but business is still quiet. Molasses continues quiet with 32c. the idea for half-bbls. and 30c. for bbls.

TEAS.

There is a slightly better feeling if anything in teas. During the week there have been a good many Japan teas moving, principally at prices ranging from 16 to 19c. Quite a few Indian teas, notably Orange Pekoes, have been selling. The brokers also report a little more enquiry from the jobbing houses. Prices are unchanged, and we quote: Japans (1892-3)—Low grade and common, 15 to 18c.; medium, 18 to 20c.; fine, 20 to 25c.; new Japans, 30 to 32c. for medium and 30 to 35c. for fine. Blacks—Low grade Congous, 14½ to 16½c.; medium, 18 to 23c.; fine, 30 to 45c.; fancy, 60 to 70c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

Receipts of butter during the past week have been more liberal, in the country there is more disposition to sell, and prices, while higher than at time of last review, are easier than a few days ago. For fine dairy tub butter jobbers are paying 16 to 18c. and selling at 17 to 19c and for good store packed, straight and sweet, they are paying 15 to 16c and getting 16 to 17c, while for bakers' butter 15c is as a rule the selling and 14c the buying price. There are not many creamery tubs offering and there are not many wanted. Jobbers are paying 20c to 21c and selling ordinarily at ½c advance on these figures. Creamery pound prints are wanted at 22c.

There seems to be a little better demand locally for cheese and the market is steadier on account of the make dropping off consequent upon the dry weather. Jobbers are paying as a rule 9½c at the factories and selling at 10c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Nothing new to report. For the hand-picked article dealers are paying $1.25 to $1.30 and selling at $1.40 to $1.50, while for a medium bean they are getting $1.20 to $1.25.

DRIED APPLES—There is not much demand and prices are fairly steady. Jobbers are taking a few at 4c. and getting 4½ to 5c., the buyers being principally in the north.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Nominally 8½ to 9c.

EGGS—The market is weak and lower. Some handlers who have hitherto not been sellers upon this market are now reported to be anxious to dispose of their stock here, but the Toronto market is glutted and jobbers will handle only on commission; 11c. is the price usually asked retailers, but plenty can be had at ½c. below that figure.

POULTRY—Quiet at 40 to 45c. for chickens and 40 to 60c. for ducks.

POTATOES—Not many are offering and demand is fair. Jobbers are paying $1.25 per bbl. and selling at $1.50 per bbl. and 75c. per bag.

HONEY—Quiet and unchanged, at 5 to 8c. for extracted.

HOPS—Dull and unchanged, at 12 to 14c. for '92's.

GREEN FRUIT.

Business continues brisk. Bananas are coming in freely, but the demand is not so good as it was and prices are lower. Canadian plums are beginning to arrive in good supply. Oranges are quiet and there is a light demand only for lemons. Peaches are in good supply with demand brisk, but the quality is poor, it only being the early varieties that are still coming in. Another week or ten days will see the better varieties upon the market. The season is nearly over for the small fruits, receipts now being confined largely to lawton berries. We quote as follows: Oranges—Rhodi's, Sorrenti's, $4.50 for 200's, $2.50 for ½ boxes, $4.50 for 160's; lemons, $3.50 to $4.50; bananas, $1 to $1.75;

DELHI CANNING CO.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

There is little or no change in the situation beyond that the packers are now beginning to pack tomatoes and corn, and under auspices that are generally conceded to be favorable. In spite of the reported withdrawal of some of the packers from the market the jobbing trade assert that offers are still being submitted to them by these very packers. Tomatoes, peas and corn are being offered by the packers at 75c. all round, and some houses have bought their season's supply at that figure. Peaches are being offered for future delivery as low as $1.50 per doz. The demand for canned goods is at the moment light and is principally from sections of the country where there is somewhat of a scarcity of green vegetables. For tomatoes, peas and corn 80 to 85c. is still the idea. Canned fruits are dull and unchanged. Fine brands of salmon still continue scarce and prices unchanged. Jobbers are beginning to look forward to receiving some of the new pack. Some of the earlier catch has in fact already arrived and is selling at $1.40 to $1.60, and to arrive is quoted at $1.25. Lobster in the better brands continues scarce at unchanged prices. The idea for first-class brands is $1.80 to $2 for talls and $2.40 to $2.50 for flats.

MONTREAL.

The market for canned goods is quiet so far as actual spot business is concerned. The only business doing is in salmon, and it has not been large as the arrivals of new stock have been limited so far. Prices remain much the same, offers being made of $1.30 to $1 35 for good brands. Advices from the coast this week bear out what we published last, to the effect that the pack would not be as heavy as expected, and on this account many look for steadiness in prices. In canned fruit, vegetables, etc., there is nothing doing, buyers are not disposed to operate this year in advance of the pack.

MARKETS—Continued.

Lawton berries 8 to 10c.; peaches, 40 to 80c. per basket; Canadian tomatoes, 30c. per basket; huckleberries, 70 to 90c.; cucumbers, 20 to 30c. per basket; cabbage, $1.50 to $1.75 per bbl. for Canadian; watermelons, 15 to 25c.; California fruit—Peaches, $1.40 to $1.60; pears, $2.50; plums, $1.25 to $1 75.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

There is a fair supply of dressed hogs and prices are steady at $8 per cwt. Demand for hog products continues good at unchanged prices. A carlot of long clear sold this week at 10¼c. Toronto. Stocks of lard here are light, and a good many are getting supplies from summer packers.

BACON—Long clear, 10½ to 10¾c. Smoked backs 12 to 12½c., bellies, 13 to 13½c., rolls 10 to 10½c.

HAMS—In good demand and firm at 13 to 13½c. for smoked.

LARD—PureCanadian 12¾c. in tubs, 13c. in pails and 12½c. in tierces. Compound 9¾ to 10c.

BARREL PORK—Canadian heavy mess $20, Canadian short cut $21, shoulder mess $18.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef fores are 4½ to 5c., hindquarters 7½ to 8½c., mutton 6 to 7c., lamb 10 to 12c.

FISH.

There is no change in fish, supply is light and the demand dull, prices unchanged. We quote: Fresh sea salmon, 16 to 18c.; skinned and boned codfish, 6½c.; Labrador herring, $3 per half barrel; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 11 to 12½c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; blue back herring, $2.00 per hundred; blue pickerel, 4 to 5c. a lb.; yellow ditto, 7 to 8c. a lb.; salmon trout and white fish, 7c.; eels, 6 to 8c. a lb.; prepared frogs 50c. per doz.

SALT.

Salt trade continues good in job lots, there being no calls worthy of notice for large quantities. Quotations in car lots are the same as last week, being 65c. for sacks; $1 for barrels; $1.25 for dairy, $10 per ton for Liverpool rock

HIDES, SKINS, TALLOW, WOOL.

HIDES—The trade in hides is weak, and there is no change since our last report. The large quantities of Western hides sold in Canada have caused a dead drop in these markets. Dealers are paying 4c. for No. 1 local hides, 3c. for No. 2

SKINS—Skins are much the same as last week; no change worthy of note. Lambskins are 45c., pelts 30c. Calfskins are more plentiful, although prices are low, dealers paying 6c. for No. 1 and 5c. for No. 2.

TALLOW—No change in tallow, and business is almost at a standstill, price for rendered being 5¼ to 6c. according to quality.

WOOL—Wool is quiet and prices are unchanged. Dealers are paying 17c. for selected combing and 18 to 20c. for clothing.

PETROLEUM.

The Petrolia Advertiser in its weekly report says: There are no transactions on 'Change and consequently we may say that there is no official price. We understand that some large producers are getting $1.10 from the Imperial Oil Co., regularly. This price, of course, is for crude delivered in the Company,s own tanks. The legitimate market, however, appears to be entirely at a standstill. We cannot but feel that this direct delivery business is a very grave error for which the producer alone is responsible. Refined remains unchanged, and may be quoted at 10c. in car lots, f. o. b. here. An increasing trade is reported in burning oils

J. W. Lang & Co. expect a shipment of new Valencia raisins in about a week.

Fox & Wickett, general store, Sterling, have assigned to J. M. Redmond, Toronto.

Sloan & Crowther expect a shipment of new skinned codfish, in cases, in a few days.

Samuel Rogers & Co. report that they are having a big run this season on their Peerless oil.

T. Kinnear & Co. are offering something new in roast beef in 2-lb. tins at a reasonable figure.

Sloan & Crowther have got in a new line of medium Japan teas via Empress of India.

The receipt of their new season's low grade Japan teas is reported by Eby, Blain & Co. The quality is good.

A shipment of fresh and keppered herring and bloaters, in cans, has just been received by Sloan & Crowther.

A lot of provincial currants, good quality, is being offered by H. P. Eckardt & Co. at 4½c. in barrels.

Eby, Blain & Co. have received another large shipment of Morton's fresh and kippered herrings and preserved bloaters.

Davidson & Hay are selling immense quantities of Japan teas at prices ranging from 16 to 17c. They are said to be good value.

The attention of the trade is directed to H. P. Eckardt & Co.'s advertisement, in which they offer a big deal in sultana raisins.

Advices to P. L. Mason & Co. report that the production of Malaga fruit will be smaller than last year, but prices so far received indicate lower values.

Perkins, Ince & Co. and J. W. Lang & Co. have both been advised of the shipment of their "Horseshoe" brand of salmon. The goods will be here in a few days

Carr & Co.'s English biscuits are said to be rapidly gaining favor on this market. Prices are reasonable and the quality good. An advantageous feature about these biscuits is that they will keep for a good length of time. H. P. Eckardt & Co. are the agents for the Toronto market.

Lucas, Steele & Bristol have filled all orders for British America, Walrus and Flagship brands of salmon. They report all three pleasing well.

The first batch of invoices for W. C. Bevan & Co. were received on the 16th inst. The fruit was shipped Aug. 2, and is considered as due about the 30th inst.

A letter just received from Smyrna by P. L. Mason & Co. confirms the original estimate of the Sultana crop, namely, 25,000 to 26,000 tons against 33,000 tons last year.

Perkins, Ince & Co. have a large consignment of Japan teas in transit. It came by the Sirene, landing at Vancouver after a 31 days' trip across the Pacific. It is expected here in about a week.

Early shipments of Valencia raisins are now on the way via Liverpool and the steamers Swedish Prince and California to New York. These steamers will be within three days of each other.

Advices received by J. L. Watt & Scott report that the European apple crops are good and will last late. Consequently early shipments of common fruit from Canada and the States are not likely to fare well.

Diamond Crystal salt is now being offered by Lucas, Steele & Bristol in neat pasteboard packets, two dozen in a case, at $1.60. This enables the grocers to put it into the hands of the consumer at 10 cents. This is cheap for pure salt.

A new bright chewing tobacco has been placed on this market by Tuckett & Sons It is manufactured from the finest leaf, and will show good profit to retailers. It is called "Tuckett's Square," and there are eight plugs to a pound. T. G. Williamson & Co., the Toronto agents, received the first samples Saturday last.

A car of California pears that was consigned through to Montreal has been consigned back to Toronto, The Montreal market is reported to be glutted with fruit of this kind, there having been no less than 15 cars received there in three days. More cars are expected to be consigned back to Toronto. "The Americans," said a commission man, "seem to have been afraid of the Toronto market this season, most of the stuff coming here having been bought, not consigned."

MONTREAL.

The flour market shows little change and no improvement. Stocks are large, a feature in this connection being the large quantity of old stock on the market, and it is said that owing to the recent intense heat a lot of it has gone sour. The actual movement is small and principally confined to a small enquiry from city buyers for Ontario straight rollers, etc. We quote :—Winter wheat, $3.90 to $4.10 ; Manitoba patents, best brands, $3.90; straight rollers, $3.15 to $3.25; extra, $2.90 to $3.05 ; superfine, $2.60 to $2.90 ; Manitoba strong bakers', $3.65 ; Manitoba strong bakers', best brand, $3.70.

The counter tea mixer, lately advertised in THE GROCER by W. H. Gillard & Co., of Hamilton, is now considered by hundreds of grocers in Canada as a fixture in their business, and many letters have been received from users speaking words of highest praise for its usefulness and adaptability to the purpose for which it was placed upon the market.

French, Cave & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., have had their lemonade tabloids on this market for the last two seasons, and they have recently added their orangeade and gingerade tabloids. They are handsomely put up goods, and are meeting everywhere with a ready sale. The Canadian Specialty Co., Toronto, are the Dominion agents.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, Aug. 24, 1893.

GROCERIES.

The general grocery market continues quiet, the aggregate volume of trade being small. The week, however, has furnished some new features which may enliven the dullness before long. An undercurrent of enquiry is to note for teas, which is taken to mean that buyers want supplies, although they are reluctant at present about closing a purchase. The values at present ruling on this line are generally considered reasonable. Coffees and spices show a somewhat easier feeling, and our range of prices below are down a trifle from what they were a week ago. Molasses is quiet and fairly steady, and the dried fruit market is without feature. In canned goods the chief interest is in salmon, and advices certainly favor steadiness in prices.

SUGAR.

The sugar market has not presented any noticeably new feature, but business has been fair on the whole, and some slight shading in yellows which occurred possibly may have led to some increase in the volume of business. It is only on low grades, however, that any change can be cited, sales transpiring at 4¼ to 4⅜c. Bright stock has been in good demand and steady at 4¾ to 4⅞c., and stock of this description is not plentiful, as refiners find it difficult to fill orders. In granulated business has been of fair proportions, and the price is steady and unchanged at 5⅜c. Advices from abroad do not indicate much stir in the raw sugar market, and there are complaints that business is disappointing.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.

The volume of trade in molasses has been moderate, in fact we hear of little new business in a large way. The tone is unchanged, the combine quotations being held firm at 33 to 34c. for ordinary jobbing transactions, but there are outside round lots on the market which could be moved for less.

Syrups have been in rather better demand and we note sales of Canadian at 1⅝ to 2c. in the wood while American has left hands here for western buyers at 17½ to 21c.

TEA.

Although it cannot be said that there is any actual increase in business in Japan teas, there is an undercurrent in the shape of more frequent enquiries which is interpreted to mean that supplies are wanted in many cases. It is difficult to make sales however, just at present as prospective buyers are disposed to dicker over prices. The stock of Japans at present offering is certainly of fine quality and very reasonable in price. Blacks and greens show no change, a small line of the former being taken on English account at 8¾d. We quote Japans: common 12 to 13c; medium, 15 to 17c; fine 18 to 21c; and finest 23 to 30c.

COFFEE.

Large receipts of Brazilian coffee have softened the New York market, and the easier feeling already noted on spot has become rather more accentuated, some round lots of Maracaibo, etc., changing hands at rather lower prices, so that there is sufficient on which to lower prices, and our quotations are marked down accordingly. We quote Jamaica, 16 to 18c, Maracaibo, 19 to 21c., Rio, 17½ to 19c., Java, 24 to 28c., and Mocha, 25 to 28c.

SPICES.

Spices have developed an easier feeling also, and business is quiet. We reduce our quotations slightly:—Jamaica ginger, 15 to 16c. for common and 18 to 20c. for fine; black pepper, 5½ to 6½c.; pimento, 6c.; nutmegs, 50 to 52½c. to $1.

RICE.

There is no change in rice, which rules quiet under a small local movement.

DRIED FRUIT.

There is nothing doing in dried fruit. Valencia raisins are cleared out of first hands, as noted a fortnight ago, and it is yet rather early for any extensive business for forward delivery. Brokers here quote fine new off stalk Valencias at 15s. f. o. b., and seconds 14s., on which basis they should open at very reasonable figures. The first steamer, which is loading at Denia at present, it is anticipated will carry 20,000 boxes. She will not be here much before the end of September. Several others are expected to follow.

There is nothing new in currants, the market ruling dull, and prices, it is said, have been shaded for the inside figure this week. We now quote 4¼ to 5½c.

GREEN FRUIT.

With the auction sales of California fruit from day so day there has been considerable stir in green fruit. Staple lines, however, remain much the same. Lemons rule weak at $1.87½ @ $2.00, good sound fetching possibly $3.50. Oranges continue scarce and firm. California stock selling at $3.75 to $4. per box. There is a ready sale for blackberries at 9½ to 10c. Plums are in good demand at $1.50 to $1.75 per crate. California peaches are quoted at $1.50 to $1.75. There have been large receipts of grapes, which range from 75 to 80c per basket. Bananas are not plentiful and sell steady at $1.50 to $2.00 per bunch. Pears are in good demand, $2.50 per box.

BEANS.

The market is quiet. We quote hand-picked $1.40 to $1.50 per bushel; ordinary to good, $1.35 to $1.30, and inferior 95c. to $1.10.

HONEY.

Receipts of new comb stock continue to arrive and meet a good sale at steady prices, 11 to 13½c. the outside for white clover. Old stock is a slow sale at 6 to 8c. for extracted.

HOPS.

Brewers do not seem to be wanting much supplies just at present, and the market is quiet. Prices rule steady, some small lots of Eastern Townships changing hands at 18 to 19c.

POTATOES.

There is very little to note, and prices are unchanged $1.20 to $1.40 per bbl.

PROVISIONS.

There is very little change in the provision market. There is not much doing in pork, but Canada short cut is in light supply, and this firmed up prices on it, but otherwise the tone is easy. There is very little to report in lard, and smoked meats have met with a fair demand. We quote as follows:—Canadian short cut, per brl., $21 to $21.50; mess pork, western, new, per brl., $22.50 to $00; hams, city cured, per lb., 12 to 13c.; lard, Canadian, in pails, 11 to 12½c.; bacon, per lb., 11½ to 12¼c.; lard, com., refined, per lb., 9½ to 9¾c.

EGGS.

There has been no important change in the egg market, the movement being moderate during the week and prices unchanged at 11 to 12c.

CHEESE.

It is a simple case of stand off in cheese at present between the country seller and the foreign buyer, and neither are prepared to give anything. To speak plainly, prices seem to be high enough, and it is questionable whether salesmen are wise in being too optimistic about values. They should bear in mind that the season is advancing, and that when it is a question of summer-made cheese with goods turned out in the fall the latter always gets the preference. They may hold altogether too long, therefore. At present business on spot is confined to goods that can be had from 9½c. down. Finest townships, 9⅜c.; finest French colored, 9⅛ to 9¼c.; do. white, 9 to 9⅛c.; under grades, 8¾c.; Cable, white, 47s. 6d.; do. colored, 47s. 6d.

BUTTER.

The butter market is extremely quiet and there is no improvement in the position. According to fairly reliable estimates some 25 to 30 per cent. of the July creamery is still in first hands, and as it is near the end of August the make off that month will soon be on the market. This means a big jag of butter to be disposed off to clear up the market before September creamery is offered, and whether it can be done or not is a problem that is agitating sellers. In view of it they are much more accommodating than formerly, and the market has an easy time in consequence. Creamery, 20 to 20½c; townships, 18 to 19c.; western dairy, 16 to 17c.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

Geo. Gillespie, of the grocery commission house of Gillespie & Co., has returned from the seaside to business again.

A cable from Denia states that the crop of Valencia raisins will be less than last year, but that the quality will be very good.

Gillespie & Co., who are among the largest importers of dried fruit in Canada, say that raisins will open at a fairly moderate cost this fall, say about 5½ to 6c. for prime brands.

Lightbound, Ralston & Co. are making a special offering during August of French vinegar.

Mr. Hughes, of Caverhill, Hughes & Co., got back last Thursday from Murray Bay, where he had been enjoying a holiday.

Caverhill, Hughes & Co. have several lines of new Japan teas, ranging from 17½ to 35c., close at hand, expecting some this week

Chaput, Fils & Co. have advices of a carload of the well-known Horse Shoe brand of salmon, and are offering it at $1.30 to $1.35.

It is anticipated that from 40,000 to 50,000 boxes of dried raisins and currants will come to Montreal by direct shipment this fall.

Cables on raw sugar from London quote beet sugar in London at 15s. 6d. August and 15s. 1½d. September, which is down from the highest point.

W. T. Costigan & Co. note a rather better demand for teas for direct importation, which in their opinion is apt to operate against the chances of consignments.

N. Quintal & Son are large holders of new canned salmon which they booked at a very moderate figure, and say that the interruption to the pack will not effect their figures.

An offer of $9.75 per barrel, which was made for a car load of salmon here the other day, was refused, the sellers cabling back that they would not accept its receipt at 50c. advance.

Lightbound, Ralston & Co. have to arrive about September 1st Spanish onions in lots of 100 crates or upwards at 90c,; lots of 50 crates or under 95c., to arrive about Sept. 15. They are offering new Valencia raisins, J. Merle brand, at 5½c.

The agent of a leading Fraser River cannery states that the establishment he represents, which expected to pack 70,000 tins, up to the 14th only packed 24,000, so that even allowing a full pack for the rest of the season, it cannot get much over half the pack it expected.

The most recent advices to wholesale grocers here are that the pack of canned salmon on the Noas river will only be one-fourth, on the Skeena one-half, and on the Inlet river a full pack. The packing on the Northern river is about finished. On the Fraser, according to the same advice, the pack is very much short of the anticipated quantity.

A numerous delegation of the French grocers of Montreal intend visiting the World's Fair in a body early in September. They will travel in their own Pullman and thoroughly enjoy themselves. Among the gentlemen who propose going are Messrs. N. Quintal, Sr., of Quintal & Sons, A. A. Labrecque, Alf. Labrecque, L. E. Beauchamp, and L. E. Geoffrun, of Chaput, Fils & Co.

THE SUGAR CROP.

Concerning the growing sugar crops, Messrs. Willet & Gray say: "Present conditions overshadow all others so much that the future is well lost sight of, but there is a constant improvement going on in the grow ing crops of sugar, which give promise of a more abundant supply during the coming campaign. Our advices from Germany are that the beet root leaves are turning yellow, a sure sign of premature ripening, giving promise of considerable receipts at Hamburg by the end of September. The latest estimate by our friends is of a beet crop for all Europe of 200,000 tons above last year's — not a large increase to be sure, and no more than will be needed, even with the curtailed consumption that will undoubtedly follow in the wake of this terrible financial distress. Cuba will very likely add 150,000 tons, or more, to next season's supplies, which should also meet with ready demand from the United States at fair prices. As there is fully ½c. per lb. present difference in values between old and new crop beet sugars, it will be interesting to watch the process of prices coming together, as they must do, in October at the latest. At present more speculative influence declines in one crop, carry declines in the other, and the difference in values becomes no smaller.

"The greatest trouble we have to contend with now is the financial distress, which goes on increasing constantly, and has now reached the critical stage in which transfers of money from one part of the country to another to pay for purchases made is almost impracticable, and hence much money belonging in New York is tied up at distant points and quite unavailable for use. Naturally all business is immensely curtailed, and will be more so, and sugar is no exception. Boston and New Orleans have ceased selling refined sugar beyond the local markets. The two largest refiners in Brooklyn have closed temporarily, leaving only the F. O. Matthiessen & Wiecher's houses and the Mollenhauer running in this section, which, with the two refineries in Philadelphia, are able to supply all the demand. It is not possible for the refineries now running to melt over 17,000 tons during the coming week, and hence the demand for raw sugars must be further postponed. In the meantime, as already said, holders appear quite disposed to await events, and are not urging sales, as nothing would be gained thereby."

Thomas Cooil, of Mount Forest, has just returned from the Old Country. He was away about six weeks, and reports having had a pleasant trip.

Donald Gunn, of Gunn, Flavelle & Co., and Mrs. Gunn returned Tuesday from the World's Fair. They were away a little over two weeks and had a pleasant time.

W. R. Edmands has been appointed city traveler for J. W. Lang & Co. Mr. Edmands is well known in Toronto, having formerly been with the old wholesale houses of Robert Gordon & Co., J. C. Fitch & Son, and Frank Smith & Co. Lately he has been in business for himself.

The World's Fair stream still continues to grow in volume. Three more left the other day, via Collingwood—viz., R. A. Donald, W. A. Bradshaw and C. H. Francis. They hope to cover everything in two weeks, and the fish stories will be crowded out when their yarns begin to circulate.

E. N. Godfrey, of Meaford, paid a visit to THE GROCER this week. Mr. Godfrey is a live man. He was burned out recently, but by the afternoon of the following day he had bought out a store-keeper across the road, took possession, and is now doing a good trade. He reports that the plum crop, for which the district of Meaford is famous, will be fairly good.

OLIVE-GROWING IN MOROCCO.

The large olive groves of southern Morocco, especially in the province of Soos and in the districts around Morocco City (Marakesh) and Demnat, says an English paper, afford in prosperous years abundant crops of olives of fair quality, forming a very important item in the export lists of the country. Owing to damage to trees by locusts and other causes, the yield in 1892 was inferior, and only a value of $27,300 was shipped, against $219,400 in 1891, and $693,600 in 1890. It is noteworthy that some Europeans are beginning to turn their attention to the oil pressing and refining industry; one English and one French press are already working at Mogador, while another French one, on rather a large scale, has been established at Morocco City, and is in brisk working order. There appears to be no reason why this oil, if properly refined, should not rival some European qualities.

The Baldur Farmer's Elevator Co. of Baldur, N. W. T. is applying for incorporation.

DRY GOODS.

MONTREAL MARKET.

The dry goods market shows a fair degree of activity for the season, all the houses confessing themselves busy in pushing forward goods on fall orders booked some time ago. In the matter of new business, however, there is not much to be said, as the majority of travelers are taking their holidays. Still better orders continue to come in, and sorting trade, of this sort, is fairly good. Remittances show a little improvement.

Agents of the cotton mills report that both grey and white cottons are scarce, and the mills very closely sold up.

The millinery openings commence on Tuesday, of next week, and a good influx of buyers is anticipated from which the millinery houses expect to derive benefit, and the general houses hope that incidentally they will show in it.

The flight of dry goods buyers to Europe has already commenced, in fact it is getting earlier and earlier every summer, business is being pushed to such an extent.

Mr. Hy. Birks, of Belding, Paul & Co. is away from town at present on a trip.

Messrs. Donald McNaughton and W. Buell, of Jas. Johnston & Co., are enjoying their holidays in taking in the World's Fair.

Mr. Jas. Slessor, of Jas. Johnson & Co., will very likely sail for Great Britain on the 15th or 20th of September. He will be accompanied by his son Mr. Jas. Slessor, Jr., who intends making a prolonged stay of two years abroad.

Mr. R. W. Macdougall, of Gault Bros., has just returned from a prolonged trip through the Eastern and Middle States. He considers that matters are at their worst across the lines, and that they should improve shortly.

Messrs. Ceo. Fraser and Ceo. Coins, of S. Greenshields, Son & Co., have left on their fall voyage to the British markets. They expect to return in November. Mr. Forsythe, the carpet buyer of the same firm, is also on his way across the pond.

Mathews, Tower & Co. note a first-class demand for all kinds men's furnishings. Their business has been 15 per cent. better than last year. They note a continuation of sorting orders for goods of holiday wear, also flannel jackets, Indian sashes, etc.

Messrs. Jas. Johnston & Co. are closing up a lot of orders for silks and velvets this week. They note no change in the tone of values on these articles.

Jammet gloves of this fall's importation are highly spoken of by critical buyers who have examined the recent heavy consignments received by Thouret, Fitzgibbon & Co. Their old prices prevail, though French prices have greatly advanced. A new feature greatly admired in the laced line is a round stud which holds the lace firmly without cutting it, and for which extensive orders have been booked.

Messrs. Thouret & Fitzgibbon have an extensive stock of Bavarian felt slippers which find a good market in Quebec and the Northwest. The firm do a big percentage of this trade, and turned over last season over $50,000 worth of this one particular line.

Messrs. Gault Bros. are very busy getting forward fall orders of dress goods and imported and domestic tweeds. Their business in the last named is perhaps the largest in the Dominion. The staff of the firm have been compelled to work three and four nights out of every week recently.

Caverhill, Kissock & Co. are commencing to get ready for the millinery openings. The staff have been busy laying out stock all week. The flat, broad-brimmed hats, etc., seem to be a staple. The colors in felts all run to bright shades, peach green being expected to be the big run. The first day of the openings is Tuesday, the 29th.

TORONTO MARKET

The past week has been an exceedingly quiet one in the wholesale houses. Back orders are been looked up and filled. Orders on city account have not been very brisk except for a few advance novelties in ladies' wear. From rural parts letter orders are improved, but are yet of small consequence compared with the letter orders of a busy season. Travelers' orders are meagre on account of the difficulty in finding retailers at home, and they are further limited by the fact that buyers are holding off for their semi-annual visit to the metropolitan markets.

Exhibition circulars are in season. Buyers are getting back from their holidays Silks are easier according to latest European advices. The trade is divided on the "Sunday car question." Improvements are being made to better appearances before visitors arrive on the 28th. The millinery houses are rushing business—mostly opening and showing.

John Macdonald & Co. are showing a more than ordinary range of men's fall and winter gloves and mitts.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence have a shipment of hard finished serges in navy and black, extra wide, and of special value.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling are showing an excellent range of men's and boys' shirts in flannel and meltons, buttoned and laced, navys, plains and fancy patterns.

W. R. Brock & Co. are showing an extra heavy line of all-wool mitts, called 'Bouncer,' which can be retailed at 25c., and are 50 per cent. better than previous offerings.

Alexander & Anderson report a full stock of fall goods of every description. They have prepared for the influx of visitors during the next and following weeks, and will show some specially attractive goods in all departments. Their exhibit of dress goods is replete with the fashionable goods of the season.

Leather shoe laces in per gross pairs at usual price of per gross laces are shown by John Macdonald & Co. This is a bargain.

Another shipment of their black and cream guipures is to hand with Caldecott, Burton & Spence. These goods are still in great demand.

Silks in colored surahs, shot surahs and tartans suitable for the millinery trade are being shown in great variety by Gordon, Mackay & Co.

W. R. Brock & Co. have received the bulk of their fall stock, and will be prepared to receive all buyers who will be in the market during the next month. Tney are giving special quotations in all departments.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling are showing a complete stock of winter gloves in knitted fancy and self colors, as well as various qualities of leather. A special number to sell at $9 is a decided leader.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. are showing a line of coating serge dress goods at 50c., special value, good range of shades ; also a fine assortment of sail cloth and Panama hopsacking dress goods at 50c., 75c. and $1,

W. R. Brock & Co.'s dress goods department is well filled with the season's novelties in hopsacking, tweeds, serges, shot whipcords and other leading fabrics. Visitors will find some excellent ranges. Their woolen department is well known throughout the trade, as they are said to carry the best stock of suitings and trouserings in the city.

The Arctic shirts and drawers shown by Gordon, Mackay & Co. for this season are the best they have ever offered to the trade. Their range is complete in sizes from 34 to 44 inch.

John Macdonald & Co. have a large exhibit of plain and fancy silks specially prepared for Exhibition visitors. Special value is shown in black silks. Their stock of staple ribbons is also well assorted at present, every number being represented. In black and colored silk velvets they are showing some elegant novelties. Dress goods are in full range in hopsackings, serges, and other favorite lines. Hosiery, gloves and ladies' underwear are always given full attention in this house.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have always given special attention to the cardigan jacket branch of their men's furnishing department, and this season offers a larger range at closer prices than ever before, in both Canadian and imported makes.

Alexander & Anderson are doing a nice trade in tailor-made mantles since their purchase of the John Ryan Mantle Manufacturing Co., of this city. They have visited New York and engaged a staff of designers, cutters, operators, pressers, etc., so that everything turned out will be the best in point of finish and workmanship. They have turned out a nice range of samples, which have been greatly admired, and are in active demand.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence have just opened their beaver mantle cloth. These goods are without doubt superior to those shown last season, and prices are a shade lower. This line is shown in a full range of colorings, including navy, black, brown, fawn, myrtle and cardinal. Browns and myrtles are considered the leading colors of the season. Other lines of cloakings are being opened up and their range is almost complete. They will show everything requisite in this line.

In their haberdashery departmant John Macdonald & Co. have made some changes which will astonish visitors. New shelving stands have been erected to display their special holiday stock. In previous seasons this has not been ready until December, but knowing that many buyers visit this city in September and do not have time to call in December they have made an advance by showing their holiday stock on the days following August 29th. Many visitors will also find suitable souvenirs of their visit in this stock which comprises purses, fancy mirrors, glove boxes, candelabra, bronze and china ornaments, fancy baskets, toilet supplies, dressing cases, cushions, headrests and many other similar lines. The prices will astonish those who have been accustomed to buy this class of goods elsewhere.

TRADE AND PROFITS.

The present time has been designated the era of industrial consolidation. In every trade and every branch of business the struggle for existence is telling its own tale by showing many of the weakest in the struggle to be beaten, the stronger still holding their own in the fierce strife of competion. We are told that competition has been the mainspring of civilization by spurring men on to put forth their utmost energies. It has also been the means of cheapening production, and as all are consumers all must have been benefitted by being able to buy cheaper. Notwithstanding, those surviving are anxious to protect themselves from being beaten by other competitors stronger than themselves, hence they are forming unions, confederacies, pools, trusts, etc.

Many of these unions expect to be able to fix prices at which their goods shall be sold, to accomplish which they aim at restricting production. But competition will, sooner or later, assert its power, and force prices down to the average level, and production will also be forced to meet the requirements of consumers. But it is abnormal competition that begets unions and combinations, and were it not for outside capital and skill ever seeking one another in order to gain a premium, trusts and pools might count upon permanent success.

Outside capital and skill, however, are certain to come together, and at a point, too, where they can unite to the best purpose. The late Walter Bagehot said that "capital runs as surely and instantly where it is most wanted, and where there is most to be made of it, as water runs to find its own level." It is much the same with skill. A capacity for controlling and directing business thoroughly must make itself known. History and experience corroborate the fact that, capital seeking investment, and business talent seeking employment, competition is certain to manifest itself.

And then we have inventions frequently revolutionizing the world, and upsetting the best schemes of business at the time existing. Nor can anyone anticipate the changes contingent upon the relationship between foreign countries and our own. One thing is beyond dispute, that the firm, no matter in what department, which intends to hold its own, must keep to the fore in cheap methods of management.

Profits.—What is the outlook in the future? Will tradesmen be able to earn better profits in the future than at the present time? Indeed, our leaders and guides in such matters say "No." So far from the future offering chances of realising better profits on average business, there will, in all probability, be no profits at all. The best man may secure interest and wages for directing labor, or for wages of superintendence, as it is mostly called, but of pure profits there will be none. Many years ago Professor Sidgwick said "that the average rate of that part of an employer's profits which represents his wages of management will be reduced so low as only to exceed the wages of ordinary labour by an amount just sufficient to pay for the extra anxiety of his work and the extra expensiveness of his training." Of course, he was speaking of large employers of labour. But the operations of economic laws are rapidly bringing large and small wholesale and retail firms to similar means of gaining or losing profits.

In speaking of profits we ought to bear in mind the true meaning of the term as defined by proper authorities. The wages of directing business is a preferred claim which must be made from the price or prices of goods sold before we can speak of profits. Ordinary wages constitute another claim, interest another, cost of materials, insurance, taxes, and incidental expenses further claims. What remains when all these claims have been secured is pure profit. The process by which profit is realized is a mercantile process. It is distinct from every kind of labor and from every kind of interest on any capital involved in the business. "Pure profit," says Professor Clark, of the United States, "is the return of simple ownership. It is free from all admixture of wages and of interest. It accrues to him who simply extends the ægis of his civil rights over the elements of a product, and then withdraws it in order that the product may pass into other hands."

The prices for which goods are sold must bring to the owner or seller more than the cost of all the elements of which they are composed. There is the difficulty. The cost of the chief elements of the product are not entirely under the control of the man of business. Wages, for instance, are fixed at certain rates agreed upon, and must not be altered merely at the bidding of an employer. So also is interest a fixed rate. It is the case also with the prices of raw materials, at least so as to be beyond the will of an employer or producer. The wages of directing labor, or of management, are subject to greater variation, but tend to a certain degree of uniformity. The prices of what he offers for sale his goods depend upon the state of the market, which he cannot control, but which must be accepted, often at a loss. How, then, are profits to be secured, especially when fixed expenses in plant, machinery, etc., are heavy? One plan is open to all, to accept what can be obtained, and to endeavor to live within their means.—J. Sharp in Grocers' Review.

THE FIRST THING THEY DO.

Whipper—Did you see that little article about me in THE CANADIAN GROCER
Snapper—No.
Whipper—That's funny. You have had the paper for the last half hour.
Snapper—I know it; but I haven't got through reading the advertisements yet.

SHE WAS A DAISY.

"I want to use your telephone," said a stylishly dressed woman, with a haughty air, entering a Lexington avenue drug store.

"Certainly, madam," said the clerk courteously.

The woman called up another drug store three blocks away.

"Is this Pestle & Mortar's?" she asked. "It is? Well, this is Mrs. So-and So of 26th street. You understand? Well, I want you to send around, right away, a bottle of that tooth-powder I use. Do you hear me? And two pounds of castile soap. Got that down? And some soothing-syrup for baby; yes, soothing syrup. And a half-dozen two-grain quinine pills—yes, quinine pills, I said. Are you deaf? And—that's all! Send them around immediately—don't forget!"

And she hung up the receiver and started from the drug store which she had been using as an ordering depot for a rival concern, without as much as "thank you." At the door she stopped to say in withering tones to the clerk:

"You ought to have that telephone fixed. It works miserably."—New York Times.

Prices of Canadian hay have declined in London from £6 10s. to £5 5s., and in Liverpool from £6 to £5 14s. This decline tends to check immediate export trade. Quebec is reported to have gathered a heavy crop of new hay, and the yield in Ontario will also be large. Farmers are warned not to bale their hay before it is perfectly cured, as fodder of that quality is not wanted in the London market.

After all that is said and sung about the "Parliament of Man," where the representatives of all nations are to sit and make laws world-wide in their bearing, one sometimes has to wonder whether that cosmopolitan spirit which must necessarily be the forerunner of such an assembly is not really declining instead of advancing, especially when we see the nations that boast of possessing the most enlightenment practising exclusiveness of the most pronounced type. We refer particularly to the United States and to France. In addition to erecting abnormally high tariff walls to keep out the products of other countries, they have both enacted measures to keep without their borders citizens of other countries. The Contract Labor and the Chinese Exclusion Acts, which the United States was pleased some time ago to put on its statute books, needs nothing more than to be merely mentioned as an instance. Everybody has at least a general idea of their purport. With the measure just adopted by France there is not the same general acquaintance. In spirit it is similar to those laws of the United States just mentioned, although in scope or in intention it is milder. Its object, in a word, is to prevent foreigners from doing business in the country. The law provides substantially that foreigners who have not obtained leave to be domiciled in France or who came into that country for the purpose of exercising their professions, will have to register within eight days after their arrival at the place where they propose to reside. Upon payment of a fee, such foreigners will receive a certificate stating that they have complied with the law, without which they cannot obtain employment. If they change their place of residence this certificate is to be revised by the mayor of the locality. Foreigners at present established in France are given until September 8, to comply with the requirements of the new regulations. There are a lot of clouds yet hanging around the horizon of this boasted enlightened 19th century; and it is peculiar that the two big representatives of the republican form of government are among the busiest in trying to prevent their dissipation.

The crops in Ontario are not on the whole as satisfactory as it was a month or so ago anticipated they would be. This is revealed by the bulletin just issued by the Ontario Bureau of Industries. Fall wheat is estimated at 19.6 bushels per acre. This is a little lower than last year, but is of a fairly average character nevertheless. Harvesting began about July 7, but the great bulk of the crop was cut between July 15 and 25th. Spring wheat is again this year almost a failure; and it is not surprising. Owing to a wet and backward spring it got a late and uneven start. Then came drouth in many districts, causing too rapid filling and the resultant—a shrunken and inferior grain. Rust has been a common enemy in all parts of the province, while the midge and other insects have caused much destruction, especially in West Midland, Georgian Bay and East Midland. Grasshoppers, too, have been more numerous than usual. Barley, like spring wheat, also had a late start, but in spite of this and other adverse circumstances, the grain is on the whole, of a fine bright color, but smaller and lighter in weight than usual. The yield per acre is below the average. Two-rowed barley has done even worse than the six-rowed, the growing season having been too short to allow it to develope. The oat crop, too, has not turned out as well as its condition on July 1st indicated, and the same causes that contributed to the injury of the other cereals were present in this, making the yield below the average. After hearing so much from the canners regarding the smallness of the pea crop, and the limited character of the pack, it is somewhat surprising to learn from the crop report under review that "on the whole the crop will be about up to the average." The report, however, acknowledges that while the vines podded well, the drouth prevented the pods from filling perfectly. "A largely increased acreage and only a moderate yield on the whole," is the finding of the report regarding the bean crop. Everybody of course knows that the hay crop was large. The report places it at 578,719 tons larger than in 1892. One thing, too, that might be taken into consideration is the fact that hay is demanding a much better price this year than last. Corn, which is cultivated in the Lake Erie district more extensively than in any other part of the province, is reported "on the average to be very fair, though the drouth has affected it." Potatoes, the report says, will not be up to the average. The yield of roots on the other hand, give good signs of being above the average. Regarding apples, the report substantiates what has been said in different times in these columns, namely, that they are a failure throughout the province. The live stock appears to be in good condition, and the supply of dairy produce is of an average character. The supply of honey is, on the whole, good. While the lot of the farmer in Ontario is not bad it is evident that he will need to be careful. What is the best policy for the country merchant to pursue under the circumstances is equally obvious.

Speaking of crop reports, a bright side to the picture is the prospects in Manitoba and in the Northwest Territories. In Manitoba the yield is generally conceded to be something like 20,000,000 bushels, and competent authorities say that the percentage of Nos. 1 and 2 hard will be greater than any previous crop. The wheat crop of the world, according to the annual report of the Hungarian Minister of Agriculture, issued this week, is estimated at 2,279,000,000 bushels, against the official average of 2,280,000,000 bushels annually for the last ten years. The deficits to be filled up by the importing countries is placed at 370,000,000 bushels, and the surplus available in exporting countries to satisfy this demand at 378,664,000 bushels.

If any reliance is to be placed in the different reports, and there does not appear to be any reason why there should not be, there will be a good supply, at reasonable prices, of practically all kinds of dried fruit Briefly stated, the yield of Valencia raisins is likely to be less than last year, but what may be lacking in quantity is undoubtedly made up in quality. Some of the new crop is expected to arrive here this week In Malaga fruits there is going to be quite enough for all requirements. In Sultana raisins an abundant crop and low prices are looked for. Prunes are a good crop, but nothing really definite can yet be said as regards quality. Currants are as yet being merely dried and housed, but the crop will be a good one and prices low. As to yield, it is estimated at 150,000 tons. Opening prices for dates are favorable.

A man may be a good salesman but a poor buyer. Inability to buy right is the cause of more failures than is the want of the ability to sell. The ability to buy right is only acquired by years of patient labor and study. A man, no matter how well he may be fitted by nature, cannot become an expert buyer in a week. Before he can become that there are two things he must pay particular attention to ; and they are the wants of his customers and the columns of a good trade paper.

CHEESE PRECAUTIONS.

The Government has been paying close attention this season to the question of the branding and shipment of Canadian cheese in bond from Montreal.

From the geographical position of that port cheese exporters there have a decided advantage over those of New York when it comes to the question of buying cheese from the northern counties of New York State adjacent to the towns of Canton and Ogdensburg. In fact they can pay all the way from 1-8 to 1-4c. per lb. more for cheese at the factories and yet place it on shipboard in Montreal, and, of course, lay it down in a British port for less than the New Yorkers can. This condition of affairs has made the counties in question practically Montreal territory; and each year sees more American cheese sent from Montreal in bond.

Last season and the previous ones there were complaints that the customs authorities in Montreal were allowing the exporters in Montreal too much freedom with the bonded goods, and that some of the unscrupulous ones had abused the privilege accorded to them by changing the brand on some of the Amercian boxes to Canadian, and so selling it at a better figure. Of course, such a practice, if it was carried to any length, would seriously injure the reputation of Canadian cheese, and, although the customs authorities did not believe the reports above mentioned to have any foundation, Controller Wallace issued strict instructions this spring in regard to the matter; and they have been rigidly carried out ever since. But as a matter of fact there is less danger of American cheese going out as Canadian from Montreal than at some of the smaller ports, and it is satisfactory to note that equally strict orders have been issued to all the collectors along the river front between Montreal and Kingston. As a result the cheese shippers may possibly be put to a little more inconvenience this summer but the conscientious ones are not kicking, knowing that they have an absolute guarantee that none of their competitors can, to use a slang term, "ring in a cold deal on them." With regard to the allegation that 4,500 boxes of inferior Wisconsin cheese had been shipped as Canadian last season, it is too absurd to call for any comment whatever.

NEW ZEALAND BUTTER.

Mr. John Mynott, of New Plymouth, who represents the dairying interests of New Zealand, and who is doing all he can to promote an export trade between his country and Great Britain, makes the significant statement that there are at present at least 10,000 packages of butter held in store in the colony, without the prospect of finding a local market, and ready to be shipped to London the moment the market there is deemed favorable. Should this be shipped next season as new butter, he anticipates that the result will be great injury to the reputation of New Zealand butter. The length of time for which it may have been kept, he holds, will inevitably lower the quality, and if put on the home market at the opening of the next season, as it most likely will, it will spoil the name of the colony for the whole season in the butter market. It is enough to know that the above surplus of New Zealand product is awaiting the first inducement the English market may hold out for its shipment.—Trade Bulletin.

VARIATION IN CORNMEAL.

Emma P. Ewing contributes to the New Haven Register some valuable hints in regard to grocers extending the demand for cornmeal. She says that the difference in the quality of "bolted" and "granulated" cornmeal is greater even than the difference between the lowest grade of bakers' and highest grade of patent family flour. And if millers and grocery men would furnish only the choicest cornmeal to their customers—it makes such delicious and nutritious articles of diet and can be prepared so easily, and in such a variety of ways—it would soon win its way to popular favor and be found in general use upon the table of all classes. Granulated cornmeal makes drier, sweeter, lighter, and more delicious bread and cakes than bolted cornmeal, and is very much preferable for all culinary purposes.

Cornmeal desires a good deal of cooking to develop its finest flavors, and cornmeal mush —sometimes improperly termed "hasty pudding"—cannot be perfectly cooked in a few minutes. Neither can corn bread be properly baked in a quarter of an hour. Cornmeal mush should be cooked at least an hour—it is generally improved by cooking an hour—and almost every kind of corn bread is better for being baked from 40 to 60 minutes.

There is a wide difference in the quality of corn bread made with scalded meal, and that made with unscalded meal and granulated meal should always be thoroughly scalded with boiling milk or water before it is made into bread or cakes.

For culinary purposes northern corn is much inferior to corn grown in the south. It makes a husky or "fluffy" meal that is unsatisfactory, and as a general rule the corn bread made by northern cooks is so mussed up with flour, eggs and sugar that it loses its individuality and is despised by a lover of genuine corn bread.

MR. HUSTWITT'S LAST EPISTLE.

DEAR SIR,—I had almost concluded not to trouble any more in answering letters which have not the writers proper signature attached a a guarantee of their genuineness, but as your correspondent from "Barrie" has made himself so familiar with my name and seems so very anxious to get the measurement of my cranium, and might also desire a cast of it in plaster (or maybe would like to exchange photographs so as to get a square look at my "phiz." I am sure I would like his. It might do me good, and him also, in making the exchange, as I perceive he is somewhat of a craneologist or mind reader, and we are told that such persons read character from photographs), I shall forego this once my first intentions, so as to afford him an opportunity of getting better acquainted. I unfortunately have studied in another class, who read character from persons' signatures appended to their epistles. Your correspondent is apparently ashamed of his, and, if it is anything to his credit, I may tell him that he is not alone in such practices, as there are many like him in Toronto. In fact, it has become fashionable, or a craze, of late, in city life; and I find that Barrie is not far behind in this respect. I am unable to shower compliments upon such usages however much they may merit it, and I feel sure that you will pardon me, dear GROCER, if I acknowledge to you that this is in all probability the last communciation which you will receive from me, and that my humble opinion of all such fashionable writers is that they ought to know and to do better. I admire a "man."

Yours, etc.,
STEPHEN HUSTWITT.

Toronto, August 28, 1893.

(What Mr. Hustwitt says in regard to the fashion of writing letters in newspaeprs over nom de plumes has a good deal of weight in it. Newspaper publishers would prefer that all communications should be published over the signatures of the writers; but no paper that we are aware of has a rule to that effect, although there is no saying what there may be in the future At present the tendency seems to be in that direction. As it is now, the communication that has the writer's signature attached, as a rule, has the best chance of being published. But even were such a rule established it would not do to have it bound hard and fast. Were no exceptions allowed to it, the newspaper, as the people's tribune, would be closed against those who have grievances to reveal or remedies to propose, but who would be deterred for various reasons for doing so were they compelled to write over their own signatures.—Ed GROCER.)

McDONALD'S TOBACCOS.

DEAR GROCER,—Knowing that your valuable paper reaches a large number of business men and is read by the majority of travellers in the grocery trade, I take the liberty of asking you for a small space to set forth the grievances in connection with McDonalds tobaccos. It is well known by every trader and traveller from the Atlantic to the Pacific that there is only one price, and that there can be no inducements offered in any way to get the customer to buy McDonald's tobaccos because I believe the prices have been made by the manufacturer, and the wholesale trade and their travellers must adhere strictly to the price and the discount set down by the Grocers' Guild (viz., 3 per cent. in ten days) must not be broken. Alas! dear GROCER, the days of honesty among travelers in the grocery trade have vanished and can be counted among the things of the past. There is a house in your city that claims to do the largest trade on Front street, whose traveler (one only) makes a wholesale practice of paying freights, and, in many cases, of giving the nice little discount of 5 per cent. off in 30 days, that is when the invoice is paid to him. Now these extras are charged up to expenses in some way and the house has to pay the piper in the end, which will amount to a nice sum in the course of a year. It is like robbing Peter to pay Paul, or like buying a gallon of oats for a horse and then stealing them the next meal. I cannot think for a moment that the house in question is cognizant of this dishonest way of doing trade, as they have always been held in the highest estimation for honest and upright dealing by the trade generally—by the wholesale and retail alike. But, to say the least of it, as regards the traveller, it is a mean way of getting orders, and the trade generally should look on a traveler of that stamp with suspicion, because if a man is dishonest in one way he will be in another.

Yours, etc., KILKENNY.

HE'S NO LONGER A BACHELOR.

Billy McCleland, as his friends familiarly call him, of McCleland Bros., Niagara-on-the-Lake, is the envied of the bachelors, young and old—and some of the married men, too, as far as that goes—the country round. One bright and sunny morning last week Billy, unknown to his friends, quietly stole across the river to Youngstown, where there lived a young heiress whose heart many a Yankee youth had tried in vain to capture. Where, however, the Yankees had failed a Canuck succeeded. The successful wooer was none other than Billy McCleland; and when he made the journey referred to it was to take possession of his prize. That evening, within the roar of the mighty Niagara, the bond that made the two one was welded firmly together by a minister of the Gospel. When Mr. McCleland returned to Niagara-on-the-Lake it was with the belle of Youngstown on his arm and a big and happy smile upon his face. Billy is popular, and when the happy event got noised abroad—and that didn't take long—he and his fair partner were serenaded by the town band and the Hamifugan's band of the Chatauqua grounds, while congratulations many were heaped upon them by nearly everybody. If good wishes will smooth life's pathway, Mr. and Mrs. McCleland will not find many difficulties in their way.

FALL TRADE NUMBER.

"THE CANADIAN GROCER."

For weeks past we have been at work upon our Fall Trade Number for 1893. Our success is most gratifying, due a good deal to our reputation of the past, viz., in more than carrying out our promises, and in producing a trade journal superior to anything of the kind published in America. This year we propose to give the trade an issue which will surpass all our previous efforts. From a typographical and mechanical point of view it will excel anything of the kind produced in Canada. With regard to the reading matter, extra efforts will also be made. In addition to the contributions of our regular staff we have arranged with gentlemen of well-known ability for a number of special articles on subjects of interest to the trade.

INDIAN TEA CHESTS.

We take the following article from The Home and Colonial Mail :—

It is high time that something should be done by them to obviate the annoyances and losses which grocers have submitted to so patiently for years past, and we trust that a word to the wise will be sufficient. From time to time we hear rumors of dissatisfaction in the market with the packages in which the Indian tea planter of modern times is accustomed to send forward his wares. But whilst we propose to discuss this question, we at once disavow any intention of speaking for or against any of the patented chests which have been brought before the public during recent years. They may be all that is claimed for them, some of them we have even described in our columns, but we hold no brief for any of them, and are not interested in advocating one more than another.

We do not at present express any opinion on the best size or weight of a package of tea further than to sny that the preponderance of opinion amongst brokers and dealers is in favor of a larger than a smaller chest. With some tea blending firms it is an understood thing that a chest of tea means 100lbs. net, and this we imagine to be a generally acceptable weight. But we are rather concerned just now with the material of which the packages are constructed, and we have a strong conviction that if the entire trade could be polled on the question there would be a balance of opinion in favor of the quite old-fashioned teak chest, dovetailed and bound with iron hoops, and lined with lead as stout as cardboard. Such packages were in vogue thirty years ago and were never complained of. But the largest teak forests get cut down in time, and it is no secret that the demands of the past thirty years have seriously worked up the best qualities of available material, and thrown the planter back on other woods of less enduring character. Some of these possessing besides a by no means agreeable fragrance have introduced an element of dispute on the ground of alleged "cheesiness" in the smell of the tea they contained, whilst almost all of them are now lined with a much lighter and thinner description of lead, which is said to be more like tissue paper than cardboard, and which, on the slightest disarrangement, as in the necessary turning out for the process of bulking, collapses, utterly as a protective safeguard to the tea, and is even worse than stout paper, by reason of the fractures it its structure which take place on its being handled. The warehouse keeper tries to repair the mischief by a liberal allowance of paper to supplement the lead when the packages are being refilled after bulking. But if the package should happen to be not quite full, directly it is turned over the interior becomes a chaos, and lead, paper, and tea get mingled together in confusion. Then, if the wooden case be defective, a certain loss of tea is the result. The dock companies deliver the chests fairly well coopered, as a rule ; but the shaking they subsequently receive in transport is of a very searching character, and if there be a weak spot it is certain to be found out. This is more especially the case with the grades called Pekoe fannings and dust. The lead linings having been once cut for the bulking process it is next to impossible to make a secure job of the coopering when they are being refilled. Consequently the contents leak out through the smallest opening, and a few pounds weight of tea get lost, involving the parties concerned in disputes and claims.

The contention of the dealers is that if a planter is supposed to supply the chest in which he sells his tea it ought. at least, to be sufficiently sound to carry the contents. We may say there seems to be considerable force in this proposition, and we believe the time has come when planters must face the question, and in the matter of dusts and small broken teas provide a package that will meet all reasonable requirements. As things are now there is a constant effort to shirk responsibility on the part of everyone through whose hands such tea passes. The planter provides the cheapest chest he can. The warehouse-keeper gets it out of his hands as tenderly as be can. The carriers take delivery, and then absolutely refuse to forward to the consignee unless the package is cased in canvas. The wholesale dealer supplies the canvas casing, and charges it to his buyer in the country, who invariably refuses to pay it on the ground that the seller should provide a chest in merchantable condition to carry his goods. This is the present state of affairs, and, as it seems likely to lead to unpleasant friction in the near future, we direct the attention of planters to the subject, in the hope that, when they are aware of the difficulties, they will endeavor to put an end to them in the most effectual manner they can.

FOR A CASH BUSINESS.

A correspondent in the Northwest Trade urges the present as the most opportune time to side-track the credit system and to adopt the cash rule in transacting business. He says : "I have been trying to work up interest in the grocery trade to consider the matter of doing a cash business at some special meeting of the association, called for this alone, with a view to having the trade as a whole adopt that method of doing business," said a well known salesmsn for one of the local wholesale grocery houses. "The suggestion is being received very favorably, too. There was never a better time to start on a cash basis than right now. One of my customers who has been doing a cash business only since the first of May is doing 10 per cent. more business than he did before. Of course he sells lower a trifle than he did on the old basis, but he can afford to since he does not have to make an allowance for loss from bad debts.

"Prior to his determination to do a cash bnsiness he lost about $1,000 a year, from uncollectable accounts. One of the best reasons for local grocers making this change is that jobbers are withholding credit from some and they have to pay cash for everything they buy. This gives an answer to customers who might say, "I have dealt here so many years and you have never lost a cent from me yet. Why don't you trust me as you have been doing?"

"At the last meeting of the association the matter of limiting credits was suggested and it was decided to discuss it at the next regular meeting," said the hearer.

"Limiting credits is all right in its way," he replied, "but it doesn't go far enough. A cash business, pure and simple, is the only right way to do business. Local grocers do entirely too much credit business. Why, I know of some who have as much as $10,000 on their books. The time is ripe for the change and it could be made easily. The only local grocers that are making a good thing out of the business are those who sell for cash."

WHY CAN'T FARMERS PAY CASH?

Times like these test the soundness of the cash business. There are more people now than there were a year ago who believe that a smaller volume of business on a cash-down basis would have been better for them than a broad and enterprising expansion on borrowed capital that cannot now be squared by any convenient manipulation of figures. —Texas Farm and Ranch.

The writer of the above puts his finger on the weak spot in the farming business of the country. If he will keep the attention of his readers directed to this subject, and if other editors of agricultural papers will follow his example, the cry of hard times in the farming districts will probably soon cease, and the merchants of the country be enabled to adopt the cash system and give their customers lower rates. It is a waste of time and ink for trade editors whose papers circulate among country merchants to harp continually upon the beauties of the cash system, so long as the farmers are unable, owing to their foolish policy of cultivating more land than their capital allows, to meet their debts promptly. One must go to the fountain head to cure the evil. The farmers must be reasoned with and informed that it is possible for them to pay cash and save heavy interest, if they will only exhibit ordinary prudence and foresight. It seems as though, whether crops are good or bad, our farmers cannot walk alone, but must depend upon the merchants for assistance before the next harvest comes around. Improvidence is perhaps as fruitful a cause of the farmer's chronic condition of indebtedness as the custom of cultivating more land than he can afford, but whatever the reason may be, the evil is not without a cure, but the remedy lies in the farmer's own hands and none but he can apply it.—American Grocer.

INDIAN TEAS AT CHICAGO.

"Richard Blechynden must be accounted one of the most hospitable persons on the World's Fair grounds," remarks a contemporary. Daily he gives away to uninvited guests between five and six thousand cups of choice tea, half a barrel of sugar, and unlimited milk. People who know the refreshing and even cooling qualities of a cup of hot tea on a broiling hot day go to India House early and leave it late, for it is there that Mr. Blechynden acts as host the livelong day. Many who sit on the cool verandahs of the ancient-looking Indian building and sip the fragrant-smelling liquid doubtless imagine that they are assisting some enterprising individual or firm to advertise a certain line of goods. There they make a slight mistake, for it is not a single firm, but a multitude of firms, embracing every tea planter in the Indian Empire, aided by the Indian Government, that has placed it in the power of their representative to act the generous host to World's Fair visitors. But for a slight delay in forwarding credentials from the Indian Office in England, owing to the change of Government last year, Richard Blechynden might have enjoyed the distinction of ranking as Imperial Commissioner from India. He is now glad enough that he has been able to slip the official shackles and avoid all the disputes in which foreign commissioners appear to have a facility for entangling themselves. Nothing interests the American visitor to the India House more than the novelty of drinking 'black' tea, instead of a thin, fairly-colored beverage to which he has been accustomed. And few things surprise him more than the discovery that it is not only palatable, but extremely enjoyable. He has been told so long that 'green' tea is better than 'black' that he is at first bewildered at being proffered the latter. Later he finds out the distinction, and after two visits to the house becomes a convert to the darker liquid. He is fortunate if he does not become a slave. On the other hand, Mr. Blechynden is continually surprised to find that, after all, American taste is not too firmly wedded to the Chinese tea, but that it can be easily wooed to the side of the Indian article. Sitting in his cosy little retreat, near the roof of the building, where a pleasant breeze blows all day from the lake in at the window and out through the roof, where Indian rugs cut off the heat of the sun above, and turbaned Indian servants are always at hand to serve tea, he delivered himself the other day of a few characteristic remarks on the subject of American taste in tea: 'They told me me in India,' he said, 'and they repeated it in England, that Americans would never consent to drink black tea. They argued that the climate did not predispose them to drink anything so strong, or that the water of America was different from the water in England, and a lot of rubbish of that sort. Now, whether it is because they get it free, or because my Indian servants fascinate them, I do not know, but I have found, by two months' experience at the Exposition, that they not only drink black tea, but come again for more.' 'Of course they like it. Why, the stuff they call green tea is what we call "sweated" tea. All the strength has been sweated out of it. You can take tea such as is generally drunk in America, and boil it, and the product is not too strong to drink. Take India tea and treat it in the same way, and you would get an inky liquid that no one could drink.'"

"BUSINESS BY RULE."

Among the toasts at a recent convention of wholesale grocers was one entitled: "Business by Rule." It was responded to by Mr. Albert F. Remy, of Mansfield, O., who, in part, according to a contemporary, said:

"I will readily admit that in arithmetic two twos make four every time, yet when we apply rules to business we do not always obtain the same result. Why, gentlemen, if business could be done by rule, I could be as great a business man as any of our leading wholesale traders; all that I would have to do would be to learn the rule.

"There are certain underlying principles that we all must observe if we would be successful merchants, but to do business by rule would put us all on an equal footing without regard to ability, and would entirely eliminate competition, which result I claim is not desirable, for competition must be recognized as the life of trade, although I am aware that unlimited competition is frequently the death of it. And how to maintain friendly and reasonable competition is a very important condition that can be brought about more readily by our coming together and rubbing against each other, than by enacting a whole volume of 'rules of practice.'

"You must not understand that I am against all rules, for I am strongly in favor of selling both coffees and sugars on the Equality plan, and am very anxious that some satisfactory arrangement should be made by which plug tobacco can be sold at a profit; furthermore, I think that there are a number of other staples that ought to, and will be, so adjusted that we will be fairly remunerated for handling them; but further than this, however, I think that the establishment of schedule prices would be a detriment to our Association.

"To my mind the matter of collections is a more important one than the selling of either coffees or sugars upon the Equality plan, and I firmly believe that it will not be many years until the system of making collections through traveling salesmen will be regarded as a relic of barbarism. If salesmen were not allowed to make collections a great deal of 'cutting' could be stopped, and, while I believe in educating our salesmen so that they will sell goods at a profit because it is a correct business principle, yet I am not one who thinks that all the blame for cutting prices should be saddled on the salesman, for many times, when profits are not satisfactory the blame rests entirely upon the head of the house, and when we are looking for the fellow that needs a 'blowing up,' he would be plainly visible if we would step up to a looking-glass.

"Business is being done very differently now to what it was a generation ago, but it is not going to the bow-wows by any means. We have all made money, and I believe the wholesale grocery business is more firmly intrenched now than ever before, and all that is necessary is that we conform to modern methods and customs, but stick to true business principles. I believe in aiming high, in fact holding up as a pattern for both salesmen and proprietors a perfect ideal.

"In everything the perfect ideal is held up to us so that we can fasten it in our mind and strive toward perfection—not that we can attain it. Improvement in all lines of business is going on continually, and why should we, as wholesale grocers, not 'strive towards perfection,' and elevate our business? Let us try to sell goods at a profit, because it is a correct business principle, and not because our 'rules of practice' compel us to."

COFFEE-ROASTING NOTES.

A man who has no sense of smell and is color blind is not a fit candidate for the coffee roasting trade.

See that the bags are well sewed for shipment. A large per cent. is lost in transportation from carelessness in this respect.

Do not give your operator too many roasters to attend to. The amount involved in the loss of a few large "roasts" would more than pay for an extra man.

When the coffee is fully roasted the injection of a small quantity of water will lock up the pores and prevent loss of aroma. It also gives the coffee a brighter appearance.

A first-class operator ought to make the relative make-up of green coffee a study, so as to be able to tell what kind it is, and when he puts it in a roaster he should have a fair idea of what he is going to produce.

A good cooling apparatus is essential to good results. If you can cool the roast in from three to five minutes, the coffee can remain on the fire until it is swelled up plump and presents a good appearance; but if it takes half an hour to cool, a good operator must make his calculation and take it off sooner than otherwise, or the coffee will be too highly colored when bagged up.

All coffees do not roast alike; some will be a bright light color when done, and others will be dark before done. There are two infallible rules, which if properly appreciated and tried will prove to be practically useful. One is, when the aroma is sufficiently developed to produce a sharp, cutting but aromatic sensation in the nose. Those who practice that way do not need to see the coffee. The other rule is, that when a berry is broken it is crisp and uniform in color inside and out.—Spice Mill.

"Tickled . . to . . Death"

THEY have just received the announcement that the Fall Trade Number of THE CANADIAN GROCER for 1893 will be issued the end of September; that it will far outshine previous attempts; that its circulation will be 12,000; and that the advertising rates have been reduced. It is certainly something to feel happy over, and, rest assured, we shall not disappoint them.

The question whether it pays to advertise in a trade journal is very much like asking if the grocery business is a profitable one. The question now is not whether it will pay to advertise, but whether you can afford to have your name missing from this directory. We can prove a dozen times over that it pays to advertise in this journal. The fact that the same people advertise with us year after year and are constantly increasing their space should be sufficient proof. The larger the space the bigger the returns. The sooner we get copy the better the position. For further particulars address The Publishers, 10 Front Street East, Toronto.

KEEN, ROBINSON, AND BELLVILLE.

The following was published by the Northern Counties Review on the attainment by the above firm of its third jubilee:

History records that "before the year 1719 mustard was not known on English tables. About that time an old woman of the name of Clements, residing in Durham, began to grind the seed in a mill and to pass the flour through several processes necessary to free the seed from the husks. She kept the secret for many years to herself, during which time she sold large quantities of mustard throughout the country, but especially in London. Here it was introduced to the royal table, when it received the favor of George I. From the circumstance of Mrs. Clements being a resident at Durham, it obtained the name of Durham mustard." The period in which the founder of the business in Garlick Hill "lived and moved and had his being" were stirring and troublous times, such as must have been extremely harrassing to business men. It speaks volumes, therefore, for the shrewd energy and enterprise of this man that he was able in spite of these obstacles to "conquer fortune and achieve success." Turning to the vast business which 150 years of growth have developed to its present proportions, the first thing to arrest our attention on emerging from the Mansion House Station and walking down Garlick Hill a few mornings ago for the purpose of inspecting the works of Messrs. Keen, Robinson and Bellville, was the procession of railway vans stretching from below the door of the counting-house to the top of the lane, each waiting its turn to load with goods destined for conveyance by the different main lines of railway leading out of the metropolis. The whole day long, from early morn till late in the evening, this sight may be seen by passing observers. Having shaken hands with the genial manager in chief, Mr. Balls, and waited a short time till he was disengaged, we were first shown the office arrangements.

On the left, as we enter, lies the buying and sales department, presided over by Mr .Quin, where we notice, laid out on counters, samples of the vrious articles manufactured, such as mustard, groats, blue, spices, etc., standing in tins and boxes adorned with those attractive labels so familiar to all of us; whilst "around and about" might be seen hung up specimens of the many artistic show-cards, reproduced from pictures in the possession of the firm drawn by eminent artists. Amongst these are three new ones, specially designed for distribution this year, each of them fit to grace a ladies' drawing-room. On one side of this room, as also around a private office adjoining, are hung many frames, wherein are displayed "Royal Warrants" from Crowned Heads, appointing the firm purveyors to their royal households, and also certificates and diplomas of merit received at various exhibitions.

Stepping out of this room again into the entrance hall, we have to the right the town and export department, under the charge of Mr. Payne, where foreign orders from every country and clime receive attention. Adjoining this is the enquiry department, while further on in the general office, where a posse of clerks are visible, sitting or standing at rows of desks, evidently "up to the neck in it"; with ledgers and day books, letters and invoices spread out before them. The premises at Garlick Hill, extensive as they are, only furnish accommodation for a small portion of the business operations carried on by the firm, being now mainly utilized for storing, packing and despatching the goods as received in their manufactured state from the mills in the east of London, also for the accessories from the saw mills and printing works situated in other parts of the city. The manufacture of blues in their various forms, spice grinding, and the making of tin boxes and canisters are about the only branches of industry now to be seen in operation at headquarters.

First in order, being the leading article, comes the manufacture of mustard. Of this serial, two kinds are grown in this country, viz., brown and white, the former being stronger and much more pungent than the latter. The quality and consequent value of the article grown varies considerably; much, therefore, depends upon the judgment and discriminating power of the seed buyer in the first instance. It is said of the late Mr. Bellville that out of more than 100 samples spread out before him, he could select and identify each one at sight, and up to the time of his death he attended the markets at Wisbech and Boston, and did all the seed buying himself personally. Since his decease, this department has been under the special care of the manager in chief, Mr. Balls, assisted by Mr. Frank Bellville, who, though still comparatively a young man, has been for more than thirty years engaged in the business. At the present time the best qualities of mustard seed are grown in the eastern counties, and hence Messrs. Keen, Robinson and Bellville have branch offices at both Wisbech in Cambridgeshire, and Boston in Lincolnshire, being possessed also of large granaries at each of these centres for storing the seed, until such time as room can be found for it in their London depots, which are contiguous to the mills, situated in that part of London known as St. George's-in-the-East, and to this place we will now transfer ourselves. Here we were cordially received by the manager of the mills, Mr. Chapman, a very old and tried servant of the firm, who quickly conducted us to the hoist, and in a few seconds we were on the topmost floor of the building. Glancing round, we see this room is full of grain, ready at hand for the first process of manufacture, with the exception of one corner, which is partitioned off for the lawn workers, who are busy making and repairing sieves, many of them very fine, having meshes 35 to the inch. Descending to the next floor, we come to the chambers where the seed is being emptied from the sacks, and spread out for drying and mixing, after which it is ready for cleaning. This is done by special machinery fitted with brushes and sieves, which effectually cleanse the grain, freeing it from dust and other impurities. The seed is now carried to the stamping machines, where it is crushed or bruised preparatory to sifting. The sieves separate the husk from the flour. The residum or husk is subsequently pressed into cakes, and shipped largely to France and other wine-growing countries, where it is much in request, being highly esteemed as a manure for the dressing of vines. The excellent patent barley, groats, and oatmeal, for the manufacture of which this firm has so long been celebrated, each has its several department assigned to it, with plant constructed on somewhat similar lines.

The engine ring, joiners', and pattern-makers' shops, smithies, etc., are situated in another large building over the way, and here we noticed that a new engine, with additional machinery, was in course of erection, rendered necessary by the growing exigencies of a business which, old as it is, has not yet apparently reached its zenith. Contiguous to these is the warehouse, a building of four storeys, each of the large rooms of which was packed from floor to ceiling with sacks of grain, the stock being replenished as required (and room can be found) from the far larger reserves kept on hand at the granaries. Before leaving these factories we were favored with a practical illustration showing the arrangements in case of fire, and the rapidity with which the mills could be emptied of their busy workers under such an energency. Our next visit was to the wharves in order to inspect the extensive saw mills where the wooden boxes and packing cases are manufactured. As we entered the yards we found ourselves walking between great piles of "deals" imported from the forests of Canada and Sweden, all of which we are told will have disappeared by the beginning of June, by which time the shipping season will have arrived, bringing with it fresh consignments to fill the vacant spaces. Passing into the works, our attention is first attracted to the saw benches, where the long "deals" are being cut to lengths for tops, bottoms, ends and sides. Next we see these pieces transferred to another machine, fitted with a series of circular saws, revolving parallel to each other, which in one operation slices them into boards of the desired thickness for forming the boxes. The boards are then passed forward to the planing machines, some of which are fed by boys, whilst others work automatically by means of an attachment invented by the manager (Mr. Bridgman). The rapidity with which this work is accomplished may be judged from the fact that each machine is capable of planing 2,000 running feet per minute. Next in order comes the work of lettering, and this is done by a machine constructed on somewhat similar lines to that of an ordinary printing press. The boards are fed in between rollers, the upper one being fitted with a plate or die containing the type or letters, which are inked automatically at each operation. A board, passed in by a boy standing at the front, vanishes for a moment, and then reappears at the back, as it drops out, with the lettering duly impressed on the surface of the wood. The parts are now ready for fastening together. This is effected by patent machines, about forty of which are at work, each managed by two girls, nailing ends, sides and bottoms together with marvellous rapidity. The box being now formed, minus the lid, it is ready for the bevelling machine. This is easily managed by a girl of fourteen, bevelling the bottom edges of the boxes with much greater speed and efficiency at a title of the former cost. Boring the holes being much stronger in construction for the hinges is the next process, and this also is done by mechanical means with the aid of girls, after which women with hammers and plyers affix the hinges, and the box is complete. The packing cases are manufactured in a separate department, and this branch of workmanship, being heavier, men and boys only are employed, one section being engaged making cases for home orders, while in another section cases for shipping are made, the latter and bound with bands of iron.

Having briefly described how boxes of wood are manufactured, we will next with equal brevity describe how those of tin are made, i.e., the canisters. As we have previously intimated, this department is located at headquarters in Garlick Hill, and affords occupation for a large staff of men and boys. In this branch of industry, the same minute division of labor is to be seen as in the case of the one just described. The sheets of tin used for this purpose (of which large stocks are always kept on hand) are required to be of first-class quality, rolled from the very best brands of iron, and specially ductile, otherwise they can never stand the severe test which they must necessarily undergo in the process of being manufactured into boxes. The first set of machines stamp out the pieces requisite for forming lids, sides, and bottoms, in the various sizes from 1oz. up to 7lb. canisters. Next the pieces intended for the lids are put under pressure fitted with dies, which at one stroke stamp them to the shape needed, at the same time embossing them with the letters which are to be seen on each of the covers. Meanwhile other men and machines are busy forming side pieces, which are shaped, the ends doubled, pressed and locked together, all in one operation. The bottoms are now fitted in, placed under other machines, and clamped solid, thus forming a complete box without the need for any soldering process whatever. The old solder bath is still in use, however, for making certain kinds of canisters, principally round ones.

The blue department is close adjacent, and now demands our observation. The blue in its rough state is imported from the continent, principally from Germany. In passing through the grinding mills it is mixed with other ingredients, according to the quality and shade of color desired, whether it be Oxford Blue, Standard Blue, Bluso, Indigo Blue, or Ultramarine Ball Blue. From the grinding room the stuff is conveyed to the packing room, on entering which a busy scene presents itself. Here we see a troop of boys actively engaged blocking and packing the blue ready for the market, in forms familiar to most of our readers. The same detail as to division of labor here obtains as in other departments previously described, whilst we need scarcely add that, from the nature of the material dealt with, great care is exercised to keep its operations distinct and isolated from the other branches of manufacture.

Spice-grinding forms another important feature in the list of specialties of the firm.

From the printing works enamate those "things of beauty" in the shape of labels and show-cards which adorn the shops and warehouses everywhere. These works, we find, are situated in a separate building, specially erected for the purpose, and fitted with machinery of the very newest design. Four machines are kept constantly at work on labels alone, printing them in large sheets of various colors. Some of these machines are constructed to print two colors at one operation. Many of the labels have, however, as many as eight colors in them, consequently the sheets must pass several times through each machine ere the process of printing is completed. In addition to the printing, we notice other machines for putting the gilt and silver work on labels and show-cards; also gumming and sizing machines. The latest addition is a new calendering machine, fitted with large rollers heated internally with steam, which produces a beautiful finishing gloss on both sides of the sheets of papaper as they pass through it, at the same time removing all indents made by the type in printing.

We have already referred to the packing of the various kinds of blue. Let us now take a survey of the other departments, where the packing of mustard, patent groats, and barley is carried on. Large numbers of boys, apparently ranging from thirteen to sixteen years of age, are engaged in the occupation both at Garlick Hill and at the mills in the east of London, and it is exceedingly interesting to observe the dexterity with which these bright, active youths perform their several functions. The boys work in squads at different tables. Each parcel is carefully weighed by the boy at the scales and passed on to his neighbor, who stands with an empty tin in his hand waiting to receive it. A shake and dump on the table to settle its contents, on goes the lid, and the next boy takes charge of it. He fixes the label, previously prepared by another one standing at his elbow. The tins are now carried to the ovens, where they remain just long enough for the labels to dry, when they are taken out and packed into boxes previously labelled in another department. These boxes are now removed to the receiving room, whence they are shot down a long "toboggan" to the forwarding rooms, two storeys below, where men stand ready to receive them. Here they are packed in large cases and marked, prior to their consignment to their several destinies.

In the older days, when competition was less keen than now, the smallest parcel of mustard sent out was a 36lb. cask, and a traveler's order sheet was reckoned up by the number of kegs he sold. In these days the grocer has only to open his consignment when it arrives to find therein ready to his hand every size of package a customer can possibly require, from a 1oz. tin upwards. Whilst watching the blue boys busy at work with their packing, we had opportunity for a pleasant conversation with one of the foremen superintending their operations, an elderly man seemingly between 50 and 60. This man we found had been once a packing boy like these, and not only had he been most of his days in the service of the firm, but his father, grandfather and great grandfather before him, thus representing four generations.

One curious thing we noticed in passing through the export forwarding department, where goods are packed for shipment, viz., a series of large square iron tanks, closed on all sides, with the exception of a manhole at the top. On enquiry we were told that these tanks were made in large quantities for shipment to Australia, being used on the farms and sheep-runs in the interior for the storage of water. Instead of shipping them empty, the makers send them to the firm to be filled with goods intended for these colonies, and thus by their mutual arrangement the cost of packing and transit is cheapened for both parties.

Throughout the many departments of this colossal business, the order, system, division of labor, cheerful activity, and prompt obedience manifested on every side all spoke of the guiding hand and the watchful eye of the late principal, which had planned and schemed and trained in order to achieve the maximum of output with a minimum of labor and cost of time.

WASHING POWDERS.

The American Chemical Journal publishes the analysis of four samples of powders used for washing, etc., as follows:

	A	B	C	D
Sodium carbonate.....	45.2	26.9	49.2	46.6
Fatty acids.....	26.4	44.0	25.6	25.7
Combined soda	3.1	3.4	3.5	2.6
Fine sand	....	16.3	....	....
Water.....	23.7	8.8	19.1	24.9

The powders are, therefore, mixtures of dried washing soda and soap, and may be used in conjunction with soap to remove the hardness of water; but when used alone must be injurious to cotton, linen or woolen goods. It is suggested that borax might be used with great advantage in the place of soda, as it removes all hardness from water, is an excellent detergent and at the same time is without corrosive action.

Mr. Heffernan, of Guelph, who has purchased the baking and grocery business of Mr. J. M. Halley, moved to Arthur on Tuesday. He is a welcome addition to our business and social community.—Arthur Enterprise.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, Aug. 31, 1893.

GROCERIES.

Uninteresting indeed has been the trade of the past week. Monday being a holiday did not tend to help matters. The only breaks in the monotony were the decline of ⅛c. in the price of granulated sugar and the arrival here of the first shipments of new season's Valencia raisins, but there was no stir, neither being unexpected. Trade has ruled quiet in every line, and there will scarcely be any change in this respect for another couple of weeks. Coffees show a little improvement in New York, but this market remains as before. In Valencia raisins the trade has been holding back awaiting the arrival of the new fruit. Dried fruits generally are inactive. Rice remains quiet, while in spices little business seems to be doing. Demand is still easily satisfied for sugars. Payments remain much as before.

COFFEE.

Locally trade is still of a hand-to-mouth character and prices are unchanged. In New York symptoms were a little more encouraging for Rio and Santos growths. We quote: Rio, 20 to 21c.; East Indian, 27 to 30c.; South American, 21 to 23c.; Santos, 21 to 22c.; Java, 30 to 32c.; Mocha, 26 to 27c.; Maracaibo, 21 to 23c.

DRIED FRUIT.

There is little or no enquiry for Valencia raisins, green fruit not only being plentiful but there has been a disposition to await the arrival of new fruit and lower prices. We quote as before, at 6 to 7c. for selected and 3¾ to 4¾c. for off-stalk. New season's Valencias arrived on the Toronto market the beginning of the week, and the idea as to prices is 7½ to 8c., but fruit arriving later will be lower. There has been a good demand from biscuit manufacturers for Sultana raisins, at 6 to 6½c. They are a little firmer in New York, on account of early shipments being held at primary markets owing to the cholera epidemic. Currants remain quiet, at from 5½c. up. Advices received this week state that the new fruit will not be on the Patras market till the first week in September. It is expected that at this rate shipments will not arrive on the Toronto market for probably a month later. Prunes dull, at 7 to 8½c.

NUTS.

There is nothing new to report in this line, and we quote: Brazil nuts 11 to 11½c. a pound; Sicily shelled almonds, 32 to 35c. a pound; soft shelled almonds, 15 to 16c.; peanuts, 13 to 14c. for roasted and 11 to 12½c. for green; cocoa nuts, $5 to $5.50 per sack; Marbot walnuts 11½ to 12c.; pecans 13½ to 16c.

RICE AND SPICES.

Rice continues in fair demand at 3⅝ to 3¾c. for ordinary and at 5c. for Japan. Demand generally is good for spices. Amsterdam advices report that the new crop of mustard seed will be on the market about the first week in September.

SUGARS.

Granulated sugar has declined another ⅛c. per pound. It took place Tuesday. It was just five weeks since a similar drop was announced. Granulated is now selling ordinarily at 5½c., although the lower province article can be obtained for a fraction less. Yellows are ordinarily quoted at from 4⅜ to 5⅛c., although there is a very dark sugar that can be got at a fraction under the inside figure. For raws 4¼c. up is the idea. Business is still dull and the feeling rather weak.

Willett & Gray's Weekly Statistical says: Raws declined ¼c. Refined unchanged. Receipts, 16,716 tons. Meltings, 17,000 tons. Total stock in four ports, 77,964 tons, against 78,248 tons last week, and 130,983 tons last year. By cable: Stock in Havana and Matanzas, 112,000 tons, against 113,000 last week, and 92,000 tons last year. The six principal ports of Cuba give for the week: Receipts, none; exports, 1,000 tons; stock, 164,000 tons, against 165,000 tons last week, and 129,282 tons last year. Total stock in all the principal countries, 714,064 tons, against 842,265 tons at the same date last year. Afloats to the United States from all countries estimated, 40,000 tons, against 60,000 tons last year.

Raws—The week has proved uneventful both at home and abroad. Without any pressure to sell sugar the quotations have remained unchanged for Centrifugals and Muscovados at this centre, while at the outports one transaction has been made at a reduction for Muscovados. The next week's quotations will depend very much on whose necessities are the greater, the buyers or the sellers, with the tendency rather in favor of buyers. Both receipts and meltings have been only moderate for the week, and stocks remain unchanged. The meltings for the coming week are not likely to be increased, as a surplus of production still remains to be disposed of. Just at the close holders decided to meet the refiners' views and let them have a considerable line of sugars at ¼c. per lb. reduction from the recent quotations. The market will now become settled again on this new basis of quotations. Europe has been quiet and more steady than before, until the close, when considerable weakness was shown. Beet crop prospects are neither very favorable nor very unfavorable, and some say the same crop as last year is most likely to be correct, while others give larger estimates. Reports from all cane-producing countries are very favorable for good average crops, and generally larger than last year's.

Refined.—The demand increased very considerably and gave opportunity for the starting again in a moderate way of the houses which closed down last week, in order to supply a special demand for certain grades of soft sugars. Under the present moderate meltings, the houses generally have become over-sold on special grades, and some delay results in shipments. The country also run their stocks down to such a low point under financial stress that an absolute scarcity of sugar now exists in some sections of the country. All this will be remedied, no doubt, in a week or two, by which time conditions may be changed by the nearer approach of new crop sugars, and a new basis for quotations be made. The hand-to-mouth basis is now in full force and will continue until we come into the new sugar campaign in October. October prices in Europe for both raws and refined are considerably below the current quotations both there and here, and the markets must eventually become equalised.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There is the usual quiet seasonable trade doing in syrups at 2 to 2½c. Molasses continues dull at 30c. for barrels and 32c. for half barrels.

TEA.

No special feature to note, except it be that trade is probably rather quieter than a week ago. In the little that is doing Japans still occupy the largest share of attention. Prices are unchanged, and we quote as follows: Japans (1892-3)—Low grade and common, 15 to 18c.; medium, 18 to 20c.; fine, 20 to 25c.; new Japans, 30 to 32c. for medium and 30 to 35c. for fine. Blacks—Low grade Congous, 14½ to 16½c.; medium, 18 to 23c.; fine, 30 to 45c.; fancy, 60 to 70c.

Advices from London state that 44,733 packages of tea were offered in public auction during week ending Aug. 18. Of these 25,563 packages were Indian, 18,788 Ceylon, and 382 Java. Judging from present indications the supply of British grown tea for the present season is likely to be fully up to requirements, and may prove even somewhat in excess of them. But it is expected that when the financial situation in the United States is less strained there will be a more general transmission of orders from there and Canada whereby an outlet may be established towards the absorption of surplus stock. The market for Indian tea has shown a slightly weaker tendency for all but finest descriptions, with occasionally lower quotations for medium kinds. The market has been strong for good and fine kinds of Ceylon teas. Offerings comprise a varied selection, and included a fair proportion of fine flavored and high class teas, the general quality continuing to show some improvement, as is usually the case at this season of the year.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The demand locally for butter continues brisk, but in an export way there is nothing doing, and prices, according to the last cable, have gone off about 10s. Butter of all kinds is scarce and wanted, and prices are higher. Jobbers are paying as high as 18c. for good dairy packed tubs, pails and crocks, selected, and for this same class of butter they are getting from 18 to 21c. from the re-

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

Another week has passed and still nothing particularly new has developed in the canned goods trade, business still being generally dull. Tomatoes, peas and corn continue in light demand at 80 to 85c. A few small lots of early pack canned salmon have arrived on this market during the past week but the most of them were soon distributed, and there is still a scarcity of good red fish. The regular shipments are expected to arrive in about a week or ten days. As to price, $1.40 to $1.60 is the idea. In the meantime the trade is patiently waiting. Demand for lobster continues good for choice brands at $1.80 to $2.00 for talls, and $2.40 to $2.50 for for flats. Demand for meats is falling off, but there is no change in prices.

MARKETS—Continued

tail trade. For store-packed they are, as a rule, paying 15 to 16c. and selling at 16 to 18c. Bakers' butter is going at about 15 to 16c., and in some instances as high as 17c. has been obtained. Pound rolls sell at 20 to 22c. Creamery tubs are not in much demand and offerings are not large. Some carload lots were offered at 21c. Jobbers are as a rule paying 20 to 21c. outside and selling at 21 to 22½c. Pound prints are scarce and in good demand at 23 to 25c.

Cheese market continues quiet. Jobbers are getting 9¾ to 10c.; 9½c. is asked and 9¼c. bid at the factories.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Much about as before. Dealers would pay $1.25 to $1.30 for hand-picked, and they are selling at $1.40 to $1.50, while for a medium article they are getting $1.20 to $1.25.

DRIED APPLES—No features to note. No transactions are reported, but 4c. would be paid for job lots; 4½ to 5c. is the idea for retailers' lots.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Nominally 8½ to 9½c.

EGGS—Weak and lower; 10½ to 11c. are the ruling prices, but for good candled stock 11½c. is asked.

POULTRY—Quiet, at 40 to 50c. for chickens and 40 to 60c. for ducks.

POTATOES—Market quiet. Prices are much as before, jobbers paying $1.25 and selling at $1.50 per bbl.

HONEY—Demand light; new season's section, white, is selling at 15c., and extracted is nominally 5 to 8c.

HOPS—There is no change in the situation and prices rule as before, at 12 to 14c. for '92s. New hops are expected to be on the market in another month.

ONIONS—The market is pretty well cleaned out of Egyptian onions, but prices remain as before at $2 per sack. Spanish onions are due to arrive here this week.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

Receipts of dressed hogs are light and prices steady at $7.50 to $8. There is still a good trade being done in hog products and some mixed carlots are moving at 10¼c. for long clear and 10½c. for backs, sweet pickle. Prices remain unchanged.

BACON—Long clear, 10½ to 10¾c. Smoked backs 12 to 12½c., bellies, 13 to 13½c., rolls 10 to 10½c.

The fish market is beginning to pick up again. The outlook for supply is better and the demand has a more encouraging aspect. Prices unchanged. We quote: Fresh sea salmon, 16 to 18c.; skinned and boned codfish, 6½c.; Labrador herring, $3 per half barrel; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 11 to 12½c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; blue back herring, $2.00 per hundred; blue pickerel, 4 to 5c. a lb.; yellow ditto, 7 to 8c. a lb.; salmon trout and white fish, 7c.; eels, 6 to 8c. a lb.; prepared frogs 50c. per doz.; dressed sturgeon, 7 to 8c.

GREEN FRUIT.

Trade continues brisk in most lines. Peaches have not been in as good supply and prices are stiffer in consequence. Oranges are quiet and the demand for lemons might be better. Tomatoes are scarce and higher. The same applies to huckleberries. California fruit is quoted higher. We quote as follows: Oranges—Rhodi's, $4.50 to $5 for 160's and 200's; Sorrento's, $4.50 for 200's, $2.50 for ½ boxes; lemons, $3 to $5; bananas, $1.50; Lawton berries, 8 to 10c; peaches, 50 to 80c. per basket; tomatoes, 25 to 40c. per basket; huckleberries, $1; cucumbers, 20 to 30c. per basket; cabbage, $1.50 to $1.75 per bbl.; watermelons, 18 to 25c. California fruit—Peaches, $1.40 to $1.60; pears, $2.50 to $2.75; plums, $1.75 to $2.

SALT.

Trade is good in salt, especially for large quantities. Prices remain unchanged. Quotations in car lots are: Dairy, $1.25; brls., $1.00; sacks, 65c.; American rock, $10 per ton.

HIDES, SKINS, TALLOW, WOOL.

HIDES—Remain much the same, although a change will likely be made to-day. Dealers are paying 4c. for No. 1 local hides and 3c. for No. 2.

SKINS—Are improving and the outlook is brighter. Lambskins and pelts are running at 50c., showing an increase of 5c. on lamb-skins and 20c. on pelts. Calfskins are also looking brighter, although prices are unchanged, at 6c. for No. 1 and 5c. for No. 2.

TALLOW—There is not much change; buyers are paying 4¾ to 5c. and 5½c. for select quality.

WOOL—The market seems to be on the downward tendency and little or nothing doing in fleece. We heard of one instance where a blanket mill paid as high as 18c. for selected combing, but these sales are few and far between, the regular price being 17c., and 18 to 19c. for clothing wool.

PETROLEUM.

The Petrolea Advertiser, in its weekly report, says: There is practically no official price for oil these days, nor will there be until producers come to their senses and place their crude on a legitimate market. As near as we can get at it crude is worth $1.07 per bbl. Refined may be quoted at 10 cents f. o. b. here in car lots.

Trade continues good on the Toronto market, and there is no change in prices. We quote: 5 to 10 bbl. lots, imperial gallons, Toronto; Canadian, 12½ to 13c.; carbon safety, 16½ to 17c.; Canadian water white, 17c.; American water white, 18½ to 19c.; photogene, 22c.

MARKET NOTES.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. are offering a line of Japan Pekoe at 15c.

Clemes Bros. are offering new season's honey, in comb, at 15c.

A revised price list has been issued by the Empire Tobacco Company.

Eby, Blain & Co. are in receipt of a shipment of new season's mackerel.

Edward Adams & Co. find the sale of Brooks' Crystal Soap increasing.

Sloan & Crowther are in receipt of invoice of shipment of fresh herrings in flat tins.

Smith & Keighley are offering new Valencia raisins for immediate delivery.

Davidson & Hay have just received a shipment of new Albert sardines, ¼s and ½s.

Sloan & Crowther have just received a sample of fine Japan tea, ex Empress of India.

Edward Adams & Co. have arriving Munn's "Skinned and Boned Cod" in cases.

Warren Bros. & Boomer are offering "Swan" brand of salmon at reasonable prices.

Small shipments of canned salmon, "Horseshoe" brand, are being received by most houses this week.

John Richardson, formerly manager for Moorewood & Co., Welland, has started in business in that town for himself.

Lucas, Steele & Bristol have been advised of a shipment of Ah-ne-kay-not salmon. It should be in store in about a week.

A low cable quotation on Pantelleria raisins was received this week by P. L. Mason & Co. Large quantities of this raisin were consumed on this market some years ago. It is largely on stalk, and is considered the finest flavored cooking raisin on the market. The fruit is shipped in barrels, and to this fact is its loss of popularity on this market attributed.

Warren Bros. & Boomer are showing fine value in Congou teas, new season's importation, in 5 lb. packages, at low prices.

Edward Adams & Co. of London, have just received a consignment of this season's Pingsuey, Young Hysons and Gun Powders.

The early shipment of C. Morand & Co.'s Valencia raisins arrived on the Toronto market Monday. This was the first brand to arrive.

Hogg Bros., of Oakwood, have sold out their branch business at Sonya to R. McDonald. W. T. Booz has been retained as manager.

J. Wenger, of Ayton, finds orders for pound prints of butter coming in so fast that, it is said, he will have none to put up for winter storage.

Roderick McKenzie, of Kirkfield, has sold out his general store to A. C. McKenzie, of the same place, who proposes turning it into a dry goods store.

As Watt & Scott anticipated, their shipment of Valencia raisins left Liverpool Aug. 28 by the S.S. Muskoka, which has been put on in place of the Sarnia.

Advices received from Amsterdam by F. Dane, under date of Aug. 5, state that the new crop of mustard seed will be on the market in about four weeks.

Superba currants, in half cases, are still on sale by Lucas, Steele & Bristol. The firm has handled these goods for last six months with great satisfaction to its buyers.

E. J. Vincent has given up his general store at South River and is opening a clothing, men's furnishing and boot and shoe stock in a new building in Parry Sound.

The Newfoundland herrings now being sent out by Lucas, Steele & Bristol turn out particularly fine. They can be retailed, leaving a good profit, at 25 cents a dozen.

The firm of W. H. Gillard & Co., of Hamilton, have no small amount of faith in advertising as a means of increasing business, and

MONTREAL.

The flour market does not show any special change. Old ground stock is easier, holders who want to clear out offering at lower prices, but for future contracts millers agents here ask 25c. above current quotations. Hard wheat flours are firmly held and some enquiry is noted for export, but bids are to low to permit of business. We quote as follows:—Winter wheat, $3.90 to $4.10; Manitoba patents, best brands, $3.80 to $3.90; straight rollers, $3.15 to $3.25; extra, $2.90 to $3.05; superfine, $2.60 to $2.90; Manitoba strong bakers', $3.60 to $3.65; Manitoba strong bakers', best brand, $3.60 to $3.70.

The supply of oatmeal is small; but the demand is slow and the market is unchanged. Standard bags, $2.10 to $2.15; do. brls., $2.30 to $2.35; granulated, bags, $2.15; do., brls., $2.35; rolled oats, bags, $2.20; do., brls., $2.40.

are not at all backward in putting their ideas into practice, as evinced by them in THE GROCER every week. In the next issue will appear a beautiful lithographed cut, bringing before the public the good qualities of Gillard's new pickle and Gillard's new sauce, which cannot fail to be of interest to the retail merchant who wishes to post himself on specialties that are sure to please the consumer.

W. H. Gillard & Co. report the arrival of some exceptionally fine prunes in 55 lb. cases; also some Newfoundland herrings, bright, plump fish. Both these lines they offer to the trade at low figures.

From various points in New York State it was advised that the corn crop had been cut down 25 to 50 per cent. by the drouth, and that canning operations will necessarily fall considerably short of early expectations.

Caverhill, Hughes & Co., George Childs & Co., and Lightbound, Ralston & Co., all of Montreal, have been added to the list of those handling Pettijohn's breakfast food. They have all just received large shipments.

The little uncertainty regarding Association prices for new red Alaska salmon is about cleared up. In any event says N. Y. Journal of Commerce, sales at $1.00 per dozen, early shipments, have been confirmed.

Lucas, Steele & Bristol expect their Arquimbau fine off-stalk Valencias, new goods, in a few days. They are coming via New York. Quality finer, of course, than off-stalk. This brand pleased their customers last season.

The present net price of granulated sugar is 5.18c.; centrifugals cost 3½c. for 96; muscovado, 3c. for 89, and molasses sugar, 2¾c. for 89 test. This makes a very liberal margin and it looks as though refined should decline or raws advance.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

Clemes Bros. received a carload of new Spanish onions this week. This is the first shipment this year. New York advices state that Spanish onions are scarce and higher, and that the domestic crop will be one-third less than last year and not half as much as in 1891.

Another new soap is being placed on the market. It is named the "Best," and is manufactured by John Taylor & Co. of the Morse Soap Works. The manufacturers boast of its purity, and consequently of its safety as a cleanser, and, as an evidence of this, point to its transparency and clearness at the edge. It is certainly a nice-looking soap. Aaron Child, who represents the manufacturers in the west, is making a specialty of the "Best."

Ansley, Sons & Co. who have been carryon a book and stationery business in Parry Sound, have come to the conclusion that there is more money in groceries than books. The latter business will be closed out, and the store will be restocked with groceries and carried on by Mr. Ansley's sons. It is the only book store in the place though several other houses carry stationery.

F. Dowell, who has an extensive baking and confectionery business in Parry Sound, gave up general groceries some time ago finding that fruit and canned goods were more profitable. He has done very well in the latter business this year. Mr. Dowell has been a subscriber to THE GROCER for six years and says he gets ideas an information from every issue that are valuable to him.

The quantity of Japan tea exported last year was 29.301,969 lbs., or 1,342,427 lbs. under that of 1891. Notable features in the year's trade were a falling off in the shipments to Canada and an increase in those to New York and Chicago. The destinations of the export were as follows: United States, 21,562,993 lbs.; Canada, 6,734,356 lbs,; Europe, etc., 938,284 lbs.

The Delaware peninsula peaoh crop, to all accounts, was seriously injured by Wednesday's storm. It is claimed that fruit was knocked off from the trees to a great extent, and that the "windfalls" left little stock that either green fruit shippers, driers or canners can handle to any advantage. Baltimore canners in view of the conditions refuse to take further orders for future delivery, except at higher prices and in a limited way only.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, Aug. 31, 1893.

GROCERIES.

There is nothing striking in the situation this week, except that contrary to the general expectation the refiners have again marked down the price of granulated ⅛c. per lb. This is a decided surprise to a good many for last week they were talking about the market going higher and now on the head of it in fact within a few days their price is marked down. They allege that they themselves were as much surprised as any one, and that the present decline is due to the drop in raws, but this is not generally credited. It is more likely that the refiners are desirous of inducing business and have marked down the price in the hope that trade will be stimulated thereby. In fact trade is dull in most lines just at present, but it is hoped that the reflux of people from the seaside will brighten up retail trade and so react in wholesale circles. Tea has not shown much more activity than sugar, but some round lots have left first hands. Molasses are steady, coffees and spices are quiet and there is nothing doing on spot in dried fruit, but some business has been transacted for forward delivery.

SUGAR.

The market for refined sugar is quiet, and the fact no doubt explains the decline which transpired in granulated on Tuesday. The refiners declare that it is due to the drop in raws, but it was probably induced quite as much by their desire to stimulate trade. The movement has not picked up much since the decline, but a fair business has been done on the whole at the 5¼c. price, and also at the 5⅜c., which ruled up to Tuesday morning. Yellows remain unchanged, having been placed at 4¼c. for dark grades and 4⅞ to 5c. for bright goods.

MOLASSES.

There is the same feeling referred to some time ago in regard to molasses—viz., that it is not going to be plentiful this fall and winter. To the trade in a jobbing way Barbadoes sells at 33 to 34c., while round lots have changed hands at 30 to 31c.

SYRUPS.

Business in syrups has been of a quiet sort, sales of Canadian occurring at 1⅝ to 2c. per lb. in the wood, while American is steady also at 18 to 21c. per gallon.

TEAS.

Japans are the only grades to show any business and this is mainly in the way of jobbers securing supplies in anticipation of future business. Sales of round lots have transpired on this account at 14½ to 17c. for medium to good grades. A round lot of old goods was cleared off the market in the vicinity of 12c., on which the seller is said to have lost almost 5 to 6c. per lb. In black tea low grades are said to be very scarce with prices firmer. Greens show no particular tendency to change. We quote Japans: common, 12 to 13c.; medium, 15 to 17c.; fine, 18 to 21c.; and finest, 23 to 32c.

COFFEE.

The coffee market continues to rule quiet with prices on the easy side, Maracaribo ranging from 19 to 21c. We quote Jamaica, 16 to 18c.; Maracaibo, 19 to 21c.; Rio, 17½ to 19c.; Java, 24 to 28c.; and Mocha, 25 to 28c.

SPICES.

Spices are quiet, black pepper being easy in tendency. We quote:—Jamaica ginger, 15 to 16c. for common and 18 to 20c. for fine; black pepper, 5½ to 6½c.; pimento, 6c.; nutmegs, 50 to 52½c. to $1.

RICE.

The rice market shows no change of importance.

DRIED FRUITS.

There is nothing doing on spot in dried fruit but a fair deal has been put through since our last for forward delivery laid down in Montreal on the basis of 5¼c., which is considered very moderate cost, and sales for delivery this week are reported at 6c., via New York, which is considered a very low figure, the opening price in former seasons being 8 to 9c. In currants the prospects seem to be for equally low prices, in fact, the lowest on record, but no definite laid down figures can be given as yet although it is said that offers of 11s. 6d. cost and freight Montreal have been made.

GREEN FRUIT.

The market for green fruit has been quite active, business especially in California and other seasonable fruit being very large on account of the daily auction sales. Oranges have shown a good demand at $3.75 to $4. Lemons are scarce and firm at $3.50 to $4 per box. Peaches have had a good enquiry at 75c. to $1.50 according to grade. Pears are in heavy supply, but prices keep up at $3 to $4 per keg. There is a large supply of grapes, which rule at 75c. to $1.50 per basket. Bananas are quiet at 90c. to $1.50. Pineapples rule at 12 to 17c. each, and melons at $1.25 to $2 per crate. Canadian plums sell at 60 to 65c. and California, $1.25 to $1.75.

BEANS.

The market is quiet and steady. We quote hand-picked, $1.40 to $1.50; ordinary, $1.25 to $1.30, and inferior, 95c. to $1.10 per bushel.

HONEY.

Honey is steady at 11 to 13½c. for new comb stock, white clover fetching the outside figure.

HOPS.

The market is quiet at 17 to 19c. as to quality, with brewers not doing much.

POTATOES.

The only business doing is in the way of small lots, which pass direct from farmer's hands at 90c. to $1 per brl.

EGGS.

The egg market is unchanged. Receipts are rather larger, but the demand is fair, and we quote 11½ to 12c.

CHEESE.

The cheese market does not show any new feature, holders are still above buyers' ideas, and the result is that the market is rather unsettled with prices more or less nominal. Finest townships, 9⅜ to 9½c.; finest Quebec colored, 9¼ to to 9⅜c.; do. white, 9 to 9¼c.; under grades, 8¾c.; Cable, white, 46s. 6d.; do. colored, 47s. 6d.

BUTTER.

There is only a small local movement in butter at quotations, export business ruling very dull. Creamery, 20 to 20½c.; townships, 18 to 19c.; western dairy, 16 to 17c.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

N. Quintal & Co. are among the largest holders of new canned salmon. They offer for immediate delivery leading brands at $1.30 as per their advertisement.

Tea brokers here were advised of the arrival of the S.S. Tacoma at Tacoma on the 24th with 78,000 lbs. of Japan teas for Canada.

A lot of 1,100 packages of old Japan stock was cleared out on this market last week at 12c. which stood to loose the seller all the way from 5 to 6c. per lb.

Liverpool cables report beet steady at 15s. for August and September and Java cane at 17s. 6d.

The first direct steamer with raisins and currants for this market will leave Patras about Sept. 1st. Lightbound, Ralston & Co. have large consignments on her. She will probably arrive in Montreal the first week in October.

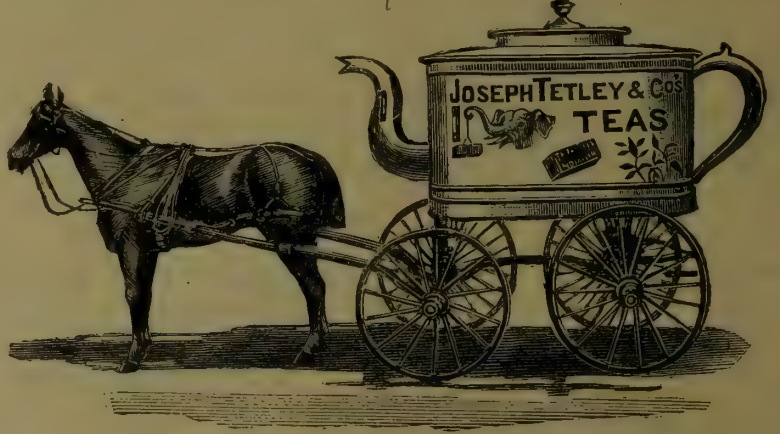
It is said that new dried currants will open lower in Montreal this fall than ever before in the history of the trade. This of course is pure conjecture, as no definite or reliable figures can be given.

The first arrivals of new Jamaica oranges were received last week, and sold freely at $5.25 to $5.50 per barrel.

The Canada Brush Company have decided to accept the offer of the Sandwich council, and will locate there.

ARRIVAL OF NEW VALENCIA'S.

The first shipment of new season's Valencia raisins arrived in Toronto Monday, but they were not passed through the customs till the next and following days. The old time rivalry among the trade as to which house would be the first to get a box in its warehouse is almost dead. There is now no sending to Montreal and getting a few boxes up by express or removing a box of the new and substituting one of the old before the shipment has passed the custom house. When a house now gets the first box it is more by chance than special effort. Last year Eby, Blain & Co. were the first to receive the new fruit, and this year the honor has again fallen to their lot, they having got their first box about four o'clock Tuesday afternoon. All the houses are now supplied.



The fruit is of good quality, and 7 1-2 to 8c. seems to be about the idea as to price.

A NOVELTY IN PEELS.

A novelty in candied peels is being placed on the market by the Pure Gold Manufacturing Co. It is one-pound boxes of assorted lemon, orange, and citron peels, something never before attempted. Tastes in one part of the country differ from those in another, and in order to comply with this the proportions will not be all the same, those being made up for one province having more of lemon, while for another there will be more of citron, and so on. The fruit is fine selected. The novelty is likely to take well with the trade, as, in addition to the quality of the peels, the box is handsomely lithographed, and will make an attractive package in the store.

A NOVEL WAGON.

The accompanying engraving gives a good idea of a new delivery wagon which is creating quite a stir among Montreal grocers. As the "passer-by can clearly see," it is the ambulant advertisement of this well-known tea, and suggests to the beholder a vision of one of the best teas that he can drink. It should prove a good "ad." for its wide-awake proprietors, and will doubtless be kept well filled with orders by Mr. Brown, the energetic agent in Canada.

PERSONAL MENTION.

M. R. P. Montgomery, of Eby, Blain & Co.'s, is spending his holidays at Lachine.

J. A. Blain, of Gilford, was in Toronto Saturday en route for the World's Fair.

A. Michie, who was formerly in business at Harriston, is again starting into business there.

Edward Valpy, of New York, representing Huntley & Palmer, the English biscuit manufacturers, was in Toronto last week.

F. A. Dalton, of Drummondville, who has been away from business owing to sickness in his family, is again behind his counter.

J. A. Rothwell, of Walkerton, who has been sojourning at Southampton for his health, has returned to business much benefitted.

F. J. Gillespie, of Uptergrove, general merchant, and deputy-reeve of the township, has just returned from a business trip to Buffalo.

While J. Ross, with Sloan & Crowther, was in the Orillia House, Orillia, the other day, somebody appropriated one of his valises. He says that if it is returned all will be forgiven.

George Homer, of Homer & Co., Gravenhurst, reports a big season's business on the upper lakes. He has a special boat with which he makes regular trips among the campers.

Walter Anderson, who was formerly manager of the Woodside Sugar Refinery in Halifax, has been appointed representative at Toronto of the Acadia Sugar Refining Co. He was here this week selecting his offices.

MONTREAL

DRY GOODS.

MONTREAL MARKET.

Trade has been very quiet in dry goods in wholesale circles during the week, nor is there much improvement expected until the close of the week. The millinery excursions commenced Tuesday, and taken in conjunction with the exhibition it is hoped that a decided improvement will result next week. Cottons are firm all round with demand fair and stocks light. Remittances during the past two weeks have been fair.

The city retail trade has been rather dull owing to the absence of a large number of customers in the country. They are commencing to return already however, and of course will want something on fall account and the shopkeepers expect to benefit accordingly.

Mr. Sumner, of Messrs. Hodgson, Sumner & Co., will very likely go abroad on his usual business trip during the first week of September.

J. G. Mackenzie & Co. note a good fair demand for cottons, and state that their travelers are finding stocks much lighter than usual in several localities.

Mr. A. F. Gault, the senior member of the firm of Messrs. Gault Bros., Mrs. Gault and Master Gault have returned from a lengthened tour in Great Britain and the Continent.

Caverhill & Kissock were at work day and night last week getting ready for Tuesday, the first day of the millinery opening. When everything is ready it will be a very fastidious customer that does not find something to suit his or her fancy.

TORONTO MARKET.

Taking everything into consideration the past ten days has been productive of only a mormal trade. The holiday on the first day of this week seems to have prevented Tuesday being an extra good day, and the cold stormy weather accentuated the slowness. Wednesday showed considerable improvement as buyers were more numerous in the dry goods establishments, and the week's trade will no doubt be average.

From a millinery point of view the week has been a successful one. Tuesday morning opened up with a host of milliners on hand, and as everybody was not given wholly to "seeing," many good orders were placed. The trade continues with excellent prospects.

Mr. Caldecott has been quite ill for a few days but is slowly recovering.

John Macdonald & Co. have shown this week a job line of plush in all the leading colors.

Mr. Donald MacKay has returned from Great Britain after a stay of several months.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have just issued their "Annual Exhibition Sale" circular, which they claim surpasses all former efforts, both in design and the bargains it enumerates. Every merchant should give it a careful perusal and make up his list of "wants" without delay.

John Macdouald & Co. have a line of quilted Italian cloth in black and brown which are much sought after.

Alexander & Anderson are showing a splendid range of mantle cloths and tweed ulsterings. The popular makes are cheviots, diagonals and rough effects.

W. R. Brock & Co.'s stock of honeycombs and fancy knit shawls was never so attractive and large as at present, comprising extraordinary value at the popular retail prices, 50, 75, and $1.00.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence have had some delay in their shipments of cashmere gloves, but their first shipment is now to hand, and balance will be to hand by the first of the month.

John Macdonald & Co. have a nice exhibit of silk for visiting buyers. These are shown in plains and fancies for trimming and millinery purposes, and also black and colored dress silks.

The white cotton handkerchiefs shown by Gordon, Mackay & Co., as "Shamrock Bleach" (a brand by the way which is reserved to themselves), are unsurpassed in finish and value, a statement endorsed by their many customers.

Alexander & Anderson are showing full lines in black and colored dress silks. Black, colored and fancy velvets are very popular as a trimming, and their range will be found to embrace everything requisite in this line.

Mr. O'Hara woolen buyer for Gordon MacKay & Co. has returned from foreign markets, as has Mr. Auld of W. R. Brock & Co's woolen department. Two of John Macdonald & Co's buyers left for Europe last week.

Alexander & Anderson have an extensive range in domestic and imported underwear, which they are offering at close prices, and the values will be found A 1 They also show a large range of hosiery and gloves, for which they are finding an extensive sale.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have, since compiling their list of "Bargains" for their "Exhibition" circular, opened up a line of shirts and drawers which they offer at $4.50, the mill price. This lot should be bought up rapidly, as the price is popular and the value A1.

The demand for W. R. Brock & Co's. leading line of ladies' ribbed vests for fall, has been much larger than they anticipated. In order to secure this line, to be retailed at 25 cents—the popular price—they had to place an immense order, which they felt sure would cover the whole season's requirements, and it is with great satisfaction that they report having already placed large repeat orders for this taking line of goods. Their lines of ladies' vests to retail at 50 and 75 cents are also special value, being buttoned fronts, with pearl buttons and ribbon trimmings, and in full sizes.

John Macdonald & Co. have a number of lines in white lace curtains, mats and rugs which are below regular price, and are seasonable goods. These are stock lots cleared from foreign manufacturers and cannot be duplicated. Tapestries and Brussels are now in full range for the fall trade. Last season's patterns are being cleared at 25 per cent. below regular prices.

W. R. Brock & Co. have in stock a very large range of mantle buttons in the various sizes and colorings to match all the leading shades of this season's mantle cloths in pearl, pearletta, buffalo horn, vegetable ivory, metal, and composition, also mohair and crochet barrel buttons, cords, frogs, etc.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence have a shipment of shot silks which were bought by Mr. Burton who left for the European market a short time ago. They were sent on at once and are now on exhibit. The colors embrace the newest and most fashionable shades, and prices are if anything lower than last year. Black silks are also to hand and prices are no higher than those of a year ago.

John Macdonald & Co. are making a pretty display of overcoats and mantle linings for visitors. The leading things are checks in camel hair and worsted effects. Curls and astrachans for mantlings and trimmings are in full stock. They have some short ends in good sealettes which they are offering at bargain prices ; also a couple of job lines in medium grades. They have a large stock of this latter specialty.

"All that glitters is not gold." The grocer who does a rushing business is not always one who makes money. If he has not system, if he is not careful and ever on the alert to stop the leakages, and there are many, he may be losing money very fast. It has been said that a man who can manage the retail grocery business successfully, is fit for most any position in life. This is true to a great degree. Few trades need more careful attention. There are many details which need watching and judicious handling in order to steer clear of failure.

Belleville cheese market has closed for the season.

The grape crop in Essex county this season will be the largest in years.

It is estimated that already this season $10,000 worth of fruit has been shipped from Leamington.

The largest salmon ever caught in the Fraser river, B. C., was captured recently and weighed 84½ lbs.

Extensive fish shipments are now being made from the Pacific coast to Australia by the new steamship line.

Tne banana is the most productive of the fruits of the earth, being 44 times more productive than potatoes, and 130 times more productive than wheat.

The Nova Scotia sugar refinery property, on Union, Young and Victoria streets, Halifax, and the Halifax refinery property at Woodside have been transferred to the Sugar Acadia Refinery Co.

Fruits of all kinds is a poor crop in this vicinity and those having any to sell will no doubt receive a good price. The plum crop is only about one-third the average yield of the past few years.—Thornbury Herald.

The Wilson Silver Bill, which provides for the repeal of the Sherman Act, passed the House Monday by 241 to 109. The Bill has yet to receive the endorsation of the Senate, and there it is where the biggest fight will be.

The Dominion Government has made a ten years' contract with the Canadian-Australian Steamship Company. Three boats in all are to be put on the line. The Canadian Pacific are to act as the company's agents in Canada.

Every grocer who ows a horse should have a blanket to cover him with it. It is humane as well as profitable to be careful of your horse by blanketing him during cold weather or when he is overheated by work, etc. Your horse blanket, however, is not just the article to cover your berries and fruit with. Horse blankets have a disagreeable odor which will not enhance the sale of goods covered by them. We have frequently noticed such blankets spread over fruit and vegetables displayed by retail grocers. It should not be done. There are many people who are very sensitive about such matters, and who would give a grocer guilty of such practices a wide berth.—Grocers' Advocate.

In Toronto recently the trumpeter of the newly arrived Canadian Hussar corps blew his trumpet on the Post office steps, and the public were warned that the commanding officer would not be responsible for debts contracted by the men. The military are great sticklers for old fashions. The civilian who wants to attract attention to his announcements now-a-days gets the newspapers to blow his business trumpet.—Gazette Montreal.

According to Hart & Tuckwell's circular the total import of American apples into Great Britain last year was 1,203,538 barrels. Of this quantity 429,243 barrels were shipped from Montreal, 116,525 from Halifax, and the remainder from New York, Boston and Portland. Of the Canadian apples shipped from United States ports 47,680 barrels went from New York, 142,047 from Portland, and 60,000 from Boston.

Russell B. Harrison, son of ex-President Harrison, and a number of his friends have, according to a contemporary, just finished an unsuccessful attempt to corner the tea market. They some time since formed a company, known as the Ceylon Tea Company, and attempted to corner the tea trade of this country for the benefit of the island of Ceylon. The attempt has proven a total failure and the affairs of the company are now in the hands of the court for adjustment.

Reporter (excitedly)—Is it true, sir, that you fell from a fifth-story window of this hotel to-day?" Stranger—"Such is the fact, young man. "And you were not injured?" "Well, you can judge for yourself; I am walking yet." "How do you account for your marvelous escape from death?" "Now, look here, I don't care for the newspaper notoriety in this matter, but I don't mind telling you confidentially that I happened to have in my pocket at the time a biscuit made with Puffem,s Geyser Baking Powder. —Detroit Tribune.

The members of the Boston Board of Health made a novel and at the same time commendable regulation at one of their last meetings- It reads: "No person shall store or keep or allow to be stored or kept, in any building of which he is the owner or occupant, and which is in use in whole or in part as a dwelling house, any fruit for merchandise, except in accordance with a written permit from the Board of Health. This action, the N. E. grocer explains, was taken with a view to prevent the spreading of disease through the medium of such fruit as bananas, etc. It is not uncommon in certain districts to see bunches of bananas ripening in a room where several persons retire to rest. Under such conditions the germs of a contagious disease might easily be conveyed to persons who subsequently handle the fruit.

A meeting of retail grocers of Lynchburg, (Va.) was held recently to consider the best method of breaking up the practice of retail dealers peddling butter, eggs, chickens and vegetables on the streets. A committee of five was appointed to call upon the entire retail trade of the city with the view of perfecting a permanent organization and to employ an attorny to go before the council and secure, if possible, some relief from the peddlers who compete with legitimate dealers, but have no license.

"I don't suppose you are one of those people that put sand in their sugar?" said the jocose man to the grocer.

The grocer smiled faintly and sadly as he answered:

"That's another of the popular falacies. People always talk about putting sand in sugar. If sugar gets any cheaper'n it is now, I expect to see builders buyin' it to adulterate their sand with.—Washington Star.

CONCENTRATED ESSENCE OF LEMON.

An English manufacturing chemist, according to a contemporary, in April last year, established a distillery at Messina for the extraction of the essence of lemon in a more concentrated form than has hitherto been practiced there. The essence thus produced, and which, up to the date of his arrival, had only been manufactured in Austria-Hungary, possesses from twenty to thirty times the strength of the ordinary preparation. "Thus," as British Vice-Consul Pignatorre points out, "the superiority is so remarkable over that prepared according to the prevailing method that it could be sold at a tenfold price and yet leave the purchaser an enormous profit. Moreover, experiments are being tried by the same gentleman for the extraction of lemon essence by a still more efficacious process from that at present in operation. The actual method involves a loss of about 20 per cent., of twelve hours' labor in boiling for the production of one pound, and finally an escape of about 10 per cent. of the acid principle, from the fact of the boiling being performed over an open fire. These inconveniences it is proposed to remedy or lessen, and should the new system be successful it would have the advantage of avoiding the double waste of the essence and acidity. The extraction of essence of lemon being one of the chief resources of the island, the importance of these improvements achieved or rendered more perfect, must be evident."

SIMPLICITY IN WINDOW DRESSING.

Simplicity is one of the characteristics of the present vogue in window dressing, writes Harry Harman, the well known expert in such matters. This is due perhaps to the fact that in the study of color effects the necessity for or even the possibility of elaborate designs is reduced to the minimum. Windows with simple arrangements are very satisfactory, and no more advantageous way of showing goods has been observed. It is astonishing how well a window may be made to look with the simple arrangement of a few articles; a crowded window usually detracts as much as it attracts. It has an effect upon the holder like that of a small room whose walls are littered with bric-a-brac. No matter how valuable paintings may be they suffer a certain inevitable loss when crowded together in a small space. So in the display of valuable materials overcrowding is fatal to the best effect. Some of the most effective displays of city windows are remarkable for a studied negligence, a negligence so artfully planned that it almost makes that perfection of artistic methods—art concealing art. After all the most permanent attractions are those which are simple rather than complex. Simplicity carries us back to nature. Not all the skill of technique exhbiited in a painting can charm us like the touch of nature that appeals to our humanity. It is really true that there is great room for artistic study in window dressing, and the successful results in the long run will be won by those who study simplicity. A change is a good thing; a startling change is sometimes advisable. A window cannot be too neat, but it may be neat to primness. While, therefore, I argue for simplicity in general, I insist upon variety as a necessity. If you cannot think up a new thing, whiten the window front for a day or two and take a rest. The end of window dressing is not simply to make a good display but to advertise the place of business, and if that end is gained by an empty window it is just as satisfactory as to gain it by the most tasteful display. All window dressing is a means to an end.

To stop short at the perfect window is to stop with the means, and fail entirely of the great purpose of the window—more trade. It would be a wise thing in the merchant to encourage the successful window dresser by some little gift. Nothing stimulates like approbation, and approbation especially which takes on a tangible form. I call to mind an instance where a clerk had displayed great taste in dressing a window with the goods of a particular firm; to be specific, the window was filled with wax candles of all colors. The agent for the firm who manufactured the goods, happening along at the time, made the young man a present of five dollars, in recognition of the value of the advertisement of their goods offered in the window display. Such an encouragement went far to stimulate the successful man to active endeavor in other directions, and the example of the donor is one well worthy to be followed by others.

HOW A TRADE PAPER HELPS.

A successful manufacturer, says an exchange, when asked why he patronized trade papers so largely to the neglect of other methods of advertising, replied: "Men who do not read their trade papers and keep posted in their business are usually poor customers. If I sell them a good lot of machinery they do not know how to use it and report it a failure, or, we have to run after them, lose time and money to get them a-going, and make the sale stick. But those who read and are posted know how and succeed. Such men would not read circulars if I were to mail circulars to them. They see my 'ad.' regularly in the trade paper and know I have an established business, and when they want anything in my line write me, and don't whine about price or what time they can get from others, buy, try, and have no trouble, and pay the bill. Give me such a class of customers as I get by such judicious advertising all the time." His experience is that of successful merchants. The trade paper keeps its readers in touch with the times; with the currents of trade and commerce, it puts money in his purse in many ways. It is a preventive against sloth and rust. It helps develop the best side of a man's commercial life.

TREATMENT OF CUSTOMERS.

One of the most valuable assets of the ambitious and enterprising business man is the ability to maintain a pleasant manner in waiting upon customers, and to bear with their whims and eccentricities without showing the slightest irritation. Courtesy in business is not sufficiently appreciated by retail merchants, notwithstanding the gallons of ink that have been shed by trade editors in pointing out its importance. Perhaps if retailers would make it a practice to visit other stores, in localities where they are unknown, they would more readily perceive the truth of the above statement. We do not mean to infer that the average merchant is not sufficiently alive to his own interests to treat customers pleasantly upon all occasions, but that proper care is not always exercised in order to insure a courteous reception of customers by the clerks. Who can estimate the annual loss of trade to merchants that is directly caused by insolence or surliness of store assistants? Yet the increase of competition in retail trades makes it more and more necessary every year that all available means should be employed to draw and hold custom, and politeness to patrons becomes more and more essential to success. Courtesy, such as every customer has a right to expect from merchants with whom he spends his money, is within the power of every dealer to exhibit. Indeed, the small merchant with a single clerk, over whom it is more easy to keep a constant, careful supervision than the army of assistants in the biggest stores, has in this respect the advantage, and can make courtesy a most powerful weapon as against his biggest rivals.

Some retailers, and jobbers as well, make a considerable difference in the treatment of well-dressed and poorly-clad patrons. This is a very common trait of human nature. The well-dressed man, even if he hasn't a dollar in his pockets, can depend upon receiving greater consideration in places of business and public resorts, than can the shabby fellow with ample means. Often, of course, the most prosperous individual's trade is far better worth cultivating, but not always, nor is his money always as readily collected as that of the man whose appearance prevents him from obtaining credit. Many dealers overlook these points, and injure their business prospects by discriminating against people whose trade is really valuable. A daily newspaper relates the following incident:

The old man had given his son a very fair education, and after graduating he took him into his store. The young fellow was over nice about a great many things, but the father made no comment. One day an order came in from a customer.

"I wish to goodness," exclaimed the son, "that Jones would learn to spell."

"What's the matter with it?" inquired the father cheerfully.

"Why, he spells coffee with a K."

"No, does he? I never noticed it."

"Of course you never did," said the son pettishly. "You never notice anything like that."

"Perhaps not, my son," replied the old man gently, "but there is one thing I do notice, which you will learn by and by, and that is that Jones pays cash."

The father was right. Jones might spell as badly as he please, yet the fact that he was a cash customer outweighed all deficiencies of education. Similarly, if his apparel had been shabby and his appearance against him his ability and readiness to pay cash, like charity, covered a multitude of sins, and would have rehabilitated him in the eyes of a prudent, sagacious merchant.—Merchants' Review.

The season now drawing to a close cannot be said to have been a favorable one for jobbers in lemons. In fact for a good many it has been absolutely bad. When the season opened prospects on this market were bright. Good fruit was not plentiful, prices had an upward tendency and advices generally indicated a bullish market. Most of the Toronto jobbers caught the spirit of the market, and began to sow freely in the hope of reaping bountifully. But their anticipations were doomed to disappointment. For weeks the market has been a falling one; and now, instead of being in pocket the jobbers are actually out of pocket. One or two houses have been heavy losers. Much the same condition of affairs prevails in the United States, but there the cause is attributed to what is influencing trade generally in that country—financial depression. The easiness in the Canadian market is no doubt the result to some extent of sympathy with that on the other side; but business in lemons here has not been as good as expected. Hence there have been adverse influences from within as well as from without. The N. Y. Journal of Commerce, referring to the lemon situation in the States, says that a considerable portion of the fruit which has arrived there this season has been received in poor condition, necessitating considerable labor and expense in the repacking and repairing for interior shipment. The statistical position however it considers favorable, and furthermore, "that should any improvement in the demand develop higher prices without much doubt could be established."

The decision of the Dominion Government to prohibit the importation of dried fruits from Smyrna, while it will undoubtedly cause some inconvenience to the trade, is not likely to seriously do so. Prices will be higher. That is a foregone conclusion. Already in fact some advances have been made. The fruits we principally get from Smyrna are Sultana raisins and figs. As far as the former are concerned the trade does not seem to have much anxiety. Stocks are fairly good, and as the Sultana keeps better than any other raisin it is expected that there will be enough to meet the demand till after the cholera epidemic has passed. With figs however the case is different. For some time this market has been absolutely bare of them, and from present indications it looks as if figs will be marked by their absence this season. For the step the Canadian Government has taken it had a precedent in the United States Government, it having previously ordered its ports to be shut against Smyrna dried fruits. The reason assigned for the taking of this extreme step is that the fruit cannot be effectively disinfected. In view of the decision of the Government, the wholesale grocers in Toronto have cabled to Smyrna cancelling all orders, and a deputation will visit Ottawa to ascertain if cargoes already on the way will be allowed entry.

Financial panics are not infrequently more pronounced than the actual conditions warrant. And while this is undoubtedly the case in the United States, the fact cannot be denied that there has been much to create alarm. There are many evidences of this. The world at large has for some years been passing under a cloud of depression; and the United States has been more or less affected by it. But the great cause of the trouble there is traceable to unwise legislation. Politicians of all stripes concede this. Look at whatever branch of trade you may and in it can be seen reflected the ominous cloud. But none answer this purpose better than the clearing houses. By referring to the returns of the New York clearing house, which is the most important in the States, it is seen that there has been decreases in some instances of something like one-third in the volume of business. The year opened out fairly well for the railroads, for the first four or five months the comparisons being favorable to this year's returns. But in July the tide began to flow against them, the earnings in that month exhibiting a decrease of over 4 per cent. Into the following month the adverse conditions followed, until by the third week in August the percentage of the decrease was over fourfold larger than in July. Even the exports from the port of New York, in spite of largely increased shipments of wheat, showed a decline of 6 per cent. for the first three weeks in August. Then it is scarcely necessary to more than mention the condition of the manufacturing industries of the country. This is already well-known, the closing down of this and that industry being daily chronicled in the press, until within the last few months over a million men have been thrown out of employment.

Hard as has been the depression in the manufacturing industries, they have scarcely felt it so severely as the banks. The unprecedented large number of failures is proof enough of this, but it is also reflected in the currency, which is so scarce that not enough of it can be got to transact the ordinary business of the country. To such a pass have things arrived that the people have lost faith in even the banks and they are withdrawing their deposits wholesale. From May 4 to July 12 alone, the amount on deposit decreased by $193,000,000, and this must have been enormously increased since. Confidence, however, seems to be gradually being restored, mainly because of the anticipated repeal of the silver purchase clause of the Act of 1890,and hoarded money and money locked up in defunct banks is gradually finding its way back into circulation, and hope is now expressed that there will yet be enough of the "needful" to move the crops.

We cover the ground from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and have double the circulation of any other journal in Canada.

So far, the only appreciable effect the depression in the United States has had upon Canada is in the matter of exchange. In this respect our merchants have experienced more or less annoyance. For goods imported from the States, which hitherto it has been the habit to pay for per draft, it is now necessary to send U. S. currency. "For God's sake, don't send checks or drafts. We will never get the cash," is in effect the cry of all U. S. creditors of Canadian houses. This means not only more trouble, but more expense as well. And every straw upon the already well-burdened back of the trade of the country tells. Some Toronto houses are resorting to the practice of remitting money to creditors in the States through the express companies. They deposit Canadian currency and the express companies deliver American. This method has been found both cheaper and less troublesome.

In the United States the circulation per head is over $23. In Canada it is something like $10. In view of this it seems strange that currency should be scarce in the former country and ample in the other. But the reason is not far to seek. In the United States the circulation is based upon an unsound principle; in Canada on a sound one. In the United States the banking system is wanting in elasticity; in Canada it is sufficently elastic to expand to all the requirements of trade. Congress is engaged in the task of trying to remedy one defect and an agitation is on foot to cure the other.

OUR FALL NUMBER.

Few have an idea of the work that is entailed in getting out an ordinary issue of a paper like THE GROCER, and still less regarding a special number like that which is to appear the first week in October. Aside altogether from the thought and time given to the business and literary details an immence amount of labor is demanded. First of all there is the many days' work in the composing room. Then in the press rooms no less than 158,000 impressions will be required; the cover alone will have 96,000 impressions. The weight of the paper will be 7,500 pounds, which, if laid out, would stretch a distance of four miles and a quarter.

MONTREAL CANNED SALMON PRICES.

The possible output of canned salmon on the Pacific Coast has been a subject of considerable uncertainty during the present summer, as THE GROCER has pointed out before, and with the various reports regarding variations in the pack, etc., it has been impossible for a buyer to forecast the future with any reasonable degree of certainty. Canned salmon opened up this spring on the coast around $1.12, but the canners soon dropped their prices to $1. When this level was reached, however, Montreal buyers thought the goods were a purchase, and canning agents at that centre booked heavy orders on that basis. Then come reports of a shortage in the pack on the northernern rivers and also in Washington territory with conflicting statements with regard to the pack on the Fraser River, first one way and then the other. After this prices commenced to advance again on the coast until they touched $1.05, and they now stand at that figure, the most recent quotations to Montreal buyers being on that basis.

It is now generally admitted that the pack on the Fraser River will be an average one. But it is held that in many cases, owing to the irregularity of the run, first coming with a rush and then falling off, that the output of the different canneries on that river vary very materially. In one case an establishment has a full pack, and in another not five miles from it the pack is much below the average. This fact, no doubt, may have an influence in the case of some purchases but certainly not in Montreal where all of the trade state that their wants both immediate and possible are pretty well provided for. They booked freely at the inside figures and they don't anticipate any difficulty about their deliveries in the case of the establishments from which the bulk of the Montreal purchases have been made. At present the time is a steady one, the fact of the shortage in the north and in Washington territory having an effect that way. The ruling range for standard brand is $1.35 in Montreal with others running from $1 27½ to $1.30. A bid of $1.00 on the coast for a line of 4,000 cases was refused on Saturday last by a Montreal agent.

DRIED CURRANT POSSIBILITIES.

Advices to importers of dried currants in Montreal show if anything an easier feeling than raisins, and the prospects at present are that prices will rule unusually low during the coming season as offers have been made of 12s. 6d. cost, and freight on prime provincials. Advices from Patros speak of showers of rain, but reliabie information to Montreal importers state that the crop will be scarcely damaged if hurt at all,and not sufficiently in any case to influence it as to quantity and quality. Calling was general on the 15th of August in the early districts, viz., Calamata, Filiatria, etc., and it is well advanced in all the remaining districts, and it is anticipated that by the 15th of the present month the entire crop will be secured and warehoused before the 15th of this month, while shipments of new crop were made on the 28th of August. The stock of old fruit remaining at Patros amounts to about 2000 tons, which however owing to its quality is said to be suitable only to the French markets.

DIRECT SHIPMENT OF VALENCIAS.

There is nothing definite known as yet as to what the probable aggregate quantity of direct shipments of Valencia raisins to Montreal will be. So far only two steamers are spoken of, and only one to a dead certainty. This is the Avlona, which is expected to sail from Denia on Saturday next, and is expected to bring a fair cargo. It is worthy of note, however, that cost and freight shipments have shown a steadily declining tendency, and now 13s. 6d. at Denia is quoted,and it is said that there is a disposition to book orders freely at that figure, as previous to this the feeling shown by buyers was a decidedly reluctant one.

HE'S AFTER THEM.

Mr. John Cameron, says the Truro Daily News, has just visited Truro among other Maritime province towns in the interests of the J. B. McLean Publishing Co., Toronto. This firm's trade journals—THE HARDWARE MERCHANT, CANADIAN GROCER, BOOKS AND NOTIONS, DRY GOODS REVIEW, and last, but not by any means least, THE PRINTER AND PUBLISHER, all have subscribers in Truro, and Mr. Cameron's visit this year has added others to the list. Referring to the last named journal, Mr. Cameron says that it is now more than an experiment, it is starting out on its second year as an established success, and is very highly spoken of by the craft. We added our testimony to its usefulness. Mr. Cameron has gone on to Cape Breton and eastern points, and will thence go the Halifax and the western counties.

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

Robert Marshall, of Perkins, Ince & Co., has returned from a two weeks' fishing trip to the northeast part of the province. Mr. Marshall is very modest about his prowess as a fisherman, but Fleming Hayes told me in confidence that among the many fish he landed was a 27 lb 6½ oz. 'longe and a 5½ lb. bass. As to the truthfulness or not of this I leave for Messrs. Marshall and Hayes to decide between them.

Talking of fishing reminds me that James Owen, of Sloan & Crowther's, has had a little experience this summer in this line. It was C. S. Parsons who told me about it first. But it is always well to substantiate what one traveler tells about another. It is different, of course, about the goods they sell. Whatever they say about them you can depend upon as being as true as gospel. And so I asked Mr. Owen himself, about it. "Yes, it is true," he said, and then he proceeded to rehearse to me his experience. "I have, as you know, been enjoying my holidays at Lorne Park. Well just west of there is a narrow stream running through a farm. In that stream swim some of the most delicious speckled trout you ever saw. I put in one day up there, and I caught eight and lost twelve. How came I to lose them? Why, man, dear, the stream was only two or three feet wide, while the bushes came down close, so a fellow couldn't play his fish. That's how it was. Why if it hadn't been for that I'd caught that twelve and more besides. Indeed I would," added Mr. Owen as he stuck his hands deep down into his pockets and walked leisurely away.

"Yes," said one of Davidson & Hay's travelers to me Saturday, "the depression in the United States is beginning to have its effect upon the border towns in the Dominion. You know they do so much business with the Americans, and it's no wonder."

"I had some experience with a canning firm recently that was not very nice," said a member of a well-known wholesale grocery firm. "Their agent here offered us some canned fruits. We made a bid for 100 cases, and we were subsequently informed by telegraph that it was accepted. Time went on and the goods did not arrive. We made enquiries and found that the goods had been sold in Montreal at a little better price than we had bought them at. In the meantime I had taken orders for about half the goods. And so I wrote the canners, demanding that the order be filled. Did I get any of the goods? Well, yes. They gathered up about 50 cases in Montreal and sent them on, but that was all I could get. They, however, had to pay for it, for after deducting what we were out by their non-fulfilment of contract, we just had $7 to remit them."

"The pea crop this year," replied W. Boulter, the well-known canner, to a query of mine, "is not half a crop. What it is like you may fancy when the pea houses are paying such big prices in order to get a supply. I know that we haven't packed 50 per cent. what we did last year; and there are others that haven't done much better, or as well. There's no doubt about the pea pack being short." BYSTANDER.

PHILANTHROPIST ARMOUR.

There is no greater evil to the trade of this country, both at home and abroad, than the running of corners. It has destroyed confidence in our markets, and the wide fluctations caused by the speculators in their endeavors to get the product below cost and shake out the tailers on the way up have driven all the conservative men with moderate capital out of the pork packing, hog shipping and grain business. Many, on account of their heavy investments, cannot draw out if they would, but it is safe to say that none of these relish the hourly changes in the value of their stocks on hand. In the earlier days, when there were no "corner" runners, they made good profits and had 99 per cent. less worry. There is ample consumptive demand for all our products to make good profitable competition both at home and abroad, and fictitious values, such as we now continually have, are an undoubted and pernicious evil—not only a curse to the United States, but to the world at large.

It is all very well to talk of "Phil." Armour and Jack Cudahy, and what large-hearted, generous, noble fellows they are. But how about the poor devils of shippers, who had 30,000 hogs on the market and a lot more on the way when "Jack" Cudahy's corner went to pieces? How about the country packers and dealers, who had to suffer enormous shrinkages on their stocks? Many of these have seen their hard-earned savings swept away and their families impoverished—through no fault of their own, but through the insensate greed of a few grabbing speculators. Supply and demand has nothing to do with prices when Phil. Armour, Jack Cudahy, Charlie Wright or Ed. Pardridge want them otherwise.

Statistics may show there is a short crop of hogs, good demand, unprecedentedly low stocks, but if these generous, noble hearted gentlemen want your stock they will hammer prices down till you have not a dollar left and must let go. Then, when they have it all, to keep stocks low and avoid concentration, they will send large quantities of it abroad and sell it to foreigners away below home quotations in order to keep the supply short and the market up. They know where almost every pound of stuff is and just how much squeezing the holder can stand. When he is cleaned out and his pockets turned inside out then they run it up and clean out the consumers, pausing occasionally to wipe out some of the producers who may have bought again some of the stuff they sold too cheaply.

Ordinary gambling only hurts the gamblers and their families, but this constant gambling and the excessive fluctuations in the necessities of life reach every citizen with a family, and are making us more a nation of gamblers than traders. The gamblers control our produce. They must have it at rock bottom and sell at the top notch. The producer and consumer are not a consideration to these jolly fellows, who meet together a few hours daily to play shuttlecock with our bread and bacon and then give a million dollars of conscience money to charities.—National Provisioner.

CONDIMENTS AT THE FAIR.

In other parts of the pavilion are pieces of the cinnamon tree of the proper size for canes, an entire allspice or pimento tree, cut in sections, a collection of wild and cultivated cloves, including some that are about four times the size of those usually sold, the finest bale of cinnamon bark ever put up, ginger from three continents, and several rare spices. In one show case are twenty varieties of black pepper, and in another a larger number of varieties of red peppers. Ginger is shown in the state it is when dug from the ground, and after it has been washed, scraped, torn into shreds and pulverized. Nutmegs are shown as they are gathered from the tree, and as they are after the pulp, mace and shell are removed. A similar showing is made of nearly all the substances that are employed to flavor food. Near the centre of the pavilion are glass jars and packages filled with peppers and spices as they are prepared for the market. It is not likely that as interesting and instructive a display of these articles was ever made before. Keen's mustard, which has been on the market since 1742, is exhibited by Keen, Robinson & Bellville, London, who give sample packages to those who visit their stand. There are also several exhibits of mustard in the French section. Apparently this condiment is not in general use in warm countries, as none of them include it in their exhibits. There is no exhibit of American mustard. Obviously the consumption of olives is increasing very rapidly in this country, as the exhibits of them are numerous and they attract much attention. That caviar and curry will soon become important articles of manufacture and commerce seems almost certain, as persons who go abroad contract a taste for them.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

PROSPECTIVE APPLE CROP.

Mr. M. H. Peterson, of Colborne, Ont., writes as follows to the Montreal Gazette concerning the prospective apple crop: "There is no question but that as compared with last season, Great Britain and the continent have a much larger crop; in fact, all reports thus far to hand confidently assert that their crop is enormous, and that they have all the apples they require until the season is considerably advanced. I have not noticed in any report a shortage in any country in Europe where apples are largely grown, so that they will not require any quantity of apples from this side for some time to come. Regarding the United States the apple crop is in quantity about the same as last year, although many sections that yielded heavily last season are light this season, and on the other hand many sections that were light last season are bearing well this. The crop in Virginia, Maryland and Eastern Pennsylvania seems quite heavy. I found, however, the greatest scarcity in the United States was early summer and fall varieties, and for these there will doubtless be a fair demand. Regarding Nova Scotia the indications are now that the quantity will be somewhat less than last season, although they will have in all probability about 100,000 barrels to export. Regarding Canada, and I refer more particularly to the Province of Ontario, any estimate given at this time is liable to be misleading, but I have quite carefully canvassed the greater part of the apple producing portion of this province, and have been able to find some apples in every section I visited. It is true that in the heavy growing sections of the province such as Huron, Bruce and Grey, the yield this year is considerably smaller than last, but in some other counties there is a perceptibly heavier yield, and it can be safely asserted that apples this season can be found in every apple growing county of the province, and although more scattered than last season, yet when they are gathered the quantity, in my opinion, will be from 30 to 40 per cent. greater than the estimates stated in the current reports. In addition to this the quality of the apples is inferior to last season, and it will cost the dealer more to gather the fruit on account of it being so scattered. Regarding the prospects it must be taken into account that the United States are struggling under quite a serious panic, and while last season they consumed a large quantity of Canadian apples, and while under ordinary circumstances the demand there this season would be nearly as great as last, yet owing to the above panic causing a most alarming depression in the trade, the consumers there will be most conservative in their purchases. Last season speculators received bank accommodation and stored large quantities in cold storage in Chicago, expecting remunerative advances on first cost owing to the World's Fair being held there this year, and this almost created a fictitious market. It is also a fact that small fruits, when the yield is large, somewhat take the place of apples, and this year in the United States the yield of peaches and grapes is unusually large. * * * * The present indications are that Great Britain will not require any quantity of apples for some time, while for winter varieties the late demand will probably be fairly good providing the quality is choice and the quantity not too large. I therefore strongly advise shippers to be most conservative in their buying, both as to price and quality, exercising the most particular care in both grading and packing, and thus avoid the unfortunate results attendant upon last season's operations, and would suggest that an extreme price for the very choicest Canadian winter apples in the orchard would be one dollar per barrel."

PRODUCTION AND CONSUMPTION OF RICE.

During the last fiscal year the importation of rice was a mere trifle less than for the preceding fiscal year. The crop of 1892-3, however, was unprecedentedly large, much too large for the profit of the producers; the prices fell below the cost of production, and rough rice was fed to horses as being cheaper than oats. The rice raisers are making an effort to utilize the Columbian Exposition in cultivating a taste for their grain, and so enlarging the demand for it. There is said to be an immense amount of ground in the south adapted to the culture of rice, but the use of the article in this country is restricted, and taught by painful experience with the last crop, the growers sought to reduce the acreage of the crop now coming to market. But if the crop of this year be no larger than that of two years ago, and estimates to that effect are made, it will be due rather to bad weather than to self-restraint on the part of the planters.

The trade statistics prepared by Mr. T. J. Salvant and published by the "Louisiana Planter and Sugar Manufacturer" report for 1891 a crop of 356,417 barrels of cleaned rice, at 230 pounds per barrel, and for 1892 a crop of 664,139 barrels of cleaned rice at 290 pounds per barrel. Estimates are made that the crop now coming into market will not exceed that of two years ago, but the Louisiana Planter says cautiously that the crop of 1892 so vastly exceeded expectations as to cast doubt upon estimates of the present crop. The estimates alluded to, it says, come from careful and conservative quarters, but it adds, "we are not sufficiently advanced in the season yet to make any safe estimates."

The acreage has been greatly reduced along the Mississippi and the Bayou Lafourche. In many of the parishes the reduction is said to range from a third to a half, but the Jennings "Times" says that "in the rice districts of southwest Louisiana, which produces the bulk of our State's crop, the acreage planted was probably nearly equal, but certainly not in excess of last year." In this section there is little artificial irrigation, and the "Times" says the year has been a very bad one. A wet spring made seeding late. Since then there has not been water enough. At no time has a fourth of the crop been flooded, and now not a tenth is flooded. In many fields, it says, the rice would not make a fourth of a crop if flooded at once. The "Times" is satisfied that, taking Louisiana as a whole, the crop cannot be more than half that of last year.

The rice pagoda at Chicago is serving rice cooked in all forms in an endeavor to popularize its use, and the growers are trying to induce brewers to make a freer use of this grain. But until the consumption can be very much increased, the growers are hoping that they will have no more crops so bountiful as that of 1892.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

THE PRODUCTION OF GOLD.

We directed attention last week, says the "London Economist," to the increased production of gold in South Africa, and the United States. The annual report of the New South Wales Minister for Mines, which we have just received, shows that the output of that colony also has increased, the production of 1892 showing an excess of £10,872 over that of 1891, and being the largest recorded in any year since 1876. And it is the opinion of the Minister that the colony is not realizing the full benefit of its gold mines, and might, "with the requisite knowledge and appliances," considerably increase its output. Further, it has long been a disputed question as to whether or not China produces any material quantity of gold. The United States Director of the Mint used to credit her with an annual production of between £1,000,000 and £2,000,000, but in his last report he stated that, in deference to the criticisms of Dr. Soetbeer and other statisticians, he had ceased to credit China with any gold production. It appears, however, that the director's critics have been mistaken, for in a report to the Foreign Office, issued this week, Mr. Beauclerk, of our legation at Pekin, states that "a large amount of gold comes to Pekin as dust from the washings on the Chinese side of the Amoor River, and partly smuggled across the Russian frontier; it is melted down in Pekin into the shape of small bars of 10 taels weight, about the size of a sponge cake finger biscuit, and has nominally a percentage of 98½ pure gold." He adds that "in Pekin there must be a large amount of hoarded gold, for the officials, who in many cases, make large fortunes out of their places, buy gold bars and secrete them, fearing to put their money into banks, because their superiors would discover its existence and confiscate the whole of it.....When silver is very cheap and gold correspondingly dear, the possessors o[f] these hoards of gold realize their property, and buy in again on the recurrence of a low market." Thus not only does China produce gold, but she has also apparently a considerable stock of the metal which, under favorable conditions, she is ready to part with.

PARCELS POST IN ENGLAND.

In an interesting sketch of the parcels post, the London "Times" says:

"The Act authorizing the parcel post was passed in 1882. But it may well be imagined that time was necessary to mount an entirely new postal service without disorganizing the ordinary mails, and it was not until Aug. 1, 1883, that the post was actually placed at the disposal of the public. The original scale of weights and charges was for a parcel not exceeding 1 pound, 3d.; up to 3 pounds, 6d.; up to 5 pounds, 9d.; and up to 7 pounds, 1s. At 7 pound the post stopped. The maximum dimensions allowed were 3½ feet in length and 6 feet in length and girth combined, and these dimensions have been found throughout to be sufficient to meet the public demands. May 1, 1886, a new scale of weights and charges was issued. This scale, which still obtains, ascended by single instead of double pounds, and thus represented a charge of 3d. for the first pound and 1½d. for each succeeding pound. At the same time the maximum weight was raised to 11 pounds, a parcel of that weight being carried for 18 pence. Compensation was promised for the loss or damage of any parcel in the post up to the sum of £1, while further sums of £5 and £10 might be secured by the payment of 1d. and 2d. respectively. The effect of these changes at once became visible. From June, 1886, onwards the number of parcels increased by more than 20 per cent. over the numbers for the corresponding months of the previous year, and the total number of parcels carried in the year 1886 rose to 31,000,000. In the meantime parcel posts had been established with many colonies and foreign States. The admirably managed postoffice of India and the postoffice of Egypt (organized bs this country) were the first to respond to the invitation of the Postmaster-General, and the interchange of parcels with India, Burmah, Aden and Egypt commenced on July 1, 1885. At the end of another six months Germany and Belgium (forerunners of this country in parcel post enterprise) had entered into similar relations, and from the commencement of 1886 the work of connecting this country with the rest of the world for the purpose of interchanging parcels by post proceeded apace. The next change of importance took place on June 1, 1891, when the system of registration was for the first time extended to inland parcels, together with compensation on a liberal scale. For the ordinary registration fee of 2d. compensation to £5 was promised, while for every additional 1d: another £5 could be secured up to a maximum of £25. At the same time the compensation payable on an unregistered parcel was raised from £1 to £2. Finally on December 1 last a scale of payment rising to £50 (which had previously been applied to the post to India and the West Indies) was adopted, and it is now possible to obtain compensation up to that amount by payment of the registration fee of 2d. and an additional fee of 9d., or 11d. in all. It is not surprising that under the influence of these improvements the number of parcels sent per head of the population has more than doubled since the post was instituted.

So completely has the parcel post now become an adjunct of daily life that it is almost difficult to realize that ten years ago any one wishing to send a parcel even between two centres of population, had no certainty when it would be dispatched, when it would be delivered and how much he would have to pay; while rural districts were for such purposes practically out of reach.

BRUIN AND SURPRISE SOAP.

The heading of this short sketch may look as if it were intended as an advertisement for an article which is so well and favorably known both at home and abroad, but it is written merely as a statement of facts of an extraordinary and entirely inexplicable character, and should such statement add anything to the well known reputation of an invaluable commodity, it will have the virtue of having been given entirely unsolicited.

It is a well known fact that our common black bear has strange fancies and exhibits them in a strange way. Thus he is very fond of kerosene oil. I remember a spot on the Richards Miramichi portage where a jug containing some of this article was broken, at which every bear who trod the road stopped and tore up the ground evidently to enjoy the aroma of the oil which it yielded to his snout and claws; and I once saw at the head of the Clearwater, at Mr. Henry Turnbull's camp, a place in front of the door where Bruin had rolled in the chips in ecstasy enjoying what was to him the agreeable odor of kerosene. When Mr. Turnbull's men left the woods they did not take down the lamp which they had been using all winter, but left it full of oil swinging from a beam. Long after their departure, Bruin entered the camp, took down the lamp with its chimney, without breaking the latter, placed them in the camp yard on the chips and rolled himself between them. The evidence of his having done so was seen not only by myself but by the whole party which accompanied me, and none of us could understand how the chimney had escaped being broken.

More singular, however, than this is the fact that Bruin has evinced so strong an affection for Surprise soap that in its presence even his ravenous appetite has yielded to his desire to become the possessor of it. Early in the present summer, when Mr. Henry Braithwaite was hunting on the head of the Little South West Miramichi where he had a camp, he informed me that he had a number of beaver and other skins and had a good stock of provisions on hand including some sweet cake. He had been for some time absent from this camp, and on his return, as he approached the door, he saw that Bruin had been there. He expected, of course, that the brute had made sad havoc with his supplies, and the reader may consider what his surprise and pleasure were when he found his stock of provisions intact. He had left a cake of Surprise soap wrapped up in a towel and these two were all of the articles which the shaggy thief had appropriated to his own use. A few days after, Mr Braithwaite found his towel, which Bruin had left in the woods, but no trace was left of the soap and no one will ever know what use Bruin has made of the hunter's lost cake of Surprise soap.

WOMEN DRUMMERS.

About a year ago the Sun printed a story about a woman who was a commercial traveler. She was a success in her work. Her name was Adele M. Graef, and she was "in drugs" as they say on the road.

The other day Mrs. Graef called at the Sun office and asked to see the reporter who had interviewed her last year. What she had to say is of interest because it shows the alacrity with which some women take advantage of every opportunity to go into new branches of work, and also the readiness of business men to employ women in competition with men.

"Since that article appeared in the Sun," said Mrs. Graef, "I have traveled all over this country, and everywhere I have found evidence that the story of my work has been read. I couldn't tell you how many women have applied to my own firm. They all said they never thought of that way of earning money until they read the article in the Sun. The firms themselves took up the idea. One that I know right here in New York engaged five women on trial, and some of them are still at work. Another firm in this city sent out a woman who has proved very successful. On the road I met two women traveling for St. Louis firms. Both secured their places as a direct result of the influence of that article.

"These women, you must remember, are all traveling for the same line of goods that I carry, druggists' specialties. There are others in other lines. There is no reason why women should not find commercial traveling a source of good income, but very few of them understand that it is extremely hard work and that a woman who would succeed at it must have a good constitution, a stout heart, and a clear head. Given these requirements, there is no reason why women should not compete with men in this profession, as they have in others, and come off with a good share of the profits and the honors."—N. Y. FALL . . TRADE NUMBER

Circulation 12,000

THE Fall Trade Number of THE CANADIN GROCER, of 1893, is published solely for the benefit of its regular advertisers. It gives them an opportunity to place their fall announcements, in the most attractive manner possible, before many of the retail trade who are not now subscribers to this journal. Twelve thousand copies will be distributed; the largest and most reliable buyers from the Atlantic to the Pacific receiving a copy.

For weeks past we have been hard at work, and our success so far has been immense. We promised our advertisers last year something really good, which was carried out. This year we propose to give the trade something that will surpass anything in this line ever published in America. We never sleep!

SPECIAL—We will make a specialty of binding in price lists, circulars, labels, etc., thereby enabling this large number of circulars or lists to be sent out incorporated in a journal of high reputation, at a minimum price. To send the same out by post in the ordinary way would cost more than double our charge, and with infinitely less probability of being read or preserved for reference.

We would ask as a favor that you let us know at once if you can take space. We will then be able to give you better position and general attention.

The plague of wasps is causing great trouble and considerable expense to grocers in East Kent. One tradesmen in the vicinity of Ashford has had 4½ cwts. of sugar rendered perfectly useless through the pest.

The drillers at North Oxford well have discovered water containing 50 per cent. of salt. This is said by those competent to judge as indicating the presence of oil at a short distance. The well is now 900 feet.

The shipping business in Montreal this year has been remarkably large. The best of it is over now, however, but results show that the tonnage this year has been increased, and the grain exported has been considerably ahead of other years. The apple exports are now commencing, and also promise to show a large increase.

Hop growers of Prince Edward have refused to sell their hops at the prices quoted by local buyers. An agent has been sent to Toronto, where the hops have been disposed of for more than twice what was offered by middlemen.

The bankrupt stock of tobaccos and cigars of W. H. Fewings of St. Louis was, according to the Times, offered for sale in bulk, but twenty-five cents on the dollar was the highest bid, and the stock is being cleared out at private sale.

New wheat has begun to arrive in small quantity at Duluth. Indications are that the crop in the three states of Minnesota and North and South Dakota will be about 100,000,000 bushels, or as large as any year up to 1891, and ahead of the average.

The total shipments of cheese from Montreal to date are 874,618 boxes, against 942,780 for the same period last year, a decrease of 68,162 boxes. The total shipments of butter to date are 27,818 packages, against 34,442 packages for the corresponding time last year, a falling off of 6,624 packages.

The Brazilian Government has removed its censorship over cipher messages to Santos. A cable message containing this information was received at the State Department, Washington, last week, from Minister Conger, who is at Petropolis, a suburb of Rio de Janeiro. Santos is a great coffee shipping port, and the business of American coffee importers has been seriously hampered on account of the prohibition. The censorship was established as a result of the Brazilian revolution, first being applied generally to Brazilian ports and then removed from all places except Santos.

Few young men have made greater progress in recent years than A. C. Mackenzie, general merchant of Kirkfield. Recently he has purchased the fine business of Rod. Mackenzie who we learn, will receive a superior situation in Toronto. Archy now lacks just one thing to make him perfect and happy. He makes business a success; why not matrimony!—Lindsay Warder.

The new freight rates on Manitoba grain went into effect Tuesday last. The tariff has been printed in Winnipeg, but none have as yet been forwarded to the C.P.R. offices here, and the local traffic manager is not yet aware of what the change is. A private despatch, however, states that the new tariff shows a reduction in freight rates of 5 cents per 100 pounds from all points in Manitoba and the North-west to Port Arthur and Fort William. Rates to North Bay remain unchanged.

License Inspector Awde, of Toronto, is just now engaged in a controversy, to be settled in the police court, with the itinerant vendors of coal oil who claims that they are exempt from the provisions of the by-law under which Mr. Awde claims they should pay a license of $20 a year. The coal oil men say they are not hawkers or peddlers because they only deliver oil to their regular customers, but the Inspector thinks if they are not hawkers or peddlers he can fix them as "other persons carrying on petty trades," and is determined, if possible, to collect the $20 license fee.

The improvements mentioned in a U. S. patent relate to the methods in which ammonia is used instead of caustic soda or potash for saponification. The ammonia soaps are obtained either by intermixing fatty acids with aqueous ammonia or by treating neutral fats with ammonia in a closed vessel under a pressure of about 135 pounds. The ammonia soaps resulting in either case are subsequently converted into hard and soft soaps by treatment with sodium or potassium chlorides.

A shopkeeper of Anlaby, England, was charged under the Foods and Drugs Act, with having sold Dutch yeast adulterated 50 per cent with farina. An analyst stated that Dutch yeast was formerly added to by five or ten per cent. of farina, principally made from potato, but now was done away with altogether in the manufacture when it was found pure. He did not think it probable, or even possible, for the defendant to have adulterated the yeast herself. The magistrate remarked that they could not very well punish the Dutchmen. However, they could not help themselves, and they were bound to convict the defendant. He imposed a fine of 2s 6d and costs.—The store-

The reference in last week's GROCER to the effect that J. M. Ansley, who has carried on a book and stationery store at Parry Sound had closed out was not altogether correct. He will still carry on the stationery and wall paper in conjunction with groceries and provisions in his own and childrens' name.

In the last few years the admixture of the durra starch with the wheat starch has been practised on an extensive scale, and this, remarks N. Y. Journal of Commerce, has often been regarded as a fraud. The durra is the fruit of a species of grass which is largely grown in Egypt, Equatorial Africa, India and China. Its culture is not difficult and does not differ greatly from that of maize. A German chemical journal after giving a careful and exhaustive analysis of its constituents concludes that the durra is a cereal very rich in carbohydrates, and contains all the elements necessary for a material used for the manufacture of bread, and forms an article of food more suitable than maize.

Hon. Mackenzie Bowell, who has been appointed to visit Australia for the purpose of conferring with the several colonial Governments on trade matters between Canada and the Australasian colonies and other subjects of interest to the two countries, will leave Ottawa for Vancouver next Wednesday night. He will be absent about three months. In addition to enquiring into trade matters, Mr. Bowell will also look into the possibilities of going on with the long-talked-of Pacific cable scheme. He will call at the Sandwich islands on his way going. If it is not possible to have a conference of the different Governments at a central point, then Mr. Bowell will interview separately the Governments of New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, and South Australia.

Who says the grocers are not the most accommodating men on earth? Last Monday afternoon when the Brookline, Mass., laborers filed into Town Treas. Worthley's office for their week's salary they were one and all paid in the form of $5 and $10 cashier's checks drawn on the First National Bank of Boston and signed by G. M. Snow, cashier of the Brookline National Bank. These laborers wanted to convert these checks (good as gold) into the coin of the realm, and so straitway hied themselves to the nearest grocery and each and all purchased a yeast cake that their checks might be converted into currency. 'Twas a big day for yeast cakes in the wealthiest town in America.—W. E. Grocer.

The current issue of the Beet Sugar Enterprise contains some statistics concerning the consumption of sugar that are worthy of general attention. It is shown that during the year ending June 30, 1893, the United States imported 3,746,961,949 pounds of sugar valued at $116,255,756. Added to the home production of 232,500 tons which we used, this makes a total consumption of 1,905,251 tons. "With a population of 65,000,000," remarks Chicago Grocer, "we consume sixty-five and four-tenths pounds of sugar each per annum, and our aggregate consumption is one-third of the entire sugar production of the world."

The wholesale grocers of Grand Rapids, Mich., have recently made quite an important change in their methods of billing teas. Heretofore the bills have all been made out on four months' time, but commencing early in the present month this was changed by mutual agreement to a basis of sixty days. All teas from that point will hereafter be billed on that basis. Another important change which was inaugurated at the same time, is that all provisions are sold on ten days' time only. This will annul the one per cent. discount for cash, which has heretofore been allowed by many of the houses.—Ex.

A grocer in a town not 1000 miles from Boston sold out some months ago. In conversation with him the other day, he said: "My customers used to find all manner of fault with me. My eggs were bad, they said, and although I knew they were good I made up the loss out of my own pocket. So it was with other articles I sold. Now they come to me and say they wish I would go into business again. They liked me so much better than they do the new fellows—I was so accommodating, etc., etc. I asked them why they didn't say these kind words to me

Frequent complaint is heard among the receivers of rice over the wide line of profit still maintained by retailers. It is claimed that rice costing 2⅞ to 3¼c. per pound is retailed at 5 to 7c. per pound, a margin of over 100 per cent. between the dealer and consumer, and altogether excessive in its way. The cost now ruling is lower than at any time since 1858 and the sale very free, but it seems to be an idea that were the retailer to make his rates lower the demand would be stimulated sufficiently to return quite as full if not even greater aggregate profit. There is no doubt of the excellent food properties of rice and its growing popularity, and with the additional attraction of serving efforts at household economy by its cheapness it probably would have big sale.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

To the agriculturist as well as to the merchant the summary crop reports must prove of value, and the report of 1893, a neatly printed pamphlet of some 58 pages, which has just been issued, proves that great care has been devoted to its compilation. The Secretary of Agriculture in his introductory remarks calls attention to the fact that "hay, our most important crop, promises to be unusually light," but with the root and apple crop there are indications of large yields. Oats, wheat, in which there is a decreased average, barley, rye, buckwheat, beans and peas and Indian corn are about up to the average, and the general outlook may be pronounced good. Reports from all sections of the province have been received and arranged in convenient tables so that the condition of the crops in all localities may be seen at a glance. There are also tables showing the condition of live stock, peculiarities of the season and other data of special value to the farmer. The Government are to be commended for the great interest they are taking in agriculture, and Prof. George Lawson, LL.D., Secretary of Agriculture, is to be congratulated on the thorough manner in which he has performed his work.—Critic, Halifax, N.S.

The cholera being very prevalent in the Mediterranean ports from which large quantities of oranges and lemons are shipped to the United States, and the State Department having instructed our consuls abroad to use every precaution at their various ports to prevent the introduction of cholera into this country, the consul at Palermo has cabled the State Department that cholera is prevalent in Palermo and the contigious district, and asked if it would not be well to stop further shipments of fruit, as the Italians wash their lemons before packing them, and the water used is likely to be infected. The State Department has ordered the consuls to forbid further shipments while the cholera prevails. The order prohibiting the importation of lemons from Italy is not likely to have an appreciable effect on the market, as very few more would arrive this season anyway.—N. E. Grocer.

CHEAPNESS OF THE COCOA NUT.

Cocoa nut, with the exception of rice, says an English paper, is perhaps the greatest of all food products consumed in countries lying 20 degrees north or south of the equator. It is the most delicate, soothing, and healthgiving of all food, but containing such a large percentage of fibre (50 per cent.) there are few who can digest it after the nut has become fully ripe, as it always is when shipped to northern climes. This not only applies to the cocoanut in its natural succulent state, but when it is cut and dried, or desicated, the fibre continues to harden and the natural juices disappear. Manufacturers of desiccated and shredded cocoanut attempt to atone for this by adding glycerine and paraffin. The latter, particularly, is not a food product, and adds greatly to the indigestible character of the woody fibre. To meet all these objections, fibreless cocoanut is now made and condensed to a heavy syrup, canned and sterilized, so as to keep after exposure.

The cocoa-nuts are ground so as to break the juice cells, and then so manipulated as to discharge the milky fibre of all its flavour, oil, and nutriment, presenting a beautiful white cream or true milk of the entire cocoa-nut, which is condensed sugared, and finally canned; and notwithstanding the large percentage of fat commonly contained in the cocoanut, it retains the wonderful affinity for water, and is readily dissolved for drinks and all forms of manipulation in cooking and flavoring, creams, candies, pies, cakes, &c. It is now presented as a digestible food product, a boon alike to invalid and healthy persons, and can be employed in many forms of cooking and flavoring heretofore unknown, The invalid who is seeking carbonaceous or fat producing food can find every nourishment in the fibreless cocoanut that is sought for in cod liver oil, but more readily assimilated and agreeable to the taste. Millions of people feed on cocoanut in the tropics, and its soothing, heat-dispelling properties are universally acknowledged. The natives of Ceylon, by hand manipulation, milk the grated cocoanut and free it from fibre, but it will not keep, and is not concentrated, and it remained for American ingenuity to bring fibreless cocoanut to its present merchandisable condition It may be of interest to know that 3,500,000 acres of this earth are planted with cocoanut trees, and the nut is the staple food product of many millions of people in India, China, and the islands of the sea. Ceylon alone has 500,000 acres planted, 80 trees to the acre, and South America 1,200,000 acres.

A BIG SHOE HOUSE IN TROUBLE.

Cooper & Smith, the well-know boot and shoe manufacturers of Toronto, are in difficulty. It has arisen over the enforcing of the provisions of the will of the elder Mr. Smith, which stipulated that his interest should be withdrawn from the business. This was done gradually under the direction of Mr. J. C. Smith, the most active partner in the firm as it has existed since his father's death. All of the Smith estate had been withdrawn except about $125,000 when recently Mr. James Cooper, thinking it was being taken out too fast called in Messrs. Clarkson & Cross to go over the books. Monday the trustees of the Smith estate issued a writ against the firm for $122,432 and the sheriff was put in possession. On Tuesday writs were issued by Molsons Bank for $23,083, by the Canadian Rubber Co. for $5,008 and by G. Bresse & Co. for $605. Mr. Cooper states that the firm is solvent and that a new partner will be secured to make up for the withdrawal of Smith's money.

VETERAN TEA PLANTS.

A couple of interesting photographs of Japanese tea plants are on view in Perkins, Ince & Co.'s sample rooms. The one shows a plant ten feet high, eighteen feet in breadth, which in spite of the fact that it is one hundred years old and sprung from roots five hundred years old, is still bearing. The other is the stump of a tree grown in Yamashiro district. It is seven hundred years old, and until within a few years ago was bearing.

REMINISCENCES OF A LOBSTER PACKER.

An elderly citizen of Portland, who was one of the first to pack lobsters in Maine, and who began business in 1850, talks very interestingly in regard to the great changes in the business since that early period. In 1850 the lobsters caught in Portland Bay and those brought from Friendship and Bristol were sufficient in quantity, but the business grew, and in 1859 the firm established a large plant further down the coast. But comparatively few traps were necessary then, for every day each trap would catch from 25 to 30 lobsters, and frequently when it was pulled up three or four great savage fellows weighing from 15 to 20 pounds, would be clinging to the outside. Disturbed by the movement of the trap they had seized it and pugnaciously held on. There was no close time then. They packed lobsters there for seventeen summers, and at the end of that time it almost took 25 traps to catch a lobster. They had been packing an average of about 20,000 lobsters a day. All the time they were filling orders from the great firm of Crosse & Blackwell, in London. They sent them annually from 10,000 to 20,000 dozen cans. The English were very fond of the spawn or red roe of lobsters, and one specification was that each can should contain a piece of it. Little girls were employed to remove this from the female lobsters. About 75 to 100 pounds of it were handled daily. Of course, this meant the destruction of possible myriads of lobsters in the future; but the present law is no more effective than the absence of law then. It provides that no female lobsters shall be taken with eggs attached outside, but those with the eggs or roe, inside, are still taken. A law prohibiting the catching of any female lobsters during the proper months (between April and September, perhaps) would alone prevent the rapid annihilation of this delicious shelfish that is going on to-day.

In 1874 the firm was obliged to remove to Nova Scotia in quest of sufficient lobsters. Theirs was the first, or possibly the second plant on that coast, every little cove of which has now a packing establishment. Then they paid 35 cents for 100 pounds. Now the price is $1.50. In so far as he knows our informant was the first to stop the cruel and unnecessary practice of thrusting small pegs of wood into the joint of the lobster's claw to prevent their biting each other when placed in the cars. It was fully twenty years ago that he told his men not to "plug" the lobsters that year. They were placed in the car, and the trifling injury they did to each other was nothing compared to the value of the cans of the meat that had been spoiled by one of those pine plugs being boiled with it. Also the vast time and labor of making the plugs and plugging the lobsters were saved. The plugs were about an inch and a half long, flat on one side, round on the other, and with a sharp point. We learned for the first time, and believe that many who read this will have a similar experience, that lobsters are right and left handed, so to speak. The two long claws on either side of the head are different. The larger has no sharp teeth on the edges, and is used to hold the prey or food, while the smaller has many sharp teeth and is used to tear the food, held by the larger, and carry the fragments to the mouth. These claws are on right and left sides indiscriminately and apparently with no preference either way, as will be seen by examining any pile of lobsters. Our informant says that few people are aware of this fact, that he has seldom known a retail fish dealer that knew of it, and offered to make the experiment at the nearest fish market. We found that the dealer, though he had handled lobsters for years, had never noticed this peculiarity of their claws. A right-handed lobster would be one whose smaller claw, which does the tearing of food and feeding of the mouth, is on the right side, and vice versa.

There is an unusually large catch of lobsters this year; not for many years have the smacks brought so many to this market. Our authority says it is due to the fact that there have been fewer heavy storms along the Nova Scotia coast than for many years. Always during his long experience he has found that more lobsters are caught under such conditions. The more the water is disturbed the more they hide away under the rocks, and vice versa.—Portland Transcript.

CORN AND POTATO CROPS.

The "Farmer's Review," Chicago, says: "The condition of corn has continued to deteriorate. Only one in nine of the correspondents in Illinois report the crop in good condition. Two-ninths report fair. Over 66 per cent. of all the counties report the outlook as very discouraging. In Indiana there has been a great decline in condition, and in only a few counties will there be an average crop. In three-fourths of the counties the crop is estimated at less than 75 per cent. of the normal, and in many cases falls below a half crop. In Ohio not one correspondent reports a good prospect, but about one-third report fair. In the others the condition is from poor to very bad. Michigan reports a better outlook, the conditions being about evenly given at good, fair, poor. In Kentucky half of the correspondents report fair and good, the others poor. Missouri has a good prospect for corn, the condition being good in more than two-thirds of the counties. In Kansas 25 per cent. report good, 35 per cent. fair, the rest poor. Nebraska reports good in 35 per cent. of area, fair in 24 per cent., poor in the rest. Iowa will have a large crop, nearly all counties being reported at fair, good and very good. The general condition is good in Wisconsin and Minnesota and fair in the Dakotas.

Potatoes.—The average condition of the potato crop is poor in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Kansas, Nebraska, Minnesota, Wisconsin and the Dakotas. It is nearly fair in Kentucky and Iowa, good in Missouri.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, Sept. 7, 1893.

GROCERIES.

Trade exhibits considerable improvement this week. This applies generally, although sugars are at the moment receiving the most attention. The Government's decision to prohibit the importation of Sultana raisins has caused an advance in these goods, but it has not as yet created any special demand. Some of the houses here are holding large stocks of the fruit, and there will probably be enough to go round for a while anyhow. With figs, however, it is different, there being none on the market. Coffee has been somewhat erratic outside, but here prices have been steady and unchanged. There is if anything a slightly better feeling in syrups, but molasses is as dull as ever. Japan teas are in good demand, but in other lines there is not a great deal doing. Canned goods remain in much the same condition, although there is a slightly steadier feeling in tomatoes on account of rumor that the crop is not turning out as well as anticipated. Payments are a little slow.

COFFEE.

Locally there is nothing special to note. Business continues to be of the same ordinary character that has been noted for some weeks, the demand being confined to one, two and three bag lots. We quote: Rio, 20 to 21c.; East Indian, 27 to 30c.; South American, 21 to 23c.; Santos, 21 to 22c.; Java, 30 to 32c.; Mocha, 26 to 27c.; Maracaibo, 21 to 23c. The market for Rio coffee in the United States has again shown that condition which has been peculiar to itself for a long time past There were at times quite favorable indications for the jobbing trade and increased movement actually reached in the invoice deal; but just about the time many operators were settling to the conviction that a little animation was at hand, buyers seemed to become indifferent again. On the whole, however, there is rather a better feeling in the market and prices are fractionally higher.

DRIED FRUIT.

A little more life has been given to this market on account of the arrival of the first shipments of Valencia raisins. They have been going out fairly well, but not much business in this respect is usually experienced till further shipments arrive, when lower prices rule. When the new fruit first arrived on the market 7 to 7½c. was the ordinary price, but reports of underselling coming in from this and that traveler some of the houses decided to follow suit and now new fruit can be got at 6½c. Further shipments are expected this week. Trenor & Co. in their Valencia raisin report states that the crop is much shorter than last year and rather unequal in size, but that the quality is good. Last season's fruit is selling at 3½ to 4½c. for offstalk and 6 to 7c. selected. Sultana raisins are about 1c. higher at 6½ to 8c. on account of the order of the Dominion Government prohibiting their importation. There have been some job lots of 100 boxes moving, but there has been no special demand from the retail trade. An enquiry was received from a Montreal jobbing house, and 6c. was quoted in reply but nothing so far has resulted from it. Demand for currants is moderate only, the trade awaiting the arrival of the new crop, which will not, however, arrive here till early in October; 4½ to 5½c. is quoted ordinarily, and 7 to 8c. for fine. Cremidi Bros. of Patras, in their report of Aug. 15, state that since July 15 "the progress of the new crop has been somewhat interfered with by some showers of rain, more or less severe in the various producing districts, but in general of a very slight nature. It is scarcely probable that the small amount of damage caused thereby will at all influence the crop as far as quantity is considered, and as for quality it is generally anticipated that the crop will turn out very good if nothing further interferes with its progress. Cutting is now general in the early districts, viz: Calamata, Filiatra, etc., it has commenced in all the remaining provinces, and with the fine weather prevailing will soon be general everywhere. It must however be remembered that owing to the exceptional delay in the ripening and cutting of the fruit, the entire crop cannot be secured and warehoused before the 15th September, whilst shipments of new crop are expected to open on the 28th inst. Of old fruit about 2,000 T. are still remaining in the country, which however owing to its quality, are only suitable for French markets." The report gives a table showing a comparison of stocks in the various consuming markets on July 1 this year and last year, and the total shows 32,900 tons in 1893 and 34,525 in 1892. In Canada there were 250 tons compared with 100 tons a year ago. France is the only country showing a decrease. Prunes continue dull, with prices unchanged at 7 to 8½c. Dates quiet at 5½ to 6c.

NUTS.

Business remains in much the same uninteresting condition and prices are unchanged. We quote: Brazil nuts 11 to 11½c. a pound; Sicily shelled almonds, 32 to 35c. a pound; soft shelled almonds, 15 to 16c.; peanuts, 13 to 14c. for roasted and 11 to 12½c. for green; cocoa nuts, $5 to $5.50 per sack; Marbot walnuts 11½ to 12c.; pecans 13½ to 16c.

RICE AND SPICES.

Demand for rice is just moderate at 3⅝ to 3¾c. for ordinary and at 5c. for Japan. There is nothing new to note in spices and prices are unchanged. We quote: Whole ginger at 20 to 22c., white pepper at 20 to 28c. and pure black pepper at 14 to 16c.

SUGAR.

There has been some improvement in business, but prices remain much as before. Granulated particularly has been in demand. The price ordinarily quoted is 5½c., but sales are being made as low as $5.40. Yellows can be obtained as low as 4⅜c., but it is a dark article at that price; 4½c. up is the ordinary quotation. Prices unsettled. Representatives of the refineries report a largely increased business with jobbers the past week.

Willett & Grey's Weekly Statistical says: The week -Raws and refined unchanged. Net cash quotations are: Muscavados, 3c.: Centrifugals, 3 50c.; Granulated, 5.09c. Receipts, 12,403 tons. Meltings, 20,000 tons. Total stock in four ports 70,367 tons, against 77,964 tons last week, and 113,549 tons last year. By cable: Stock in Havana and Matanzas, 109,000 tons, against 112,000 tons last week, and 113,246 tons last year. The six principal ports of Cuba give for the week: Receipts, none; exports, 5,000 tons; stock, 159,000 tons, against 164,000 tons last week, and 112,000 tons last year. Total stock in all the principal countries, 654,807 tons, against 735,329 tons at same dates last year. Afloats to the United States from all countries estimated, 40,000 tons, against 60,000 tons last year.

Raws—After the large transactions at the very close of last week the market became extremely dull and has so continue during the present week. Quotations remain unchanged, and both buyers and sellers are indifferent, the latter having stored some Muscovados rather than accept less than quotations. The Cuba market became somewhat unsettled by the last decline, and the previous firmness and indifferance gave way to some realizing at prices even below our quotations. Europe moved down and up again under speculative influences, making it impossible to say what their markets are liable to do for the balance of this campaign, but the prices of both old and new crop beets have nearly approximated in value this week.

REFINED.—Quotations remain steady and unchanged and are likely to remain so as long as the European markets are in their present unsettled condition, as the actual scarcity of desirable raw sugars for export in Europe during the remainder of this campaign makes the coming prices somewhat uncertain, and an advance is, perhaps, as likely to occur as a decline, from the highly speculative condition of these markets. In the meantime meltings have slightly increased, and the demand is more urgent than it has been for a long time.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.

Retailers are still buying scarcely any syrups, but more enquiries from jobbers, particularly those in the country, are heard; 2 to 2½c. is still the idea as to price. Molasses remains dull at 32c. for half-barrels and at 30c. for barrels.

TEA.

Japans continue to occupy the most attention, for medium grades of which the demand is good at from 18 to 20c. Brokers report that local jobbers have been buying a good many teas during the week, principally

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

Trade continues dull. Some fear is expressed that the tomato crop will be short, it being claimed that the vegetables are rotting on the vines. How much truth there is in it cannot be at the moment ascertained; travelers report that the conditions are not favorable. It is also reported that tomato growers are asking higher prices. The demand for tomatoes, corn and peas is small and prices are unchanged, 80 to 85c. still being the ruling figures. There have been good sales of salmon for future delivery, and the trade is now awaiting the in-coming of the new pack. In the way of immediate requirements there is scarcely anything doing; $1.25 to $1.35 is the ruling price for talls, and flats are cleaned out of the market. Demand for lobster is slackening off. It is reported that a good many lobsters in flat tins are being shipped to England, where the demand is brisk, and this is causing a scarcity here. The idea as to price is $1.90 to $2.10 for talls and $2.60 to $2.75 for flats. Meats and sardines are dull and unchanged.

MONTREAL.

The chief trade in canned goods on spot at present is in salmon, several more carloads having been received during the week. The tone is fairly steady on the whole standard brands selling at $1 30 to $1.35, and off lots at $1.25 to $1.27½. Offers of $1 on the coast for round lots have been refused by canners.

MARKETS—Continued.

low grade Congous and medium Japans. We quote as before: Japans (1892-3)—Low grade and common, 15 to 18c.; medium, 18 to 20c.; fine, 20 to 25c.; new Japans, 30 to 32c. for medium and 30 to 35c. for fine. Blacks—Low grade Congous, 14½ to 16½c.; medium, 18 to 23c.; fine, 30 to 45c.; fancy, 60 to 70c.

Latest mail advices from London say that the market has been dull during the past week, and that low grades of all kinds are somewhat cheaper, excepting Ceylons, which have advanced slightly.

Latest cable advices from Shanghai quoted an advance of 2c. per lb. from lowest price of low grade Monings.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The butter market continues active, with prices firm. The export trade is practically nil, but some shipments are being made to British Columbia. Receipts are light and scarcely sufficient for the demand. Jobbers are paying 17 to 18c. for choice tubs, pails and crocks, and they are getting 18 to 20c. For good store packed they are paying 15 to 16c. and selling at 16 to 18c. There seems to be nothing on the market under 16 to 17c. Dairy pound rolls are wanted at 20 to 22c. There is a good demand for creamery pound prints. Jobbers are paying 23c. as a rule for them, and they are getting 24 to 25c. Local demand for creamery tubs is light, but a fair business is being done in a shipping way; jobbers are paying 21 to 22c. and getting 22 to 23c.

Cheese continues to hold its own. The factories are a little higher in their views and asking 9½ to 10c., but jobbers do not seem inclined to pay that price for anything except September make. Jobbers report that business is of a local character at 10c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—There is no change and there is not much doing. Jobbers still quote $1.40 to $1.50 for good hand-picked beans and $1.20 to $1.25 for the medium article.

DRIED APPLES—There is nothing doing and quotations are nominal at 4½ to 5c.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Nominally 8½ to 9c.

EGGS—Receipts are not so heavy, while the demand shows some improvement. Prices are in consequence firmer at 11 to 11½c.

POULTRY—There is quite enough for the demand, which is not large. We quote chickens at 40 to 60c. and ducks at 50 to 65c.

POTATOES—Offerings are liberal and prices easier. Jobbers are paying 65 to 70c. per bag and selling at 80c.

HONEY—Remains much as before with new season's section selling at 15c. per lb.

HOPS—Quiet and unchanged at 12 to 14c. for '92's.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

The market is well supplied with dressed hogs and they are being taken at $8 to $8.25 per cwt. Packers are looking for lower prices. Barrel pork is scarce on this market and prices are firmer. Lard is in good demand for local consumption but there are no outward shipments of any account. We quote compound a little lower. Hams are scarce, some of the packers being in the market as buyers.

BACON—Long clear, 10½ to 10¾c. Smoked backs 12 to 12½c., bellies, 13 to 13½c., rolls 10 to 10½c.

HAMS—In good demand and firm at 13 to 13½c. for smoked.

LARD—PureCanadian 12¾c. in tubs, 13c. in pails and 12½c. in tierces. Compound 9 to 9½c.

BARREL PORK—Canadian heavy mess $20, Canadian short cut $22, shoulder mess $18.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef fores are 4½ to 5c., hindquarters 7½ to 8½c., mutton 6 to 7c., lamb 10 to 12c.

FISH.

The fish market is steadily improving. Supply is quite equal to the demand, which is good. Prices unchanged. We quote: Fresh sea salmon, 16 to 18c.; skinned and boned

GREEN FRUIT.

A good seasonable trade continues to be done. Demand is light for oranges, and lemons are not selling as well as they might, but there is a brisk demand for all kinds of domestic fruit. Grapes are beginning to arrive freely and the demand is good. New lemons are now on the market. We quote as follows: Oranges—Rhodi's, $4.50 to $5 for 160's and 200's; Sorrento's, $4.50 for 200's, $2 50 for ½ boxes; lemons, $3 to $5; new lemons, $6; bananas, $1 to $1.50; Lawton berries, 8 to 10c; peaches, 90 to $1.50 per basket; pears, 60 to 75c. per basket; tomatoes, 25 to 40c. per basket; huckleberries, $1; cucumbers, 20 to 30c. per basket; cabbage, $1.25 to $1.50 per bbl.; watermelons, 18 to 25c. HIDES, SKINS, TALLOW, WOOL.

HIDES—Hides remain unchanged, notwithstanding the fact that buyers predicted an advance at the beginning of the month. Dealers are paying 4c. for No. 1, 3c. for No. 2 and 2c. for No, 3.

SKINS—Are on the rise, having increased 5c. during the week. Lambskins and pelts are now 55c.; calfskins are unchanged at 6c. for No. 1 and 5c. for No. 2.

TALLOW—Buyers are still paying from ½ to 5½c. for select quality.

WOOL—Market appears to be on the move, although a substantial report can not be made as to the prospects for the future, but dealers are not at all discouraged. Prices are unchanged at 17c. for selected combing and 18 to 19c. for clothing wool.

PETROLEUM.

The Petrolia Advertiser, in its weekly review, says: "Crude, $1.07 per barrel; refined 10c. gallon in car lots. The exchange remains in the same apathetic state that has characterized its position of late, and we have nothing of importance to say in consequence. We are still hoping, however, that an agreeable change will shortly occur, and that an upward tendency in values will soon be apparent."

There is no change in the Toronto market either in regard to business or prices. We quote: 5 to 10 bbl. lots, imperial gallons, Toronto; Canadian, 12½ to 13c.; carbon safety, 16½ to 17c.; Canadian water white, 17c.; American water white, 18½ to 19c.; photogene, 22c.

golden tip variety. The tea is put up in ¼, ½ and 1 lb. packages, and 3, 6 and 10 lb. fancy tins. Davidson & Hay are the sole agents for Canada. The tea has a large sale in the United Kingdom.

There must be something in the quality of the standard lines of teas advertised by W. H. Gillard & Co. of Hamilton, viz.: Imperial, Dalu Kolaand Russian Congou. The firm report that their trade in these lines is increasing year by year, and recommend retailers to consult their best interests by getting a sample package of this tea.

W. A. Bradshaw & Go. of the Toronto Soap Co. are not exhibiting at the Industrial Fair this year, but they have some good things on exhibition at their warerooms 48 and 50 Lombard street and invite as many of their friends who may visit Toronto during the fair to call and see them.

Mr. Cameron, one of THE GROCER'S traveling representatives writing from Springhill, Nova Scotia, says: "this is a most thriving town. They have verv extensive coal mines near by. The capacity is 2,700 tons per day. They employ 1,500 men. A very large amount of money was invested this year by the Montreal company on modern appliances. They sink down in one of their mines 2,600 feet. Springhill has a population of 6,000. Its business men are all prosperous and are fully alive to the times."

Consignments of new Ontario hops have been offered this week. On the whole the quality is good, though samples are a little lousy and of a light flavor. Holders are asking from 25 to 30c., but buyers will not listen to these prices. In fact a couple of brewers said to THE GROCER that 15c. was more like the value. It is true that there are considerable quantities of 1892 hops yet on the market, and there are a few British Columbia hops here as well. British Columbia will have a good crop this year, also a considerable quantity of it is expected to come here.

W. H. Gillard & Co. of Hamilton, wish to advise the trade generally that they are oversold on Gillard's new sauce but that they expect a new arrival in about two weeks. The bottle strike in England has interfered with the packing of these goods, but they hope to be able to fill all orders promptly in a short time. In the meantime consumers would do well to get a sample case of Gillard's new pickle, which is pronounced by all users to be far superior to anything sold on the Canadian market.

A very attractive display of rolled oats and other cereal food products is being made at the Toronto Industrial Exhibition this year by E. D. Tillson, Tilsonburg. It stands just east of the entrance to the art gallery in the main building. Mr. Tillson reports a very much increased demand for these goods, and he has recently been compelled to double the capacity of the roller flour mill. He has also placed one of the most practical oatmeal millers in the country in charge of that department. They are devoting special attention to rolled oats, barley and peas for the Canadian trade, the demand for these products having grown rapidly during the past few years, as the medical profession has so strongly recommended them as being the best foods. The exhibit is well worth seeing.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

Montreal, September 8.

GROCERIES.

The week has not been a particularly active one, but trade, for one or two reasons, has shown rather more volume than at the time of our last writing. Labor Day on Monday, being generally observed as a holiday, rather broke up the week, but the fact of the Fair being in progress has led to an influx of country customers, who, although they have not done any heavy buying, have contributed towards a rather increased trade than was to note a week ago. The decline in sugar also referred to by us last week has led to somewhat more buying, and, on the whole, although the market cannot be called active, it certainly presents more life than last week. There is no change of importance in any particular line this week. Sugar has furnished a fair volume of trade, and the demand for new Japan teas is moderately good. The steady feeling in molasses is fully maintained. Some improvement is to note in the position of the coffee market in New York, but the fact has not caused any change on spot for the reason that the local market did not decline materially in sympathy with the fluctuation otuside. Spices are steady, and there is a fair amount of business doing in dried fruit for forward delivery. Payments are generally reported fair, quite a few accounts having been paid up by customers who were in town personally.

SUGAR.

There has been a fair volume of business doing in sugar at the decline noted in our last, but as usual with any easy market, buyers are not disposed to purchase largely, but are taking in moderate quantities. We quote granuiated as before at 5 1-4c. Yellows remain unchanged, running from 4 1-4 to 4 7-8c., the latter price for choice bright stock. Travelers report that stocks in dealers' hands are very light throughout the country, and as soon as the market evinces signs of more steadiness this fact is expected to become potent in a larger volume of business demanded by actual wants.

MOLASSES.

The Barbadoes molasses market is steady under a fair consumptive demand, sales of jobbing lots being reported at 33c. to 34c., and round lots 30 to 31c.

SYRUPS.

Trade in syrups is dull, but prices are steady. In Canadian sales have occurred at 1 5-8 to 2c., while American sells from 18 to 21c. per gallon, with some very choice stock fetching more than the outside figure.

TEA.

The tea market rules moderately active in so far as Japan teas are concerned, and there has been a fair volume of business in these at prices running from 15 to 17c. The stock of this this kind now offering shows very good value as compared with the less desirable qualities of other shipments. In blacks there is the same scarcity of low grades mentioned before, and this class of stock is as a consequence fetching better prices. We quote Japan goods: Common, 12 to 13c.; medium, 15 to 17c.; fine, 18 to 21c.; and finest, 23 to 32c.

COFFEES AND SPICES.

New York advices have indicated a somewhat better feeling in that market in coffee, but the position on spot remains much the same. A lot of Maracaibo sold at 20c. We quote: Jamaica, 16 to 18c.; Maracaibo, 19 to 21c.; Rio, 17 1-2 to 19c.; Java, 24 to 28c.; Mocha, 25 to 28c.

SPICES.

There is a good demand for spices, black pepper being quoted at 6 to 7c. We quote: Common Jamaica ginger, 15 to 16, and finer grades, 18 to 20; pimento, steady, at 16c.; and nutmegs, quiet at 50 to 52 1-2c. to $1.

DRIED FRUIT.

There has been no striking change in the actual spot position of the market for the very good reason that there is little goods here to do business in. Advices from Denia and in stock via British ports indicate a softer feeling. No direct shipments of new fruit are anticipated here until the end of the month and they are not considered to be heavy. For all that lower offers are being received for prime off-stalk at the ship in Denia on the basis of 13s. 9d., but buyers are reluctant. In currants the general expectation is for easier prices also, and quotations for actiual business on spot are nominally unchanged. Quotations over the cable are from 12s. 6d. to 13s. 6d., cost and freight, according to quality, but in spite of these low offers very little is doing.

RICE.

The rice market is unchanged, with business generally quiet.

GREEN FRUIT.

In green fruits a fair business is doing, and prices are unchanged as a general rule. Apples have shown a fair degree of activity, prices ranging from $2 to $3 per barrel. Oranges are in small supply and steady at $5 to $5.50 for Jamaicas. Lemons are fairly active at $3.50 to $4 per box. Receipts of blackberries are small, but demand is light at 8 1-2 to 10c. per box. Peaches are in large receipt but demand is good and prices steady at 75c. to $1.90 per basket or box according to grade. Pineapples are quiet at 12 to 15c. There is a good demand for pears and prices are steady in spite of heavy supplies at $2.50 to $3 in kegs, $1.40 to $2.25 in boxes, and 50 to 75c. in baskets, according to kind and quality. Canadian plums sell at 60 to 65c. per basket, and California $1.25 to $1.50. Grapes are quiet, New York Concords, 70 to 80c. California Muscots $1.25 to $1.40 per basket. Bananas are in large supply and we quote $1 to $1.25 per bunch, as to quality.

BEANS.

The market is precisely the same, with business quiet but prices steady. We quote hand-picked, $1.40 to $1.50 per bushel; ordinary, $1.25 to $1.30, and inferior, 95c. to $1.10.

HONEY

Receipts of honey have been more liberal, and prices are rather easier in consequence, being about 1-2 to 1c. lower than last week. Sales of new comb have transpired at 9 to 11c., as to quality, some fine lots of which selling at 10 1-2 to 11c.

POTATOES.

Potatoes are meeting a good demand, business being fair on the basis of 90c. to $1 per bushel.

TOMATOES.

Tomatoes are coming in freely and selling at 30 to 35c. per bushel basket.

EGGS.

The egg market is quiet. Receipts are somewhat free, but prices are steady at 11 1-2 to 12c.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market is quiet and prices are steady. There is a small movement in lard, while smoked meats are in fair enquiry. We quote: Canadian short cut, per bbl., $21 to $22; mess pork, Western, new, per bbl., $20 to $21; hams, city cured, per lb., 12 to 13c.; lard, Canadian, in pails, 11 to 12c.; bacon, per lb., 12 to 12 1-4c.; lard, common refined, per lb., 9 to 9 1-4c.

CHEESE.

The cheese market presents much the same appearance. Business on spot is not large, and what there is of it is restricted to dealings in Townships, Quebec goods and Northerns, at prices ranging from 9 1-2c. for the best colored offered down to 9 1-8c. for Quebec white. From the country there is very little new, except that the contracting at Brockville the other day is said to have stiffened up salesmen again, who were beginning to feel more like selling. Finest Townships, 9 1-4 to 9 3-8c; finest Quebec colored, 9 1-4 to 9 3-8c.; finest Quebec white, 9 to 9 1-8c.; under grades, 8 3-4c.; cable, white, 46s. 6d.; cable, colored, 47s. 6d.

BUTTER.

Butter remains quiet. Exporters claim that they can do very little on their advices at present. In the country we understand 20 1-2c. was bid for a lot of August creamery, but this can hardly be quoted as a fair market basis. For July goods we heard to-day that 20c. had been shaded, but what the quality of the lot in question was was not mentioned. Holders of Western dairy, as before, ask 16 1-2c., and the demand is slow at that price. Creamery, 20 to 20 1-2c.; Townships, 18 to 19c.; Western dairy, 16 to 17.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

Mr. G. W. Childs, sr., who has been indisposed for the past few days it is expected will be down at his office this week.

Mr. Rose, of Rose & Laflamme, grocery specialties, has returned from England. He was away, as already noted in these columns on business connected with the various lines of specialties which the firm handle.

N. Quintal & Co. are offering standard brands of canned salmon, this week's shipment, at $1.30, just arrived.

Messrs. W. T. Costigan & Co. note $1.05 on the Coast as the most recent quotation on round lots of canned salmon of standard brands.

Cables from Denia state that sellers who have been holding Valencia raisins for higher prices have dropped their quotation to 13s. 6d. F.O.B. at Denia.

The lot of Morand off-stalk Valencia raisins which arrived ex Parisian for Caverhill & Hughes, has proved a good seller at about 7 1-2c.

Packers' agents here manifest a firmer tendency with regard to canned tomatoes, and are now asking 85c., but very little is doing.

Gillespie & Co. give as the most recent quotation on dried currants 11s. cost and freight for Provincials, and 12s. for Filiatrias.

Mr. Geoffrion, of L. Chaput, Son & Co., has just returned from a trip to the World's Fair, and says he enjoyed himself thoroughly.

The cargo of 10,000 bunches of bananas received here Wednesday last was auctioned off at 70 to 80c. per bunch as to quality.

A lot of 400 boxes Messina lemons were received here on Thursday last and were promptly turned over at $3.50 to $4.

The only oranges in the market here at present are Jamaicas, which are held at $5 per box.

Travelers' reports to houses here state that the stocks of sugar in dealers' hands throughout the country are very small, and that the least sign of steadiness in prices would call out an improved demand.

A round lot of old Japan stock was turned over here during the week at a loss of 4c. per lb. as compared with the price possible on it a year ago. It is another case of holding on too long.

The Avlona, with a cargo of raisins and currants, sails from Patras on Thursday or Saturday, and will probably leave Denia on the 15th or 20th, coming direct to Montreal.

Another jolly detachment of grocery men will visit the World's Fair together, leaving on Saturday evening next. The party will consist of the following: Messrs. J. E. Manning, Thos. Gauthier, and G. Laitrille, the well known retail grocers, and Messrs. D. Lapoint, traveler for L. Chaput, Fils & Co., and Wm. Duckworth, traveler for Caverhill, Hughes & Co.

Messrs. Rose & Laflamme have opened their new premises at the corner of Lemoine and McGill streets, one flight up, where they have a handsome sample room for the various lines of specialties which they are handling. They make a specialty of Ram Lal's tea, but in addition will push a lot of other known lines, a list of which we gave some weeks ago. Both Mr. Rose and Mr. Laflamme were formerly with Caverhill, Hughes & Co., and are well known to everyone in the trade throughout Canada.

John McLean, merchant, Teeswater, started for the World's Fair last week. Mr. McLean usually enjoys himself when abroad, and he will no doubt do so on this occasion.

Joseph Kilgour of Mount Forest, is halting between two opinions as to whether he shall or shall not visit the World's Fair. His friends are trying to persuade him in the affirmative, and they are likely to succeed.

John Hayden, who travels in the west for Sloan & Crowther, has returned from a two week's visit to Chicago. At the White City he ran against several of his customers, among whom were John Moffatt, R. Rinker, and William Hay of Kincardine.

DRY GOODS.

MONTREAL MARKET.

Naturally the chief feature of the week in fancy dry goods has been the fall openings of the various millinery houses which commenced last week. The affair lasted the entire week, and the attendance according to all accounts was fully up to the aggregate of former seasons, while the fact that the present week is fair week here it it anticipated will draw another influx of buyers into the city. The display of millinery, flowers, feathers, trimmed trimmed hats, ribbons, laces, etc., was simply superb.

Monday was the fourth, and of course a big day with the dry goods houses, the general report being favorable on the whole. Besides quite a number of customers who came in last week either squared up their balances or promised to do so shortly.

Incidental to the millinery openings of course the general houses benefitted to a certain extent, and the majority of them report visits from out of town buyers who made selections of further fall goods on fall account to those which they had already ordered from travelers.

Cotton goods remain steady, although some dealers predict that they will be able to import American goods soon.

Hodgson, Summer & Co. note that trade is fairly encouraging, but hold that the average so far on fall account is not up to their last year's turnover.

Wm. Agnew & Co. are still sending forward parcels of dress goods on fall account, and they note as good sellers this fall black broche and jaquard dress goods.

The special lines of flannelettes which Messrs. Thebideau Bros. have been offering is evidently considered a bargain, for the firm report good sales of them during the past fortnight.

Jas. Johnston & Co. note several good orders for fancy goods during the week received direct from customers for velvets, silks and irish laces. Returns with them have been fairly satisfactory.

Caverhill, Kissock & Co.'s warerooms presented a busy scene all through last week. They were crowded with customtomers, both country and urban, who were deciding what stocks would be suitable for the fall trade. Mr. Kissock pointed out that the hats this fall would be both large and small, those composed of felt being predominant. Fancy aigrettes and new mercurial wing effects will be en evidence on all hats this fall.

Messrs. Thos. May & Co. had as usual a large and varied assortment of hats, bonnets, ribbons, feathers, etc. In ribbons various shades of greens and browns under equally varied names were pointed out, while in ornaments steel will enter largely into their composition, such as wings, crescents, daggers, etc. Velvets and felts, according to the Messrs. May, will be largely worn, and two-toned and shaded mounts are a novelty for the present season.

Messrs. D. McCall & Co.'s branch house on Notre Dame street offer a full line of novelties. Judging from their stock, fur in the shape of ornaments, small heads, tails, and a combination of both, will be used very much in trimming. Their leading ribbons shown were satins and Terrys, and they anticipate a good demand for two toned goods of all kinds. Colors will range from dark myrtle to light nile green.

Messrs. Lindsay, Richardson & Co., St. Helen street, were showing quite an extensive line of trimmings and ornaments, including designs in feathers and fur, but their anticipation is that the former will be much more popular than the latter. Their stock of feather hat trimmings included ostrich plumes in ombre shades, and fan shaped designs with mercury wings. They report that the present rage in London and Paris is a combination in black and white, and that in these colors feather ornaments in all designs are to obtained. Jet promises to be largely worn also this fall for various trimmings.

TORONTO MARKET.

The past week has been a busy one among the wholesale houses, but buying has certainly been less brisk than usual at the time of the Fall millinery openings. This, under the circumstances, is not a surprise. The Dry Goods Review, the authority in the dry goods trade, has been counselling retailers not to stock heavily, claiming that the decreased exports to the United States and the financial stringency in that country must necessarily cause a small sympathetic lessening of trade in this country. Retailers seem to have taken the warning, and are buying only for present wants. If the financial horizon brightens, buying to the usual extent will be promptly resumed, and the total trade of the season will thus maintain its magnitude.

Another reason may be advanced,and that is that trade in medium weight goods last spring was not brisk. The change from real cold weather to real warm weather was very quick, and people changed at once from flannels to muslins. Dealers will accordingly aim to work off their medium-weight goods in September.

Trade must be said to be about 5 or 6 per cent. less in volume than at the corresponding period of last year, but this amount can easily be recovered if confidence can be restored. In the meantime Canadian dealers are practising a wholesome carefulness.

Millinery has been in good demand. Purchases have been fully up to the average of past seasons in hats and trimmings. In mantling cloths the trade has shown a slight improvement.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling are passing into stock this week another shipment of their famous Grandee collars, and their range is again full in all heights.

Mr. R. Begg, the buyer for John Macdonald & Co.'s woolen department, has returned from the foreign market. He reports very quiet effects in next spring's woolens. Mrs. Begg returned with him, after a visit to Scotland.

John Macdonald & Co. are showing special value in 62-inch damask tabling. This is extra quality, and includes five or six good patterns. A full range of R.B. hollands is in stock; their special numbers are still selling at old prices.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling have a good line of ladies' cashmere gloves to retail at 12 1-2 cents, and a splendid line of gauntlets to retail at 25 cents. These are in blacks and colors, and are decided leaders.

Another line worthy of notice in Gordon, Mackay & Co.'s haberdashery department is that of combs. These are in horn and rubber in the medium and low priced numbers, good styles and the lines that sell. All the other departments from the cellar to the attic have their quota of bargains which are already being picked up by the early visitors.

John Macdonald & Co. have opened up a large shipment of fancy frillings, and will now be able to meet the great demand for these goods. A shipment of velvet shawls and another of crinoline lining are to hand. Many other lines have been replenished this week.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling have a line of ladies' cashmere hose, extra heavy, which can be retailed at 50 cents. Ladies' tan and cardinal cashmere hose are shown to rettail at the same price.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have made special prices in all departments which will hold good until the 16th of the present month. In the men's furnishing and haberdashery departments they offer shirts and drawers, suspenders, men's neckwear, Japanese and brocade silk handkerchiefs, etc., which are well worth the inspection of visiting buyers.

W. R. Brock & Co. have just received a large shipment of men's rubber coats in all the newest shapes, styles and patterns. These comprise Perth and Inverness coats, and coats with sleeves and deep capes; all have sewn seams, buttoned fronts, and the latest improvements. Ladies' waterproof garments are included in the shipment, among

W. R. Brock & Co. appear to have the knack and certainly have the cash to pick up job lines or clear out the stock of manufacturers who are compelled to realize. In their hosiery, glove and men's furnishings department are to be seen two mammoth and solid piles of men's braces that have been purchased far below manufacturing cost. CANNED GOODS GOSSIP.

Beaver cannery, Lulu Island, closed for the season August 26th, having completed a pack of nearly 30,000 cases of salmon and used up all their supply of tin.

The close of the week was characterized by reserved offering of new canned tomatoes and decided firmness in price of the same. Standard 3-lb. Maryland that were recently sold at 90c. f.o.b. 92 1-2c., and Jerseys at 95c., have become scarce.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

The largest shipment of fresh salmon ever made from British Columbia was forwarded to Montreal from Vancouver August 24. The shipment consisted of six cars, aggregating 120,000 pounds, said to be the largest shipment of fresh fish ever handled by any railway on the Continent.

The Western Fisheries Company shipped another car load of salmon on ice to New York per C.P.R. yesterday. The six cars from the Port & Winch Company passed North Bend going east on the express. There are now en route for the Atlantic Coast about 20 cars of fresh salmon, and several more shipments will be made early next week in car load lots to New York and Montreal.—News, Vancouver, Aug. 26.

A late mail from London brings the following: "Reports of the sardine fishing off the coast of France are decidedly favorable, the warm and settled weather this season having been eminently calculated to insure a prosperous time for the fishermen, who have been out in unusually large numbers, as many as from 100 to 300 boats being seen in one day off the seashore at Concarneau, Etel, Port Louis, and Andierne, and the average catch recently has been at the rate of 3,000 sardines per boat. The price varies from 15 francs to 21 francs per 1,000 fish, and eight of these are generally counted to a 1-4-tin of eight ounces. This would imply lower prices, but we do not hear of any reduction having been announced by the French packers, and business throughout is remarkably quiet."

Fresh salmon shipments to New York and other eastern points in car load lots have ceased, owing to the action of the C.P.R. in advancing the rates, or rather demanding freight charges on the ice in which the fish are packed. The company allows four tons of ice free in each car, and has decided to insist on regular freight charges for anything over that amount. Each car contains from 10,000 to 15,000 pounds of fish, and as every pound of fish requires the same weight of ice, the over-charge would so largely increase the cost of the fish laid down in Montreal or New York that the exporters' profit would be wiped out. The Canadian Pacific Railway charges $650 per car to New York, which would appear to be a very satisfactory rate, but the over-charging for ice would bring the cost of transportation up to about $900 per car, a figure simply prohibitory. Therefore, until a more satisfactory arrangement is arrived at, the exporting business will remain at a standstill. The Canadian Pacific Railway Company claims that it cannot afford to carry ice free any more than any commodity. The fish dealers, on the other hand, point to the long cheap hauls of carloads made by the Canadian Pacific Railway under stress of competition.—B. C. Columbian.

The salmon run on the Fraser was very good early last week and the canneries worked to full capacity. The season closes on the 30th, when it is expected that the majority of the canneries will have put up all they made preparations for. The Routenbeck is expected to commence loading this week for Liverpool. The Sirene will come down from Vancouver shortly and load for London, on account of Robert Ward & Co., Ltd. The salmon packing season of 1893 is about at an end on the Fraser river. The run of sockeyes has fallen away, and the catch last night did not average more than a dozen to a boat. A number of canneries, according to a despatch of the 28th, have stopped fishing, and the remainder will shut down for the season within the next two days. It is impossible to get exact returns of the pack to date, but the following is nearly accurate.

	Cases.
Beaver cannery	17,500
Wellington Canning Company	15,000
Delta Canning Company	15,000
Holly cannery	15,000
Laidlaw (Sapperton)	15,000

Ewen's cannery	40,000
Phoenix cannery, Britannia cannery, Wadham's cannery, Canoe Pass cannery, British American cannery and Birrell's cannery	103,700
Lulu Island Canning Company	20,000
Pacific Coast Packing Company	16,000
Imperial Canning Company	16,000
Brunswick Packing Company	16,000
Munn's Sea Island cannery	20,000
Steveston Canning Company	20,000
Canadian Pacific Canning Co.	20,000
Bon Accord cannery	20,000
Terra Nova cannery	15,000
Richmond cannery	16,000
Total	425,200

There is a probability that the total pack may be increased by 25,000 cases before the close of the season. The pack already is the largest ever put up on the Fraser river by about 75,000 cases.—B.C. Commercial Journal, Aug. 29.

THE STORM AND THE RICE CROP.

When Mr. John Talmage, of Dan Talmage's Sons, was asked, according to N. Y. Journal of Commerce, what effect the recent cyclone, which swept over the rice-growing district, would have on the new crop, he replied: "In a letter received here yesterday, Dan Talmage 2nd, resident partner of Dan Talmage's Sons, at Charleston, S.C., says: 'I left Charleston just after cyclone number one, but it must have been a mere babe compared to the ones that followed within the ensuing twenty-four hours. The one I referred to played havoc with freight cars and other moveables, treating them as though they were mere toys. The rice people were full of apprehension, and telegrams being received now show that the worst fears of those to the south of Charleston have been realized. Reports are meagre but highly suggestive and discouraging. All of our planter friends have left for their plantations to look after their crops, and we fear, in some instances in Georgia, are literally gathering up the fragments.

"'Referring to the crop in general, I might say that the losses are undoubtedly universal, but, I hope, greatly differing in degree. I am not disposed to minimize one whit, for it is terrible when it is individually considered. Up to last Sunday noon the rice crop was full of magnificent promises in every respect; more than usual care had been bestowed upon it, as there was a general realization that the high standard must be maintained if any satisfactory monetary outcome was to be secured. The disaster is especially sad, as planters are illy prepared to meet any loss after the unprecedentedly low and unprofitable prices of last season.

"'Being fully acquainted with the lay of the land, I should say that the worst experiences resultant from the storm proper have been along and below the Savannah river; this embraces said river and the Ogeechee, Altamaha and Satilla. So far as these are concerned it would seem as though the destruction must have been very great, and involving the entire crop with scarcely an exception. North of this in South Carolina, along the rivers Ashepoo, Edisto, Cooper, Ashley and Combahee, the direct damage from the storm was probably trifling, but no little loss is likely to accrue because of "salt"; by this I mean that the direction of the wind was contrary to the course of the rivers, causing the water to bank up and become impregnated with the salt of the ocean. As a result of this, banks must have been broken and the flow of water more or less affected. At any earlier period during the growing season this would be fatal, but as the crop is fully grown and pratcically ready for harvest, the damage may not be so serious.

"'Coming farther north, say the Georgetown district, which includes the rivers Santee, Waccamaw, Peedee, and Black, I am inclined to think that there has been little or no damage done. As I said at first, I am not disposed in anywise to underestimate the damage, still am hopeful that in all sections outside of those of Georgia the losses have been insignificant and of small percentage as compared to the crop as a probable entirety. So far as that cut is concerned, it is likely to have been swept away or hopelessly injured; but the bulk of grain is still standing, and this, I apprehend by past experiences, is, in the main, safe. Some will give light yield because of the whipping, but being fully flowed, and well supported it is the better able to stand the buffeting. Estimates of loss as regards storm are mere idle guesses, and until I have fuller details I am indisposed to say other than that it is great, most seriously affecting quantity and quality.'"

THE GROWTH OF TRADE PAPERS.

The Hamilton Herald says: The tendency of the age is towards specialism in most walks of life, and an interesting development of late years has been the increase in the number of trade papers published in Canada. Most of these owe their birth and prosperity to the clear head and untiring energy of J. B. McLean, for many years commercial editor of the Mail, and latterly commercial editor of the Empire and president of the J. B. McLean Publishing Company. He is the proud parent of the Canadian Grocer, Hardware, Books and Notions, Printer and Publisher, and the Dry Goods Review, all excellent and prosperous trade journals. Their growth in public favor has been so steady that Mr. McLean has resigned his position on the Empire to give them more direct supervision. Mr. McLean is a level-headed and popular business man, a bright and capable writer, and a recognized atuhority on questions of finance and commerce.

CASH VS. CREDIT.

During the discussion of the advisability of adopting the cash system, which took place at a recent meeting of the Minneapolis Retail Grocers' Association, a member said he had some customers who paid their bills on the first of the month, and that he preferred such customers to the cash payers, because they bought more goods. There is no doubt that this opinion is quite general in the retail grocery trade, and it is equally certain that it is borne out by the experience of the average trader; in consequence, the spread of the cash system is appreciably retarded. If a dealer can be sure of getting his money from customers who purchase on credit, and if at the same time his sales to such people are larger than they would be if cash was demanded, it is useless to dilate to him upon the merits of the strict cash plan. The advocates of thrifty habits among the poorer classes lay special stress upon this phase of credit-giving, namely, the tendency to purchase extravagantly when the cash is not demanded from the consumer, but that which is an evil for the customer may be a blessing to the merchant. Indiscriminate credit-giving is, however, an evil for both parties to a transaction, and it is this tendency which all prudent merchants should be careful to guard against.—Grocers' Review.
